OPPOSES INCREASE OF FEDERAL AUTHORITY

Jobless Insurance Claims Economic Advantage Lies With Prairies

Better Left to Provinces, Commission is Informed

Points to Danger of Accumulation of Power

VISION NOT BLURRED

'People of Nine Provinces Can be Prosperous' With Prudent Economy

By CARL REINKE
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Toronto, May 2—(CP)—Premier Mitchell F. Hepburn of Ontario today declared his government's emphatic opposition to any enlargement of the powers of Canada's federal government. Any changes should be in the other direction, he said.

"Canadians ought to strengthen the hands of governments closest to the people—or get ready to look back on the past 75 years as merely an interlude of freedom," he told the Rowell Commission, sitting as an enquiry what had happened in Europe "under the iron-hand" of concentrated power.

Provincial Rights

The Premier left no doubt as to his stand of complete maintenance of existing provincial rights.

"Decisively, we are not here to bargain away functions with which we have been entrusted, nor to trade off the resources we are sworn to preserve," he asserted.

Equality between the provinces he held impossible. Living standards as well as present economic conditions varied so widely he considered it absurd to take the provinces to administer their own social services. Finances should be provided by broader provincial taxation and other provincial right to the income tax field, the federal government should be stepping in.

26 DEMOCRATS FOR NOMINATION

Three U. S. Senators Seek Support in Three States

Washington, May 2—(AP)—Twenty-six Democratic members of Congress, some for and some against the Roosevelt administration, made last minute appeals to their party members in four States today for renomination in tomorrow's primary elections.

Three United States Senators and 23 representatives sought party support in Indiana, Alabama, South Dakota and Florida. Failure to win would mean they either would have to run as Independents in the November elections or relinquish hope of another term.

Republicans will hold primaries as the month progresses only two of their House of Representatives seats are involved—those to which representatives Case of South Dakota and Hallock of Indiana seek renomination.

In some districts, the Democratic vote will afford the first test of administration strength since the party's overwhelming victory of 1936. In others, local issues predominate.

Why the Weather?

Garden calendar! Curiously enough there is in this last month of spring in the northern latitudes a promise of cool weather, called the "May freeze". It occurs when a cold mass of Canadian air comes down from the north, but it rarely ever does any damage to crops. In the North sow tender vegetables such as cucumbers, squash, pumpkins, lima beans, and tomatoes in the open. Transplant celery. About every ten days plant corn; also broccoli, Brussels sprouts, kale, eggplant and pepper plants. Tomatoes may be safely set in the end of month in extreme North and earlier farther south. In the South, continue sowing beets, beans and corn for successive crops. Celery seed may be sown for a late crop. Set out sweet potatoes near end of month.

THE WEATHER

Toronto, May 2—(CP)—Synopsis: A deep shallow depression centred over the northwest States, has caused moderate to heavy rain in the west, but it has been fair and a little warmer over the greater part of Ontario. Light to moderate showers have occurred in the Maritimes, also in some parts of Quebec. High pressure extends from Hudson bay southward across the Great Lakes to the northeast States with a fairly deep disturbance off the Labrador coast.

Lake Superior—Fresh to strong east and southeast winds; cloudy tonight and Tuesday with scattered thunderstowers.

Manitoba and Saskatchewan — Showers in easterly winds with occasional rain. Tuesday, partly cloudy and still somewhat unsettled with scattered showers.

Alberta—Strong northwest winds; cloudy and cool with occasional rain. Tuesday, partly cloudy and cool with scattered showers.

BELLEVILLE MAN KILLED BY TRAIN ON C.P. BRIDGE

Frank VanNorman, 32, of 20 King Street is Victim

HAD WEAK HEART

Believed He Suffered Spell on Bridge And Knocked Unconscious

Struck by a train as he was apparently lying helpless on the C. P. R. railway bridge south of Bellefille, Frank VanNorman, 32-year-old King St. resident was found dead early this morning by Charles Sumner, night operator of the tower. It is believed he was killed while collecting railway lamps after sunrise Sunday morning. The lamps, which had been disimembered, as it had been run over by a train, one of the deceased man's feet being found some 20 feet west of the lifeless body. The accident occurred a short distance from a bush, heart, relatives stating they are of the opinion that from a heart attack while crossing the railway bridge and when he fell upon the rails he was knocked unconscious. Two trains passed over the bridge early Sunday morning, an east-bound express and a west-bound freight. VanNorman was to mourn his mother and two small children, William aged nine and Alvina aged six. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles VanNorman, 45 South Jeanne Ave., who were visited on Saturday night, leaving his parents' home about ten o'clock to return to his own home at 20 King St., in this city. Police later found the alleged site the scene of his aunt, Mrs. G. Barriage, St. Paul Street, where he remained until 2:00 a.m. Sunday morning, however.

When summoned at the east-ern entrance to the C. P. R. bridge shortly before 6.00 a.m. we found Mrs. Norman Vannorman and Mrs. The right foot had been severed and the body found 150 feet from some distance west of the body. There was a large gash across his forehead and he also sustained had a fractured skull as well, stated Provincial Constables Bell, who investigated with Constables Ellis and Arnott. Mr. Sumner stated he was a magician by faith.

The late Francis Alexander VanNorman was born in Belleville 32 years ago, his parents being Mr. and Mrs. Charles VanNorman, Belleville man. All his life was passed in this city.

Surviving him are his widow, one young son, William, and one young daughter Alvina, besides his parents, his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Charles VanNorman, Belleville, and one brother, Richard VanNorman, of Belleville.

Nazi Leader Asks Plebiscite Of Germans in Czechoslovakia

Three Men Injured in Fighting Near German Border

SPEECHES FIERY

Prahs, Czechoslovakia, May 2—(AP)—Konrad Henlein, has demanded a plebiscite so that the 3,500,000 German residents of Czechoslovakia may determine their wishes for government.

Using May Day as a springboard, Henlein and his colleagues renewed their demands for political concessions in a burst of oratory in towns through the German sector of the Nation.

There was only one report of disorder, at Troppau near the frontier with Germany, where three men were injured fighting.

Anti-Nazi Germans in some places promised to support the Czechs. At Podmokly, near the German border, Major Josef Kessler—a Social Democrat—asserted "German Democrats in the border region will defend the State, together with the Czechs, with their blood."

Henlein Welcomed

Henlein, speaking in the town, was welcomed with cries of "We greet our Fuehrer" and Nazi salutes. He was surrounded by fiery than some of his lieutenants, such as Rudolf Jung, who declared that "National Socialism knows no compromise" and declared that Germans be substituted for Czechs on the police force.

Another Nazi speaker, Franz Oberlik, said at Oschlora that the time had arrived for the state to "distribute anew the land."

(The demands, made at a congress of the Sudeten German party, included revision of the nation's foreign policy and self-government with Nazi principles for the German minority.)

Hitler Seeks Outlet On Adriatic, Report

Italians Likely to Yield Cool Reception to Policies of Germany Even With Promise of Expansion at Expense of France in Mediterranean

By PAUL-LOUIS BRET
Copyright, 1938,
By The Havas News Agency

London, May 2—(CP-Havas)— If Premier Mussolini follows the course Chancellor Hitler is expected to plot for him during the next few days in Rome, Italy will be placed in a position analagous to that it held in 1914-1915, suspected uncertainly between the Anglo-French entente and Germany, informed quarters believed today.

Hitler's Two Points

Hitler's agenda, it was said, would contain four main points:

1. An outlet for Germany to the Adriatic.

2. Delimitation of zones of influence in the valley of the Danube.

3. Discussion of the proposed four-power pact.

4. A German promise to help Italian expansion in the Mediterranean at French expense, notably by Italian annexation of Tunisia.

Duce a Cool Customer

It is the general expectation here that Hitler will not receive glowings and display of Hitler's visit to Rome, the Duce will prove a somewhat cool customer as far as Hitler's program is concerned. The great military and naval display will be meant to impress Hitler with Italian ability to give emphasis to annex Corsica.

its stand on these points, it was believed.

On the first point, the German demand is certain to meet a frigid reception if couched in the form of territorial claim. It is more likely to be proposed on an economic basis, through the conversion of Trieste into a free port. Political there would regain the trade it has lost since Austria's forcible Austrian business.

Year of Rome

On the second point, concerning "spheres of influence" in the Danube basin, it is expected here how far the Duce is likely to go in giving way before Germany in such regions as Hungary and Yugoslavia, political and economic position has borne some weight for a long time.

Concerning the four-power pact, favored by Rome but opposed by France, there will also be difference of opinion. The source of Germany's opposition is said to be the belief that the U.S.S.R. might eventually be included in the pact.

Encouragement in Mediterranean

In return for Italian compliance with Germany's wishes, according to information here, Germany would promise full support and encouragement to Italian aims in the Mediterranean at the expense of France and would insist, among other things, that the Duce proceed to

ATTY.-GENERAL RELEASES LETTER

Tells Why No Inquiry Will be Allowed of Kingston Police Force

Toronto May 2 (CP)—Attorney-General Conant released today the text of a letter he wrote the Kingston city council refusing its request for a commission inquiry into Kingston police and police commission affairs pending submission of written charges.

At a recent city council meeting a member made statements reflecting on police department and commission efficiency and a resolution was passed asking for an investigation by the Attorney-General's department.

Mayor A. H. Stewart of Kingston received the letter from the Attorney General in which he said: "I am not prepared at this time to accede to your request."

Letter Given.

The letter, addressed to C. C. Wyatt, city clerk, follows:

"I have to acknowledge receipt of your letter of April 21 with the resolution passed by the city council and a letter of investigation into the affairs of the Kingston Police Commission and the Kingston Police Department.

"This would entail the appointment of a commissioner under the Public Enquiries Act. There is nothing in the letter indicating the nature of any specific charge whatever, and I am sure you will realize that before any consideration could be given by me department to the appointment of a Royal Commission to investigate the Police Commission of the City of Kingston, written charges would be required to be submitted.

"Then they would be considered on their merits as to whether the charges would warrant the appointment of a Royal Commission. If these are forwarded, the matter will be given my careful consideration."

The letter was signed by the Attorney-General.

SEIZURES TREBLE PRICE OF DOPE

$1,000,000 Worth Seized in Raids on Pacific Slope

San Francisco, May 2—(AP)— A world-wide drive against smugglers of narcotics has resulted in the seizure of contraband valued up to $1,000,000 on the Pacific slope, it was learned on indisputable authority here today, and has more than trebled the price of dope.

Eight major short-side raids, including one Saturday, and a daring attempt to smuggle $1 this of opium, worth $40,000, from the navy transport Chaumont a month ago, have netted huge narcotics for which dope addicts would have paid more than $500,000.

The major hauls and there were many smaller ones—include the waterfronts, have captured 217 pounds of smoking opium, 12 pounds of morphine, and 54 pounds of heroin.

Heroin is so rare it has jumped from $80 to $200 "wholesale" for a five-grain (1/2 ounce) tin; morphine has skyrocketed from $50 to

THE TRANSRIVER TAKEN TO DOCK

Skipper Says He Was Forced Off Right of Way by Steamer

Kingston, Ont., May 2—(CP)—The Transriver, oil tanker owned by the Imperial Transportation Company Limited, of Montreal, beached Thursday just off Collins Landing was towed to Kingston last night by a sister ship the Transriver. She will be dry docked at the Kingston Shipbuilding Company for repairs as soon as her gas tanks have been flushed. Her stern is believed to be badly damaged. She was three quarters full when beached.

Her arrival at Kingston was the end of a series of dramatic events since her skipper was forced to beach her when it was reported he was forced out of his right of way by an eastbound boat. The Salvage Commodore Pyke Salvage Company of Kingston, was summoned to the scene and many anxious moments were spent in the rescue work as crews of both boats were fearful that in trying to dislodge her the cargo of gasolene might become ignited by friction and explode.

Gasoline floating on the waters while the tanker began to fill with water was reported to have created a serious fire hazard. It was reported also work on the American end of the International Bridge was delayed temporarily until the waters washed away the contaminated oil.

Batchawana is 50 miles north of Sault Ste. Marie on the Lake Superior.

Plea for Diversification By Factory and Field Made by Ontario Premier

'Wheat Important But Not Life And Soul of West'

NOT WELL 'GROUNDED'

Western Canada Called Cause of Own and Others' Misfortune.

By CARL REINKE
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Toronto, May 3—(CP)—The salvance of economic advantage result-ing from confederation lies with the prairies, despite the west's repeated cries that the east has benefitted most, Premier Mitchell F. Hepburn asserted today before the Rowell Commission.

If the west had suffered more than the east there were several explanations, apart from any federal policy, he contended. The claims of the Prairie Provinces for compensation "at our expense" rested on the fallen fortunes of the wheat growers.

'Wheat Not Life of West'

"While wheat is still important, it is not the life and soul of the west," the Ontario Premier said.

The west was working its way out of the crop specialization that came with early settlement and was working into "diversity designed to utilize its resources of men and materials, a diversity of the factory as well as the field," he said.

Western Canada to Blame

As far as the wheat situation was concerned, a committee of the League of Nations had concluded that the over-production of wheat was responsible for the agricultural crisis and that Canada, "in this instance western Canada," was responsible for the greatest absolute and relative' over-production of the world's wheat supply.

Also all the Prairie Provinces are themselves the makers on this "grave of other people's illusions" Premier Hepburn said.

"Not Well Grounded in Theory"

Another reason for the suffering for the west under strain was that western farmers were not well "grounded" in their holdings as western farmers, about one-third of them having been on their farms less than five years, he argued.

"Statistically speaking, the principle of compensation for disability is wasteful and unsound. Transferring accounts to each other 'in terms of money' or any other terms, we would be better employed working together for a greater and safer Canada.

"The spectacle of the northern fifth of continent is the only one in the world possessed by about 11,000,000 people—and nearly 1,000,000 who do not produce wheat—and where there is not a pleading one. In the mood of the times, with people in the old world killing each other off to make elbow room, it may become a tragic spectacle."

Green Fields, Trout Streams And Fair Weather Beckon Pavement-Tired Citizens

Heralded by the brilliant sunshine, which flooded last morning the month of blossoms and green buds was ushered in by hundreds of outdoor enthusiasts yesterday as they left the city streets and sweltering mill and cottage and the trout streams of the district for their week-end diversion.

Even a decided coolness that accompanied lowering thermometer and an overcast sky, with strong gusts that whipped the waters of Lake Quinte into white-capped waves in the afternoon, failed to put an effective damper on the outdoor aspirations of hardy residents.

Motor traffic reached a new seasonal high yesterday as a steady stream of vehicles passed through the city en route for various destinations. Conspicuous among the many cars of varying mileage were noticed American license plates.

On the northern lakes, and along the shores of Prince Edward and Hastings Counties, smoke threading and spiraling into the air denoting the advent of some of the first picnics of the season.

In the early morning hours long before Old Sol peeped over the rain-washed horizon, cars were noted silently creeping out of the city bound for the favorite fishing spots and the angling tackle, with rubber hooks flopping ludicrously about their legs, the adventurous adherents of the rod and line.

Returning yesterday afternoon and evening many good catches were reported, especially in the streams in the eastern part of the district.

Dr. James Bridge. Outstanding among the slides was one shown of a portrait of Wesley, painted by the late J. W. L. Forster, from another portrait. Mr. Forster was a famous Canadian portrait painter who had as his models many outstanding Canadians, among whom are Dr. R. N. Baker, president emeritus of Albert College.

COLLECTS BOUNTY ON LARGE WOLF

Concrete evidence of the story of Sandford Laurence, Marmora resident, that he killed one of the marauders ever caught in the county, was seen in the pelt of the animal brought to the office of County Treasurer James Haggerty, on Saturday, where Laurence collected the $15 bounty paid for wolf-pelts.

Laurence killed the animal after a stiff battle during which he overcame the wolf in canoe while it was swimming in the river near Marmora. Treasurer Haggerty stated today that the pelt which measured well over six feet, was one of the largest ever brought to his office.

MONTH ADDED TO PREVIOUS TERM

Fred Young And Harold Maynes, Escapees, Sentenced in Police Court

Fred Young and Harold Maynes, both of Deseronto, were sentenced to serve three months in the County Jail when they appeared for sentence before Magistrate E. J. Butler, K.C., in today's local police court. Maynes and Young having pleaded guilty to a multiple charge of breaking, entering and theft in a previous court appearance. George Butler, also an alleged accomplice of the above pair, was remanded until he could be faced with the same charges, however, Bailey seeking the services of counsel. Butler will make further enlargement in his particular case.

Young had pleaded guilty to six charges of breaking, entering and theft east of Belleville, while Maynes admitted being implicated in two of the same counts. This pair had been sentenced to serve two months in the Lennox County Jail by Magistrate Butler at Napanee last week after having entered similar charges. Today's sentence of three months is to run concurrently with the term now out at the Napanee. Young and Maynes to serve an additional one month in the Lennox County jail at the expiration of their present term, Magistrate E. C. Donnan, K.C., conducted the prosecution, the accused lads not being represented, however.

TRANSIENT GIVEN 6 MONS. IN JAIL

Aubrey Staley Convicted of Stealing Drape From House

Aubrey Staley, transient, was sentenced to six months in the common jail after being convicted of the theft of a valued curtain drape, stolen from the property of Ernest Bakbree, Everett St., and found in Staley's possession, when he appeared before Magistrate E. J. Butler K. C. in today's police court.

"This man has a bag record behind him," stated the Crown Attorney B. C. Donnan K. C.

Frank Simpson, Belleville, pleaded guilty to charges of theft of a valuable scrap iron and was remanded in custody until Monday for sentence. Simpson's record was read in open court, which included one conviction of robbery with violence.

"This man committing one of these thefts while on bail," pointed out Mr. Donnan.

S. J. Rowell, local barrister appearing for the accused asked for leniency. "This boy is good to his mother and is a good workman when he isn't drinking and I understand he was drinking at the time of these offences," added Mr. Rowell. Sentence was postponed until Friday.

Arthur Meeks, Belleville, who was arrested in Montreal on a warrant issued here last week, appeared charged with assaulting a young girl. The accused was not asked to plead, his case being postponed until May 6th, Meeks being held in custody.

A local motorist perished the city's coffers when pleading guilty to a charge of failing to produce his driver's license. At the same time in many sessions, no intoxication charges were heard during the proceedings.

RAYMOND CARR TRANSFERRED TO HAMILTON

Will Act as Freight Conductor on Hamilton-Sarnia Run

TO RESIGN AS ALD.

Transferred to the Hamilton division of the Canadian National Railways as freight conductor on the run between Hamilton and Sarnia, Alderman Ray Carr of this city left for Hamilton this morning.

The transfer of Alderman several days past, of permanent nature, it is believed, will result in the election of Mr. Carr's Charles Street home and the removal of the family from him to Hamilton in the near future.

Announcement that he would resign his civic office in this year's City Council as Chairman of Labor as well as member of other, was made today by Alderman Carr. Ex-Alderman A. J. Bleecker is expected to fill the aldermanic vacancy according to number of votes at last year's municipal election.

With the removal of Alderman Carr, the local Canadian National Division loses one of its best liked and most colorful employees. Born in Belleville in 1893, Alderman Carr was educated in the city and entered the old Grand Trunk Railway as brakeman in the year 1910. He served in the 38th Battalion, 4th Battery in February, 1915, and proceeded to France with the unit shortly thereafter. Wounded in France in 1917 he was returned to Canada and received his honorable discharge in 1918. He returned to the service with the Grand Trunk Railway and was immediately promoted to freight conductor. He has worked continuously in the Belleville division of the Grand Trunk and Canadian National Railways since. Offering himself as candidate for aldermanic honors last year, Ray Carr received the unqualified support of Belleville voters.

Regret at leaving Belleville and his many friends here was expressed by Alderman Carr on the eve of his departure.

"It is only fair that I tender my resignation from office in City Council, but I do so with the greatest feeling of personal loss," he stated today. "I am willing to stand by every vote I have cast, the only one I cannot fill in my time. Belleville is fortunate in having a man the type of Mayor Bone and his council associates."

S. H. Conservatives Ponder Over Selection Of Four Delegates

At a meeting of the South Hastings Conservative Association held in the Victory Memorial Clubrooms to arrange for the selection of four delegates who are going to attend the coming Federal Conservative Convention named for Ottawa on May 24th, several names were tentatively chosen which will be approved by members at a general meeting scheduled to be held by the local organization on Monday evening, May 16th.

The chair was occupied by Mr. D. Arnold, M.P.P., district president of the South Hastings Association, who pointed out that at the coming Federal convention only four candidates could be named from each riding to represent their constituencies. This has been in effect for many years. It is recalled that at the time the Rt. Hon. R. B. Bennett was chosen as leader at the Winnipeg Convention, this same rule was observed.

South Hastings will thus be organized into four zones. Representatives chosen will come from Belleville, entitled to one; Trenton-one; while one will be chosen from the municipalities of Sidney, Frankford and Thurlow; Tyendinaga, Deseronto, Hungerford and Tweed will also be represented by one delegate.

ENTRANCE GAINED IN THREE HOUSES

Only $14.50 Obtained But All Houses Were Ransacked

Gaining entrance through exactly the same channels, burglars entered three homes in Belleville over the week-end, and stole money being frustrated in a fourth attempt. The burglaries were all committed in the same district on the east hill and entrance effected in the same manner in all three places, however.

The home of Claude Farnham, 287 Albert St., William Cook, 329 Bleecker Ave., Clarence Wolf of Bleecker Ave. entered and ransacked for the burglars failing to gain entrance into the home of William Hunter, 289 Albert St. The heaviest loser was Mr. Farnham, from whose home $14.50 was stolen. Entrance was gained in each case by pushing back the door and unlocking the door.

Shortly before 6:30 a. m. Sunday P. C. Bill Hamilton in the course of his morning round of the city's beat, answered a call to Mr. Cook's home where the kitchen door was found lying on the floor inside of the home. Children's banks were rifled and strippped of their earnings, the marauders completely ransacked the kitchen cupboards and drawers.

Later in the morning Clifford Crooks, 281 Albert St., reported entrance had been made into his home in identically the same manner, the burglars forcing open the latch on the door. Here two flashlights were stolen from the home, the home ransacked but nothing else taken as again cash constituted the chief object of the robbers.

At Mr. Farnham's home, however, the robbers were successful and found $14.50 in a buffet drawer, but stopped short of pocketing that was left in another drawer. P. C. Bill Ewing, investigating the break-in and found a saw-edged knife abandoned on Mr. Farnham's premises. The police officer investigated an unsuccessful attempt to gain entrance into the home of William Hunter, 289 Albert St. Here the robbers failed to force the door, though it was quite evident that the door had been tampered with.

Police are of the opinion that the robberies were committed by persons acquainted with the district, rather than complete strangers.

Obituary

LATE THOMAS A. MILLS (Plainfield)

There was a large attendance of friends present at the funeral of Thomas Albert Mills which took place from his late residence, April 30th, from his late residence in Plainfield to the Union Church, Plainfield where an impressive service was conducted by the pastor, the Rev. F. W. Hall, during the service Mrs. Everson sang "City Four Square."

Interment was made in Glenwood Cemetery, Foxboro, the service at the graveside was conducted by the Rev. J. F. Everson.

The late Mr. Mills was a member of Loyal Orange Order No. 179, Plainfield and the last rites of the Order were conducted at the graveside by Wor. Bros. Robert Rollins, Harry Jeffs and Joseph Gow.

The bearers, who were members of the Orange Order, were as follows: Messrs. C. Marshall, J. W. Mills, Percy Mills, McCreary, F. Hall, H. Clement and F. R. Sullivan.

MRS. GEORGE R. SECKER

After an illness of one month's duration Mrs. George Robert Secker, late residence 86 Gordon Street, Belleville, passed away at the Belleville General Hospital Sunday morning, May 1st.

The late Mrs. Secker, who was in her 32nd. year, was born in Sydney, N.S. Prior to her marriage she was Miss Stella Mary Train, daughter of Mrs. Train, Belleville, and the late John Train. For the past twenty years she was a resident of Belleville and was well esteemed by all who knew her. In religion she was an Anglican and a member of Christ Church.

Surviving her are her husband, Mr. George R. Secker, Belleville; her mother, Mrs. John Train, Belleville; one sister, Mrs. Clifford Locke, Trenton and one brother, Mr. Willard Train, Belleville.

The funeral announcement is made elsewhere in this paper.

MRS. JOHN BLACK (Boulter, Ont.)

After an illness of several months' duration, Mrs. John Black passed away at her home at Boulter, Ont., Saturday, April 30th, 1938.

The late Mrs. Black was in her seventy-third year and had lived all her life in the same neighborhood. She was the daughter of the late William Allison, one of the pioneers of the district, and in 1887 was married to William Adams, who was unfortunately killed in a lumbering accident a few years later. In 1897 she married John Black who survives.

The high esteem in which she was held by the community was evidenced by the very large attendance of friends present at the funeral service, which were held in the Orange Hall at Boulter. Mr. McConkey, of Bancroft, was in charge of the services, both at the church and at the graveside.

Surviving are her husband, two sons Robert David Adams of Belleville, Ont., and William Nelson Black living on the homestead; two sisters, Mrs. Elizabeth Anderson and Mrs. Mary Watson, of Montague Valley; and two brothers, William Allison of Montague Valley and John Allison of Boulter, Ont.

Her death is a distinct loss to the community.

Police Blotter

When local citizens in the downtown area became irritated regarding the practice of riders of motorcycles creating a continued bedlam and disturbance by riding their motor bikes along the main thoroughfares with the cut-outs or mufflers open, local police received several complaints last night. Police announced today that summonses will be issued to subsequent offenders, who persist in making undue disturbances by racing their motorcycle engines within the city limits. There is a city bylaw against such practices and we will enforce it to the letter, unless these riders co-operate to the fullest measure. Citizens do not have to be annoyed by these unnecessary noises," added police officials today.

A total of 23 transients, somewhat of a falling off from previous weeks, were given shelter at the police station over Saturday and Sunday, 12 the former and 10 last night. No arrests were necessary in the city since Friday, however.

Arthur Meeks, Belleville, who was sought by local authorities for questioning relative to a serious matter, was brought back from Montreal yesterday. Meeks police announced today that summonses will be issued to subsequent offenders, who persist in making undue disturbances by racing their motorcycle engines within the city limits. There is a city bylaw against such practices and we will enforce it to the letter, unless these riders co-operate to the fullest measure. tary camps. Merchants refused deliveries because their trucks could not move through streets choked by soldiers, police and tourists.

Persons of questionable record were jailed or ordered from Rome, Florence and Naples during Hitler's six-day visit. Unofficial estimates fixed the number involved at between 8,000 and 10,000.

All Papers Checked

Soldiers stopped automobiles entering or leaving Rome and checked identification papers. Police doubled their regular guard along the railway from Brenner Pass to Rome, the route of the Hitler train.

There is in the southern Tyrol an especial air of excitement, and its predominantly German population is prepared to turn out at dawn tomorrow when the Fuehrer's train rolls from Austrian Germany onto Italian soil.

Italy received this Tyrol region from Austria as part of the 1918 peace settlement. Otherwise it would have become German when Hitler annexed the rest of Austria March 12.

There will begin tomorrow the main conferences designed to show that Rome and Berlin still are good friends, despite the annexation and the new Italian accord with Britain.

History Making Trip

Berlin, May 2—(AP)—Chancellor Hitler departed by special train early this morning for Italy, where he will confer with Premier Mussolini and take another step in their close friendship in the light of Europe's changing political affiliations.

"A history-making trip," the newspapers put it, and Berlin's crowds turned out to cheer and wave Italian and German flags along the Fuehrer's route from the chancellery to Anhalten station.

There have been three outstanding developments in the dictators met at Munich Sept. 29, and these may well determine the nature of their future collaboration:

First is Hitler's bringing of Austria into greater Germany on March 12, putting German troops at Brenner Pass on Mussolini's back doorstep.

Second is Mussolini's entrance into an agreement with Great Britain on April 16.

Third is the understanding of last Thursday by the British and French Prime Ministers for increased cooperation.

Cloaked in Splendor

The visit to Italy will be cloaked in splendor, and outwardly will be Premier Mussolini's return of the hospitality shown him on his visit to Germany last fall. Official informants say no new treaties will be announced, but the make-up of the delegation accompanying the Fuehrer indicates the visit will be more than purely "representative."

NEURITIS

"Kept from work for 3 weeks"

Anyone who has experienced the pain of Neuritis knows only too well how this ailment will put a shoulder, arm or leg out of action. Many find relief when the aching pain is attacked with Minard's Liniment, bringing up and loosening your joints. Mrs. W. F. Hall writes:

"My left arm was numb from wrist to shoulder for weeks with Neuritis. I went to one man, and he gave me oil, but it was no use. I then went to another, he gave me ointment, that was no use. Then I tried a bottle of Pyramo Pain, and within a few days, I was ready for work."

This is only one of the many cases where the regular use of Pyramo Salt has helped. When neuritis sufferers find that this ailment is caused by excessive acidity, they down to the rescue. A 25c dose of Pyramo Salt Pills will give relief. Pyramo is a combination of Sodium, Potassium and the elements of Lithia—"Salts of the Earth" similar to those that give famous Mineral Springs their beneficial properties. They work through your system, assisting in breaking up the painful Uric Acid crystals, driving out poisons, and aiding the liver to fuller action. Large bottle of Pyramo Salt Pills at all druggists.

bomb throwers, after an attempt to blast a truck loaded with Japanese soldiers, and information that more than 2,000 terrorists had infiltrated the city, aroused police apprehensions.

One report said 5,000 special agents of the National Salvation Association and other patriotic organizations were in Shanghai and the surrounding area under orders to conduct a terrorist campaign against the Japanese.

Pierce fighting continued on the Shantung front, where Japan has been struggling to gain control of Central China. Latest dispatches indicated the new Japanese offensive against Suchow and the Lunghai railway has been blocked, but neither side claimed important successes.

(Reports from Peiping said foreign sources there confirmed the fact the Japanese lost 21 planes in their raid on Hankow, temporary Chinese capital, last Friday. The Chinese lost six or eight planes.)

"Paradise For Three" and "Espionage"

One of the most amusing of this season's comedy dramas comes to the Belle Theatre Tuesday and Wednesday matinee daily, in "Paradise For Three."

The novel plot is carried out to perfection by the excellent performances of Frank Morgan, Robert Young, Mary Astor, Edna May Oliver, Florence Rice, Reginald Owen, Henry Hull and Herman Bing. Morgan portrays the rich capitalist who wins a contest and as a reward is sent to an Alpine resort for two weeks. To enjoy his vacation he masquerades as a poor man, making his valet, Owen, act as a man of wealth. Morgan's daughter, Miss Rice, and his housekeeper, Miss Oliver find out about his plan and inform the hotel to play up to his whim, but to treat him well. They mistake him for another contest winner, Young, who is actually an unemployed man. From then on things begin to happen especially when Miss Astor, a woman of the world, sets out to trap Morgan, having also learned the truth about him.

Laugh and Thrill Romance.

Edmund Lowe and Madge Evans are the leading players in "Espionage", a new and intriguing film announced as the associate feature on Tuesday and Wednesday, produced by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer.

The story combines the blend of international intrigue and romance that is making headlines throughout the world today. A munitions manufacturer vanishes and two opposing forces are assigned to find him.

One, a girl, the other a man, they meet on a train speeding away from Paris, each unaware that the other is a rival in the search. The millionaire is aboard and the story awaits the better of the two searchers.

Before they close down on the case, the pair are in love, drawn together in the rush of one of the dangerous adventure.

Lowe and Miss Evans play their roles effectively and a supporting cast provides first rate background. It includes Paul Lukas, Ketti Gallian, Sidney Gallagher, Frank Reicher, William Gilbert, Mitchell and Charles Trowbridge. Kurt Newman's direction is clever and fast-paced.

The picture presents a timely theme in novel fashion and every member of the cast as well as the executives, merit the praise "Espionage" is receiving everywhere. The Belle News of the Day will be exhibited on the same program. The last complete show begins at 8.20 p.m.

"Hawaii Calls" Pleasing.

Qualifying as one of the most thoroughly entertaining motion pictures of the season, "Hawaii Calls", Bobby Breen's latest musical starring vehicle, opened Saturday at the Belle Theatre, and will remain on screen play-bay all the elements of a successful film, and combines them in a manner that will prove a delight to the theatregoer.

Bobby has never before been so happily cast. He appears as a former San Francisco beachcomb. who joins his little Hawaiian newsboy friend in a trip to Honolulu, as a stowaway. The young star is completely natural in the role, and gives by far the finest performance of his career. An especially enjoyable feature of the picture is Bobby's singing of five songs and being the actor fully justifies his reputation as the possessor of the screen's sweetest singing voice.

Comedian Ned Sparks, in the most important role he has had, is delightful as the ship's musician who befriends Bobby. Irvin S. Cobb makes a little gem of his role as a gruff, kindly sea captain. Warren Hull and Gloria Holden are outstanding as the romantic interest to the story. Accordingly "Hawaii Calls" is a noteworthy contribution to the screen. The Belle Latest World News, Events, "Lonesome Clowns", and for the last times at 7 and 9 p.m.

2 CHILDREN BURN.

nine Lacasse and her three-months-old sister, Alice, daughters of Rene Lacasse 24, who were staying at the Lacasse home.

Rene Lacasse received serious burns to his hands in an attempt to rescue his children from the burning house, located on Lyndale Avenue in the west end of the city. Three firemen, District Chief Langdon, Lieut. P. D. Dunnigan and Fireman Emile Dore, suffered burns to their hands and faces.

Unaware her children were dead, Mrs. Lacasse lay in hospital with little hope held for her recovery. She took suddenly ill last night while playing cards with the family.

Awakened by Smoke

Awakened by heat and smoke in the rear bedroom where he was sleeping near his children, Rene Lacasse aroused other occupants of the home and went back to the bedroom in an attempt to save his two daughters. Dense smoke and flames forced him back.

Mrs. Nelson Lacasse and her three daughters, Alice 18, Lucille 19, and Jeanette, 12, awakened by Rene's shouts, had no difficulty in getting down the front stairs from the upper floor of the two-storey, frame building.

Former Alderman Lacasse, who had been sleeping in one of the front bedrooms, said he had got up early and made a fire in the kitchen stove. Stepping into the woodshed to cut more wood, he heard someone yelling "fire."

Believing it came from the street, he ran around the side of the house and discovered it was his own home that was burning.

Many A Man

Has escaped a nervous breakdown

It is now becoming generally known, by nearly every family, that one person to another, that scores of nervous, worried business men attribute their escape from nervous collapse to the use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food.

Business cares and worries of recent years have made men old before their time. Almost daily you read of prominent men dropping out in the very prime of life.

Others have survived, because they learned in time of a way to restore nerve force to the body. As a result, weak, halting vital organs sumed their natural functions. Rest and sleep have been made possible, and mind and body have been restored to normal. If you find yourself slipping ask your friends about Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. Almost every family there is some one who has profited by use of this modern restorative.

MAY DAY

May Day has come and gone, evidently quite satisfied that citizens have gone far towards the cleaning of their premises as required by the Board of Health.

In this part of Canada and of the world there is little of an unusual character to observe, except the general sense of freedom indicated everywhere.

As May Day fell on Sunday there were fewer meetings in this province of the usual May Day character. Many thousands took to the roads with their motocars.

In Europe there were some disorders but in some countries it is to be noted that the dictatorship allows no gatherings where there can be voiced opposition to the ruling body. Only in democratic lands may the voice be raised.

In Poland there was clash between Socialists and the new Nationalists known as "Falanga" (Fascists). One man was killed and some twenty wounded in this clash.

Russia observed with a monster gathering but there was no disturbance.

There were a few meetings in Canada but there was general quiet. Canadian gatherings on this day were up to the extremes as in older countries.

BRITAIN AT THE HELM

A United States view on the rise of British leadership in the present turmoil in Europe is presented in the New York Times:

"The decisions taken in London are momentous. Seven weeks ago we were saying that the annexation of Austria, the first drive of Germany beyond her own borders, rang the curtain on the Europe the Great War created and trumpeted the overture for the next war. Whether the struggle to come was to be a series of bloodless invasions or a grand-scale test of military strength, the capture of Austria seemed to be the final blow to the post-war system, with the advantages transferred from the side of the victors to the side of the vanquished.

"Today the emphasis is changed. It is far more than a military alliance that the representatives of the British and French Governments have ratified in the most decisive meeting they have held since Versailles. It is literally a military union. In war they are agreed to act as one nation, under a single supreme command, pooling all their resources and treating the superior land forces of France, the superior naval forces of Britain and their combined air forces as component parts of one great military machine. In the same manner, moreover, they have agreed to unite as from today, in preparations for war. What they have decided, in a word, is to confront the New Reich of 75,000,000 people with an armed community of more than 80,000,000, possessing in addition greater material resources and reserves and pledged to coordinate all these resources in the defense of their common interests.

"This is the real finale to a system and an epoch. Germany has insisted that vague collective agreements must give way to specific bilateral agreements. Well, she has won her point. Here is a bilateral accord as specific and powerful as any ever made by two sovereign nations. The return to the alliance and power-politics conception of international relations is complete.

"Important as this change is, as an old-fashioned but potent guarantee of European peace, the other change underlined and clarified by the conversations in London is even more important. With rapid strides since the Austrian coup the British Government has moved to take command of the European situation. Now British leadership is unquestioned. In London France has coordinated not only her military machine but her foreign policy with that of England. The French have given in on practically every point—on closing her frontier in Spain, on reconciliation with Italy and recognition of the Ethiopian conquest, on Czechoslovakia; for while it was agreed that a German economic stranglehold on the Czechs and other threatened Central European countries should be countered by the purchases of joint supplies of war material, it is noteworthy that the purchases are to be made by France and not by England.

"France has given up everything for security, and since security was the sole aim of her alliances in Eastern Europe, she may be said to have won what she wants most. In exchange for military guarantees for French security, which means their security also, the British will dictate the external policy of France. And this means that the direction of European affairs is turned over in the present crisis to 'the realism" of Mr. Chamberlain.

FRESH FISH HAS LONG BEEN A FAMILIAR SIGN; but "Fresher Fish" could well have been the slogan of a vendor on Belleville market Saturday. This vendor displayed freshly caught carp, so fresh that they were still breathing, also eels which had not stopped wriggling. No need to question if those fish were fresh, they couldn't have been any fresher. That was just one of the many interesting sights on Belleville market on a busy market day. On sale are a bewildering variety of things, including pup dogs, rabbits, canaries, muskrats all skinned and ready for the pan, maple sugar and syrup, chicken pies, cakes and cookies, farm baked homemade bread, little chicks, little and big pigs, sausages, head cheese, beef by the quarter, all kind of vegetables and fruit, honey and doilies, various specimens of the work of nimble fingers and needles—in short a variety to say the least astonishing. In the butter market the folks are not the least interesting, there is chaff and sellers and here is witnessed brilliant clashes of wits between buyers and sellers, in which the sellers seldom come off second best. A visit to Belleville market is always interesting, entertaining and instructive.

A HOME AWAY FROM HOME is the proud boast of some hotels, but a Belleville citizen and his wife visiting Washington, D.C., recently were surprised and pleased to be met with an especially warm welcome at the hotel where they registered. The Hotel Willard, one of Washington's finest hotels, for years headquarters of Senators and Congressmen, and where it is reputed much of the legislation enacted for the United States had its preliminary shaping. The Belleville couple upon registering at The Williard were met by the Assistant Manager of the hotel, who greeted them as an old Belleville boy. Said he, I was brought up and went to school in Belleville and it is still the City Of Home Town to me. He looked after the comfort of the guests from Belleville and made their stay much more pleasant than it ordinarily would have been. The Assistant Manager of the Hotel Willard, that historic hostelry at Washington, D.C., which has entertained many Presidents and visiting potentates and dignitaries from many parts of the world is John Lynch, whose father was P. P. Lynch and whose mother now lives in Toronto with one sister living in Northern Ontario. Two aunts live in Belleville, Miss Helena and Miss Margaret, Victoria Avenue, with whom Mr. Lynch made his home while attending school here. Leaving school he went to the United States where he entered the hotel business. When the Great War broke out he came back to Canada and enlisted at Toronto, going overseas with a battery. After the war he returned to the United States, resuming his vocation as hotel executive, and now occupies the responsible position of Assistant Manager of one of the finest and most important hotels in the United States, The Hotel Williard, at the nation's capitol.

LOUISIANA IS THE BIGGEST STRAWBERRY GROWER, last year's crop was 3,500 carloads, Oregon 2,500, Tennessee 2,000. Louisiana strawberry growers have a union with 10,000 members which protects the price level. One of the first united actions of the Strawberry Union was to provide that chain stores could not use Louisiana strawberries as "loss leaders" to coax customers into their stores. Southern strawberries cost $1.50 a crate to grow, 17c more for packing, inspection and auctioning. They are now selling for $2.20.

LILY, A TAME TIGER IN THE RINGLING CIRCUS, created a scene at a recent performance. While being led around the Hippodrome Track on a leash the beast broke away from its trainer, and strange to say, leaped upon the back of a visiting circus man. The trainer dragged her from her victim but Lilly was out to have a good time, apparently, and, continued to prove among the horde of performers and attaches, while the paying customers tried to climb higher or find a near exit. Lilly stormed Walt Disney's Seven Dwarfs and one of them cracked Lily over the head with his stick. Lily wasn't having any of that and started for the dwarf, a midget taking the part, when a showman picked the dwarf up and put him high up out of danger. The trainer finally coaxed Lily back to her cage and the incident was over.

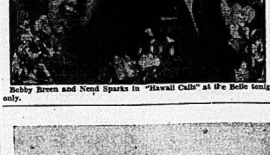
There Must Be Blood Pressure to Live

When an individual talks about his blood pressure, he only discusses one part of it—the systolic pressure—because it is the systolic pressure that is the highest blood pressure — systolic and diastolic. It is the systolic—highest of the blood that is capable of causing strokes, heart and kidney disease.

The systolic pressure is taken when the heart makes its first beat, that is when it pumps the blood into the blood vessels. This requires a great amount of pressure to force the blood into the small smaller vessels, and these into two smaller vessels until these little vessels are the branches of a tree with each branch dividing into little twigs and these into smaller twigs until every part of the body is reached by these little blood vessels, while the elastic walls of all these vessels open up or enlarge to receive the blood, nevertheless these vessels make quite a large amount of resistance to the blood, and the poor heart has to pump hard to get blood to every part. In fact, it has to pump hard enough not only to take the blood to the farthest part but to bring it back to the heart again.

The diastolic pressure is the pressure of the blood in the bloodvessels between beats, when heart is not pumping and this is so that the diastolic pressure is naturally lower than the systolic.



Now, the diastolic, being the pressure between the beats—when heart is not pumping—the blood—the normal pressure of the blood in the bloodvessels. If the blood vessels have lost some of their elasticity, or if the blood vessels are tensed for any reason, worry, excitement, overload of food—then even when the heart is not pumping—blood—diastolic pressure—the pressure will be higher than the normal diastolic pressure. Then when heart is pumping—systolic pressure—under these same tensing conditions, the pressure will be higher than normal.

Physicians therefore place more importance on the diastolic pressure because it tells the actual condition of the blood vessels when there is no pressure from the heart muscle.

The thought then is that there must be pressure behind the blood to enable it to reach the most distant parts. If the walls of the blood vessels have lost some of their elasticity or are tensed because of worry, excitement or too much food, then the pressure will be higher and the heart will have to pump harder to get the blood through these tighter blood vessels.

PASSENGERS RESCUED FROM STRICKEN AIRLINER

Made from the rescue steamer Cavina, this picture shows the crew being taken off the Pan American on a flight from Cuba. The craft was removed flying boat that was forced down 30 miles from Kingston, Jamaica, while sank after the sixteen persons, passengers and crew, and their baggage, were rescued.

CREDIT

It belongs to you—the community does not own it.

BANKS live by lending.

That is their major source of income, their principal business. They are always on the lookout for good risks. They have to avoid poor ones.

Let us give an instance. Suppose, say, a man seeking a bank loan, is known to the banker as having no business capacity to carry out the purposes for which he wants the money. He is not credit-worthy—he has accumulated nothing, has no stake.

The banker, anxious though he is to make loans, knows there is not the remotest chance that this man would succeed in his purpose and tells the would-be borrower that the bank cannot take the risk.

But this man has a friend—a man who has accumulated something and has a stake. Hearing of his neighbour's difficulty, he goes to the bank and urges that the loan be made.

"Whose money would you have me lend him?" asks the manager. "You have a deposit here. Would you lend your own money?"

"Not your life," retorts Mr. Blank. "Lend him the bank's money."

The bank manager, as custodian of this very man's own money, then takes pains to point out that what the substantial citizen is really expecting, is that the bank should make a loan which the citizen's own common sense and caution would compel him to refuse.

Before such a man leaves the bank he usually agrees that he had expected the bank to lend where he himself would be unwilling. Banks have no magic source of credit.

Here is the core of the whole business of a bank's extending credit. Because of the bank's responsibility to its depositors it can make loans only where repayment is reasonably certain.

To obtain a loan from a bank a borrower must have credit of his own. Seldom, if ever, is his credit spendable. You cannot spend cattle, goods in process of manufacture, uncaught fish, uncut timber, or wheat in the granary.

The bank has credit too. Millions of small depositors have, in effect, lent it their money. A percentage of this money, based on bank experience of withdrawals, is kept in cash, some more in items of a cash nature, more still in assets quickly convertible into cash, and more in safe investments such as marketable government and other bonds. Based upon this, the bank can extend credit.

Because people have confidence in bank credit, and because every promise-to-pay of a chartered bank is redeemable in cash, on demand, or on a fixed date, this form of credit is spendable.

In the case of the borrower, credit is the personal possession or attribute of the individual you yourself, if you are the borrower — in character, goods, possessions, integrity, ability and willingness to repay.

Your credit is not social, in the sense of belonging to the community. When you have credit, it is your own just as your money in a savings account is your own. The people at large have no conceivable claim upon it.

Who exchanges non-spendable credit for credit that can be spent?

The answer for all practical purposes is this: The man who owns and therefore controls his credit takes his problem to the bank does not go to him. He goes to the bank and asks it to enable him to obtain credit in spendable form in exchange for his own unspendable credit. The bank does so; and charges him a rental in the form of interest, until he repays.

What happens when he secures this credit in spendable form?

He spends it.

He pays the wages of labour, the cost of raw materials and of transportation, the cost of seed, of feed for hogs and cattle, or the expenses of cultivating and harvesting; of buying bait or catching fish; of cutting trees or transporting goods.

The whole banking process is made possible by the concentration and cautious handling of other people's money.

Banks simply dare not risk the loss which would be jeopardine the safety of their depositors' funds, by making loans to people who have neither character nor credit—nor by making loans even to those who have both, without taking every reasonable precaution to ensure repayment.

TORONTO STOCKS CLOSE

Toronto, May 2—(CP)—Toronto exchange listings opened the new month with a moderate decline, responding to weakness of the New York Board and a cautious buying demand. Trading was dull almost throughout the session and little more than 50,000 shares changed hands in the session. All indices were lower at the close with the industrials and the base metals registering the widest declines.

Lower metal prices in London and a weaker New York lone were factors in depressing the senior base metals by fractions to a point or more. Nickel, Smelters, Noranda and Hudson Bay were off. Siltrens were slow, except Eldorado which was active and weak.

Prices were down for the steels, beverages, foods and utilities. Calfary-Bidgood, however, were weak spots in the western oil list.

WALL STREET CLOSE

New York, May 2 (AP)—Stocks shifted to the rear in today's market at a pace that hardly kept the ticker tape moving.

Losses running to two or more points in the morning were recovered near the final hour but without any broadening of activity. Transfers were about 400,000 shares.

Board Room Gossip

As supplied to Bigger and Crawford by Financial Services

Board room habitues, the speculative-minded traders, investors and the chart readers are still looking for the one which will indicate that stock levels have seen their lows and that any movement to succeed the drifting of the recent past will be an upward trend. The poorer first quarter showing were more or less expected, some results being worse than anticipated while others were better than was generally led one to expect. Interest in President Roosevelt's spending programme as a force for betterment has petered out for the time being. The offer of big business to co-operate with the Washington administration in revising conditions, and the president's whole-hearted acceptance of the offer, awaits a recent concrete plan. MINOR INCIDENTS ONLY ON MAY DAY

Orderly Parades Held in All Part of The Dominion

By the Canadian Press

Canadian labor, a week end of orderly parades and peaceful demonstrations ended, returned to work today after traditional May Day observances that marking the 52nd anniversary of the calling of a general strike by the American Federation of Labor in 1886.

Only minor incidents in two cities marred the Dominion's observance of May Day as parades and mass meetings were held Saturday and Sunday in almost every centre Four men were arrested in Montreal when police broke up a march and in Toronto, University students and opposing political factions engaged in a brief melee. Three persons were slightly injured.

In a May Day rally in a Toronto arena, Tim Buck, General Secretary of the Communist Party in Canada, told 6,000 persons last night Canada was fast approaching a new stage of crisis which "is a challenge to the labor movement." There was a "very real danger Fascism will show its ugly head right here in our own Dominion," he said.

At many demonstrations, speakers denounced Quebec's "Padlock Law" under which the Quebec government can padlock houses where Communistic doctrines are distributed. Denouncing a non-intervention in the Spanish Civil War, which many speakers said have been aid to the Loyalist Insurgents, also was criticized in many gatherings.

Mountainside Hit by Plane and 19 Killed

Rome, May 2—(AP)— The worst disaster in the history of Italian civil aviation, costing the lives of nineteen airplane passengers and five aviators, was investigated today by the Italian Aeronautic authorities.

The giant airliner of the Ala Littoria Company, en route from Tripoli to Rome, hit Mount Terminillo in dense clouds Saturday and hit a mountainside near Rieti.

Among the known victims was the Albanian Minister to Rome. He and the other passengers included the fiancee of King Zog.

Albanian jewelries said jewelry valued at 12,000,000 French francs (about $370,000) was aboard the plane. The jewelry was part of a collection sent to King Zog and from which he selected wedding gifts for his bride.

APOPLEXY CAUSE OF BOY'S DEATH

Investigation Showed Coded Had Friendly Scuffle Before Succumbing

Kingston, Ont., May 2 (CP)— Coroner Dr. C. W. Bennett said today an investigation into the death of Gentleman Coded, Ronald Drake Smith, 21, in a Kingston hospital college here Saturday night, showed a friendly scuffle was responsible for the lad's death.

The youth, son of A. A. Smith, Toronto, died suddenly of the Queen's Hotel Investigators Department, collapsed and died during a wrestling match with classmates. Cerebral hemmorhage was given as the cause of death.

The body was lying in state in Currie Hall at the Military College today and will be accorded military honors en route to the station. The funeral will be held Tuesday, from the St. Clement's Church, to Mount Pleasant cemetery.

CAPT. P. MILLETTE INSPECTS PUBLIC SCHOOL CADETS

Compliments Queen Alexandra And Mary Schools on Showing

STRESSES DISCIPLINE

With representatives of the Board of Education hundreds of admiring pupils and a good crop of interested spectators looking on, cadets of Queen Alexandra and Queen Mary Schools paraded in brilliant May sunshine today in their annual inspection.

Drums and bugles rang out in stirring march tempo as the khaki-clad youngsters with wooden guns at the "slope" executed battalion, company and platoon, drill, the "general salute" and other military manoeuvres, under the critical eye-gase of Inspecting Officer, Captain P. E. Millette, headquarters staff, Military District No. 3, Kingston.

Representing the Board of Education were Chairman Chas. Hyde, the Rev. A. Beauchamp Payne and Mr. Alexander Collett. Mr. W. G. Anderson and Cadet Instructor George Wallace, accompanied the inspecting officer and other representatives.

Following the military manoeuvres, and drill, cadets of Queen Alexandra School gave a splendid exhibition of physical training, culminating the whole with an exhibition of "pyramids" and other forms of gymnastics that drew the well-earned applause of the spectators.

In his address to the cadets following the inspection, Captain Millette complimented them upon their splendid showing and especially in view of the fact that they have been in training only since Easter, and stressed the value of such training in that it promoted character building, discipline, esprit de corps, line, and prepared one for the sterner battle of life.

Officers of the Queen Alexandra Cadet Corps who received the congratulations of the inspecting officer on the fine showing of their unit were Cadet Commander Captain Donald Wallace, Lieutenant-Commanders Lieuts. J. Carefoot and H. Carrelle and Sergt. Major G. Peeples.

QUEEN MARY SCHOOL

Outstanding in the generally fine display of the cadets and students of Queen Mary School was a physical culture demonstration given by the girl students under the 50 girl students of the school.

Complimented on their entire assembly on its unusually fine exhibition, Captain Millette remarked that it was the first time he had ever seen boys and girls combine in such a demonstration, "but they did not compromise myself," he stated, "the boys were very good but the girls were perfect."

Upwards of eighty cadets under the leadership of Cadet Commander C. Bray executed battalion and platoon manoeuvres with precision, students and spectators vouchsafed their approval with applause. A striking demonstration was a first-aid display in which four students under the direction of Cadet Instructor G. Ellarby, placed splints on a "patient" with broken limbs. The work-waggoing of signal flags by the signallers of the corps added a further interesting item.

Introduced by Principal C. I. Retchford, Capt. Millette addressed the pupils, congratulating them on their fine showing. Brief complimentary addresses were made by Colonel Beverly Gribble, O.C., Royal Canadian Infantry Corps, and by A. Geen and Chairman of the Board of Education Chas. Hyde. Announcement to the assembled pupils that a half holiday would be given was the signal for vociferous applause on the part of the students.

Among those responsible for the fine showing on this visit were Cadet Instructor, Lieut. Everett Fairman, A.I.I.; Signal Instructor,

SYNOD MEETINGS OPEN ON TUESDAY AT ST. ANDREW'S

Largest Synod of Church Meets Here For First Time

The Synod of Toronto and Kingston of the Presbyterian Church in Canada, which opens on Tuesday, May 3rd, in St. Andrew's Church, Belleville, for the first time in the history of the city, will bring to Belleville the largest synod of the Church in Canada. It is expected that 175 delegates will be in the city for the meetings, which last until Thursday.

Rev. Hugh T. Kerr, D.D., LL.D., of Pittsburg, Pa., well-known Presbyterian leader in the United States whose radio services on Sunday afternoon have become well known for years, will be the special preacher in Canada. He will speak at the public meetings on Tuesday and Wednesday evening at eight o'clock, in St. Andrew's Church. St. Andrew's Church on previous occasions has been the scene of outstanding preachers in the American Presbyterian Church.

Besides the conference will be the Moderator of the General Assembly of the Church in Canada, Rev. Hugh Munroe, D.D., New Glasgow, N.S., who will address the meetings.

Rev. Samuel Lawrence, moderator of the Synod, will preside over the meetings.

Laymen at Church Of St. Thomas

The Laymen's Association attended divine service in St. Thomas' Church, Belleville, yesterday evening.

Starting with a processional, and led by the Crucifer, Mr. Digby, the choral evensong was sung by a male choir composed of members of the Association. The Psalms and Canticles were used, and the Magnificat and Nunc Dimittis to Chants by Parratt and Gounod. The Right Rev. known hymns were sung with much expression.

The lessons were read by the two lay readers of the Association, Mr. Charles Gardner and Mr. Jack Leggatt.

The Vicar, Rev. Rural Dean Payne gave an inspiring address upon a text taken from the gospel for St. Philip and St. James' Day, (John 14) and as the cloke called upon the members to renewed efforts on their part for next season's work.

JOBLESS

"only when the provincial needs have been satisfied."

Unemployment in Provinces

For the first time he made public his altered conviction that unemployment insurance was one of the services which might better be left with the provinces.

"During your investigations, sir, you have heard much of the 'social services.'" the Premier said. "May I suggest, sir, that the need for those 'social services' has come largely through the lack of national economy that insures a wide distribution of the proceeds of production?

"The state is largely responsible. The state will pay with its life —unless it shapes its policy for the profitable employment of the great mass of its citizens. The government that arranges an economic order which is not family out of every 15 lives on 'social services' cannot survive; and does not deserve to survive."

Preserve Self-Government

"Can we adapt ourselves to the economic change of the times and still preserve self-government? I resolutely refuse to think otherwise. The Federal system, with its division of powers, has not outlived us less than 100 years ago.

"Ontario's responsibility, believes that, with the exercise of prudent economy, the people of the state can become prosperous and still preserve their political heritage.

While the Premier did not hold the Canadian constitution responsible, he contended changes could be brought about only "by renewed conference of the governments of the people and with unanimity of provinces."

Admiration for Chairman

Premier Hepburn, in his welcome to the royal commissioner, expressed warm admiration for Chairman Rowell as a Liberal, a distinguished son of Ontario.

"Few there are so richly endowed for service and so ready, who have served their country in so many capacities, and served so well. You have been rewarded with the admiration of the Canadian people. Not the least of the people of this province," he told Chief Justice Rowell.

Consulting the Provinces

"And now may I express a long deep note of appreciation," the Premier continued, stating the first notice he received of the appointment of the commission came at the Federal table from a morning newspaper.

"I was perplexed. Perhaps it should have been expected that the sort was around the corner from something like Mr. Bennett's New Deal, and a year ago in the House of Commons, my attention was directed to the Right Honorable Gentleman's speeches, but somehow I missed that one. Upon enquiry, I learned that the Premier of another province has also been hit.

New Functions

Matters concerning the structure of Confederation, further, should not have been assigned to a commission at all. The Premier said that Confederation was the outcome of conferences and any changes should be brought about only by renewed conferences.

"It follows that the Province of Ontario is not before this commission either as applicant or as a defendant," he stated.

He pointed governments were called upon to perform functions not foreseen at the time of Confederation.

Adaptation to Today's Conditions

"How people may adapt themselves and their political institutions to the social and economic pressure of today is quite the most important thing in the world. Are modern demands upon governments such that people may no longer govern themselves? European nations seem to have promptly answered in the affirmative . . .

"Is our vision blurred at home? I do not, for a moment, suggest there is a formidably deliberate plan to destroy our parliamentary institutions. I do say, were the men of 1837 to look upon our politics in 1938, they would find little left of the political ideals on which they placed such store."

Rearrange Public Services

By the rearrangement of public services, government might be able to effect economies, increase efficiency and "bring government closer to the people," all without changing the fundamentals of Confederation.

"The fathers of Confederation never dreamed of the radio—and the Federal Government now uses it to broadcast news and advertise coffee, and other things, even on the Lord's Day, taking the people for the privilege of listening in," he commented.

Highway Traffic

The Federal Government had acquired transcontinental railways, spending about $50,000,000 a year, and "now the Federal government reaches out to the heart of the province of the traffic on the highways."

"Is that one of the services' with the Federal government or with the Province? The answer has opened wholly wrong doors if we want governments to do for us. It depends upon what governments may do to us, once they are seized of power."

Results of Power Concentration

"For we are stupid people if we imagine ourselves free from the consequences of concentrating power in few hands. We may not disagree over the lessons of the times; and all time. The accumulation of power leads to tyranny. Its distribution is the safety-zone of democracy.

"It is not sufficient to say: Canada is unlike Germany and unlike Italy and unlike European countries that changed their constitutions to meet the needs of governments that they might have a higher standard of public and social service."

Unemployment Problem

The government is deeply committed to a policy of unemployment insurance, he said, and he had promised that legislation would be introduced. Minister stated the Federal government was prepared to provide that service.

Unemployment Problem

"Subsidiary to the Premier was to consider the matter may be better left with the Provinces. Or sooner had the matter been talked over than the capitalized steadily growing interests of the country, a drive for crop insurance," he suggested, "and that the prospects of wheat crops altered the picture. Upon unemployment he said he was also a "highly uninsurable risk."

It is proposed that readjustment be in the form of assigning to the provinces the revenue from burdened, central government, more power to a government that has already departed from the time-thumbed practices of parliamentary institutions, and the duty of which to look across the Atlantic to read the destiny of the Canadian people."

P. E. COUNTY FARMHAND HELD ON TWO CHARGES

Provincial Police today arrested Borden Greatrix, Prince Edward County farmhand, at the home of his employer, Frank Bloomfield, on charges of the theft of two automobiles, both of which had been recently recovered by the authorities and returned to their rightful owners. Greatrix, police charge, confessed to the theft of Herbert Foster's automobile, stolen April 23rd, from Picton and subsequently abandoned at Tweed, where Greatrix is alleged to have stolen the car of Dale's motor car which was later recovered in Portland, Ont. The car was held in custody awaiting trial.

DURING MOTHERHOOD

WOMEN—who dread motherhood, who suffer from loss of appetite, should know that Nujol has been helped by the use of Dr. Miles' Nervine as a Prescription. Read what Mrs. J. W. Flanagan, 16 Lansdowne Ave., Toronto, Ont., says in her own words: "Before the birth of my little girl I had pains in my back and limbs and could not eat. I took Nujol and Dr. Miles' Nervine and found they helped me greatly. Now baby is 3 months old and I am feeling fine. I have no backache, my appetite is good and I can eat anything. I recommend Nujol to any one suffering as I did. I am sure it stimulated my appetite, helped my body to get strength and seemed to give me new life. It is wonderful for mothers."

Belleville Red Cross Society

The Work of the Past Fiscal Year at A Glance

An increased activity in all phases of its service program for the past fiscal year is reported by the Belleville Branch as follows:

Milk and Cod Liver Oil—280 quarts of milk were distributed to six undernourished families, and 34 six-teen-ounce bottles of Cod Liver Oil were supplied to other families.

Other Child Welfare Work—Needy school children were supplied with flannelette bloomers materials, graves and, through Home and School Leisure Clubs, mothers of needy families were taught to make garments for children under twelve, the branch supplying the materials. Second-hand clothing and footwear were also furnished.

Clothing Depot—With the co-operation of seven local organizations, this Depot was in operation during the entire year, some 2,000 articles being distributed. These seven local organizations made garments from materials supplied by the Red Cross, mostly layettes and children's garments, which were in turn checked and distributed by the chairman of the Women's Committees.

Soldiers' Work—Twelve veterans and their dependents were helped with clothing, both new and second-hand, groceries, milk, bedding, nursing and drugs. Veterans on the road, applying for aid, received shoes and socks when in dire need.

Family Relief—In addition to families aided through Civic Relief Officer, V.O.N. and forty-five families were helped by the branch with food, clothing, bedding and necessary things.

Home Nursing Classes—Courses, 7; enrolment, 154; number attending 75 per cent of classes, 138. These classes were taught by volunteer registered nurses.

Disaster Relief—The Branch assisted in the Disaster Relief Work of the Red Cross during the year under survey as follows: Western Drought Relief $182.86, Thames Valley Flood Relief $32.75, U. S. Flood Relief $67.00.

Outpost Hospitals and General Work—The Belleville Red Cross has always generously supported the Inportant Outpost Hospital work of the Ontario Division as well as the general work of Red Cross in the Province. Last year $500.00 was contributed for this service.

TRIM LEGS NEEDED FOR SHORT SHIRTS

(By HELEN FOLLETT)

Girls with fat calves are lining up at beauty's wailing wall. They don't like short skirts. But if they are to be admitted to fashion's army, they must wear the uniform of the day.

Persistent effort will reduce rotund "pins". Walk on tiptoe. Play hop scotch. Didn't you play hop scotch in your young days? Of course you did. Hop ten times on one foot then ten times on the other.

When you grow tired of that, try the goose step. Place hands on hips, keep head on the level, chest up. Walk with the legs stiff, lifting the feet high. There will be a tough pull on the muscles of the lower legs. Fat cells will be disturbed. In due time they'll go off and die. Adipose tissues like an easy life, can't stand activity.

Get a small rolling pin and roll the fat away. Dust the surface of the skin with talcum powder. Roll "like all get-out", pushing the rolling pin deep into the flesh. Oil the hands with lanoline, smooth the flesh up and down from ankle to knee, kneed them with the finger tips. Follow along with the ice-cold sponging and brisk friction with a heavy towel. Take measurements every week. You'll be surprised.

Alopecia areata is loss of hair in spots. The spots may appear over night. The trouble is supposed to be parasitic; several members of a family may have it. Hence combs and brushes should be kept strictly for personal use. Few older individuals have this trouble.

Treatment consists of extreme cleanliness in the scalp, vigorous brushing, daily massage. In six weeks' time, a soft downy growth appears. This falls and normal shafts fill up the vacant spaces. A physician who treats diseases of the skin and scalp should be consulted.

ALICE FAYE

If the neck is long and slender, dress the hair low at the nape line. If it is thick and short, arrange your tresses high. Avoid the shoulder-length cut, no matter what the shape of the neck may be. The mode has gone and there's no health in it. The scrambled effect is only for the young.

Making up in public may not be a social error, but the results are not satisfactory. Any time daily, for the rouge and powder pad, there are bound to be spotty effects. Putting on lip pigment requires a strong light, a strong mirror and a steady hand. Call in haste and repent all the time.

Weddings

TRAVIS—ROWLAND

On Saturday evening, April 30th, the marriage of Miss Audrey Jessie Rowland of this city, to Mr. Frank Travis, formerly of Pontefract, England, quietly took place at the Baptist parsonage, Bridge Street, the ceremony being performed by Reverend A. C. Shuttle.

The young couple were attended by Mr. Allen Ruth of Bayside, and Miss Phyllis Rowland, sister of the bride.

After a supper at the family residence, 19 Isabel Street, the bride and groom motored to points east and Ottawa.

GRAHAM—SPAFFORD

On Friday evening, April 29th, Miss Lorraine Spafford, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Gerald Spafford and Mr. James Graham, son of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Graham, were married by Rev. A. Beauchamp Payne in St. Thomas' Church.

The bride was given away by her mother. Miss Madeline Graham and Mr. Orlo Smith were witnesses. A small group of close friends and members of the family were present at the wedding and afterwards the happy couple left on a motor trip. A formal reception given by Mrs. Maisie Herring, aunt of the bride, with refreshments, games were served and dancing was enjoyed by all.

Mr. and Mrs. Graham will reside at 167 Wellington Street, Belleville.

Week-End Visit

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

My husband and I have been invited to spend a week-end at the home of friends. He received the invitation.

1—Will you kindly advise me if he should write a letter accepting the invitation, or should I write to Mrs. Blank?

2—Should I take a gift with us, or send one after we return? What would be appropriate?

3—Does a widow use her deceased husband's name or should her letters be addressed to Mrs. Alma Robbins?

D.

1—Although it does seem strange that I advise that you answer this invitation that was sent to your husband, nevertheless this is what I should do, if I were you. For of course Mrs. Blank should have sent this invitation to you, even if she and her husband knew your husband and did not know you.

2—You might take some simple gift with you . . . a box of flowers or a currently-popular book, a box of candy, perhaps . . . and, with your brief note of hostess' letter, send a more consequential gift. Observe while you are on this visit, what you would think would be a welcome gift to the household.

3—Never, socially or professionally, should a letter be addressed to a widow by her first name.

A widow's formal name is exactly that it was when her husband was living. Mrs. Thomas Robbins. And we should address letters to her by this formal name.

Wedding Anniversary Party

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I am to give a tenth anniversary party soon. It will be informal, as I expect about thirty guests. I also wish to send written invitations, but I am uncertain how to write them. Will you please write in the form so that I will be sure to write them correctly?

C.

Your note of invitation might read something like this:

Dear Jane,

Tom and I are inviting a few friends to celebrate our tenth wedding anniversary at our home on Friday, the tenth of June, and it will be very lovely to our happiness if you and Jack will tell us that you will be with us. Will you expect about eight o'clock? Do say 'yes'.

Dearest love from us to you both.

Affectionately,

Reception For Newlyweds

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Will you kindly inform me if it is proper to give a couple a reception after they have been married a few weeks?

B.

Yes, this is entirely correct.

Napkins

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

If one is asked to dine at a friend's home, taking one meal only, should one "fold" your table napkin or lay it unfolded on the table?

Fred

You will be correct if you neither fold your table napkin nor crumple it, but, with one movement on the lap (from right to left), turn it half way in on itself. The latter point is to seem casual about it! As a matter of fact, it isn't incorrect to fold it, if you wish, but it just isn't necessary.

Mother's Attire at Wedding

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Will you kindly advise me what would be correct for the groom's mother to wear at a formal wedding with just the families of the bride and groom present?

S.

The groom's mother might wear a handsome dress, street length, or she might wear an afternoon ensemble of long dress and matching jacket. The material might be crepe or other light weight material, or of a becoming shade of color, preferably a dark shade, such as dark blue or a rich burgundy.

Never Force Youngster To Eat

Best to Let Him Miss a Meal When He is Excited, Says Writer

(By LISA GRUNELIEB)

Mother wanted to see that before he could start for the parade he must eat all his spinach, his potato, too.

"Oh, Mother, I can't", Albert countered. "I'm not hungry, and besides, I haven't time. What time is it, anyway, Mother?"

Mother, tight-lipped and firm, said: "If we're late, Albert, it's your own fault. We've had plenty of times to finish. You've just been dawdling."

"But, Mother, I can't eat when I'm excited. I can't—we're ten minutes late now."

But Mother was firm, so Albert in a pouts closed his eyes and bolted the spinach and the potato in three huge mouthfuls. Then he grew sudden very red, contorted in the face, and became ill.

Fear Caused Illness

Albert protested that it wasn't his fault, but Mother maintained, and perhaps you can hardly blame her, that if the accident were not his fault, the cause of it certainly was.

"I gave you plenty of time to eat your lunch slowly," she said "You didn't have to bolt it. You played with your food 15 minutes before you ate any of it."

So Albert, feeling more than justified, put Albert to bed. No parade for him.

Albert was not in his disappointment, also in resentful fury against Mother. He felt that she unfairly had deprived him of a promised treat, but was punishing him unjustly. "I can't eat when I'm excited; it makes me sick," he said over and over.

But this time Mother was wrong; Albert was right. He couldn't eat and digest when excited, no one can, and it isn't reasonable to expect it.

If Albert had not been informed about the parade and delayed lunch, that would have been a different thing.

Nature Protects Us

When we are excited, anxious or extremely fatigued, Nature tries very wisely to protect us by temporarily cutting off our natural appetites. Under any sort of emotional stress, the digestion momentarily is paralyzed, as any doctor will tell you. And it is dangerous, and usually futile, for any mother, no matter how high her principles, to attempt to contradict nature, who, like some of mothers, does not like to be contradicted.

Certainly it is not fair to punish a child for an unfortunate contraction of the stomach muscles. Nor can you expect a child to be able entirely to control his emotions. He can't help being excited. You can't stop him, and shouldn't, for getting excited is one of the greater joys of youth. Nor can he stop himself.

The only thing to do is to ignore a neglected dinner, for once. It won't hurt a healthy child, nor is an occasional exception likely to break down your disciplinary routine.

Advice to the Lovelorn

Famous Authority on Problems of Love and Marriage.

Widower, Remaining Single, Not Complimenting His First Wife

"Do you think it disloyal to a dead wife, whom I loved devotedly, to marry again?"

I wish all the problems submitted to this column were as simple to answer as this one. For it happens that, from my point of view, there is only one answer to this question, which was put to me in this morning's mail. The troubled young man goes on to say:

"We were the happiest couple on earth. Never a shadow between us, up to the day she died, lasting only two lovely children. When I lost her I did not dream that I could ever look at another woman and I vowed I would be eternally faithful to her memory. And now, two years later, I am in love again, and with a girl who seems to me as fine in every way as my late wife. Also, I believe I am loved by her.

"I always thought it would be treachery to Denise even to think of re-marrying. What do you think about it, Miss Fairfax? And what would my late wife think? Do you consider I have any responsibility to Gretchen, the girl to whom I have so far not spoken a word of love?

"And the children—how about them? If I do not want to do anything they would ever reproach me for. And strange as it is, I am madly in love for the second time of my life."

The way I feel about the question of a widower's second marriage is that he is paying the highest compliment to his first wife. The man who can do without love and a woman's companionship, a woman-made home is apt to have unhappy memories of the home his first wife made for him.

But this young widower, who tells me he is 34 years of age, has a long life ahead of him. And I cannot believe that the wife who died would expect him to remain single for perhaps thirty years or more for her sake. Anyone who did expect such a thing would be sentimental and ignorant. On the contrary, his late wife would probably wish him to be happy, and happy through a woman's love.

As for his children, has it never occurred to him that they need a mother's care? And that supplying them with one is the most reasonable and fatherly thing he could do. He tells me that Gretchen, the girl he has learned to love, is fond of home and children and that his children are devoted to her. They always ask to have her go with them when they take their Sunday motor ride.

All said and done, it seems to me that a man who is in love with a fine girl whom he is free to marry ought to do so without reference to whether he has been married before or not. And I would urge him not to wait too long lest Gretchen fails to understand why this young man, who appears to care for her, has never said anything to her about it. My own feeling is that, both for her sake and his own, he ought to lose no time in clearing up the matter.

Eternal faithfulness in the sense in which this widower means it is not a very practical thing.

"Oh, Mother, I can't," Albert countered. "I'm not hungry, and besides, I haven't time. What time is it, anyway, Mother?"

Mother, tight-lipped and firm, said: "If were late, you'll have your own fault. You've had plenty of times to finish. You've just been dawdling."

"But, Mother, I can't eat when I'm excited. I can't —we're five minutes late now."

But Mother was firm, so Albert in a pause closed his eyes and bolted the spinach and the potato in three huge mouthfuls. Then he grew suddenly very red, contorted in the face, and became ill.

Mother Cannot Be Excited

Albert protested that it wasn't his fault, but Mother scrubbed, and perhaps you can hardly blame her, that if the accident were not his fault, the effect certainly was.

"I gave you plenty of time to eat your lunch slowly," she said "You didn't have to bolt it. You played with your food 10 minutes before you ate any of it."

So Albert's feeling more than justified, put Albert to bed. No parade for him.

Albert went in his disappointment, also in resentful fury against Mother. He felt that she does not had deprived him of a promised treat, but was punished him unjustly. "I can't eat when I'm excited; it makes me sick," he said over and over.

But this time Mother was wrong; Albert was right. He couldn't eat and digest when excited; no one can, and it isn't reasonable to expect it.

If Albert had not been informed about the parade until after lunch, that would have been a different thing.

Nature Protects Us

When we are excited, anxious or extremely fatigued, nature is very wisely to protect us by temporarily cutting off our natural appetites. Under any sort of emotional stress, the digestion momentarily is paralyzed, so any food we eat will not digest. And it is dangerous, and usually futile, for any mother, no matter how high her principles, to attempt to contradict nature, who, like some mothers, does not like to be contradicted.

Certainly it is not fair to punish a child for an unfortunate contraction of the stomach muscles. Nor can you expect a child to be able entirely to control his emotions. He can't help being excited. You can't stop him, and shouldn't, for getting excited is one of the greater joys of youth. Nor can he stop himself.

The only thing to do is to ignore a neglected dinner, for once. It won't hurt a healthy child, nor is an occasional exception likely to break down your disciplinary routine.

Week-End Visit

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

My husband and I have been invited to spend a week-end at the home of friends. He received the invitation.

1—Will you kindly advise me if should write my letter accepting the invitation, or should I write to Mrs. Blank?

2—Should I take a gift with us, or send one after we return? What would be appropriate?

3—Does a widow use her deceased husband's name or should her letters be addressed to Mrs. Alma Robbins?

D.

1—Although it does seem strange that I advise that you answer this invitation that was sent to your husband, nevertheless this is what I should do, if I were you. For of course Mrs. Blank should have sent this invitation to you, even if she and her husband knew your husband and did not know you.

2—You might take some simple gift with you . . . a box of flowers or a currently-popular book, a box of candy, perhaps . . . and, with your bread-and-butter letter, send a more consequential gift. Observe while you are on this visit, what you would think would be a welcome gift to the household.

3—Never, socially or professionally, should a letter be addressed to a widow by her first name. Mrs. Alma Robbins is exactly correct.

Wedding Anniversary Party

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I am to give a tenth anniversary party soon. It will be informal, and I expect about 50 guests. I also wish to send written invitations, but I am uncertain how to write them. Will you please write the form so that I will be sure to write them correctly?

C.

Your note of invitation might read something like this:

Dear Jane,

Tom and I are inviting a few friends to celebrate our tenth wedding anniversary at our home on Friday, the tenth of June, and it would add much to our happiness if you and Jack will tell us that you will be with us. Will you come about eight o'clock? Do say 'yes'.

Dearest love from us to you both.

Affectionately,

Reception For Newlyweds

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Will you kindly inform me if it is proper to give a couple a reception after they have been married a few weeks?

B.

Yes, this is entirely correct.

Napkins

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

If one is asked to dine at a friend's home, taking one meal easily should you "fold" your table napkin or lay it unfolded on the table?

Fred

You will be correct if you neither fold your table napkin nor crumple it, but, with one movement on the lap (from right to left), turn it loosely over it on the table. Neither point is to seem casual about it! As a matter of fact, it isn't incorrect to fold it, if you wish, but it just isn't necessary.

Mother's Attire at Wedding

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Will you kindly advise me what would be correct for the groom's mother to wear at a formal wedding with just the families of the bride and groom present?

S.

The groom's mother might wear a satin-crepe dress, street length, or she might wear an afternoon ensemble of long dress and matching jacket. The material might be crepe or other light weight material. Be of a becoming shade of color, preferably a dark shade, such as dark blue or a rich burgundy.

tells me he is 34 years of age, has a long life ahead of him. And I cannot believe that the wife who died would expect him to remain single for perhaps thirty years or more for her sake. Anyone who did expect such a thing would be sentimental and ignorant. On the contrary, his late wife would probably wish him to be happy, and happy through a woman's love.

As for his children, has it never occurred to him that they need a mother's care? And that supplying them with one is the most reasonable and fatherly thing he could do. He tells me that Gretchen, the girl he has learned to love, is fond of home and children and that his children are devoted to her. They always ask to have her go with them when they take their Sunday motor ride.

All said and done, it seems to me that a man who is in love with a fine girl whom he is free to marry ought to do so without reference to whether he has been married before or not. And I would urge him not to wait too long lest Gretchen fail to understand why this young man, who appears to care for her, has never said anything to her about it. My own feeling is that, both for

Famous Authority on Problems of Love and Marriage.

Widower, Remaining Single, Not Complimenting His First Wife

"Do you think it disloyal to a dead wife, whom I loved devotedly, to marry again?"

I wish all the problems submitted to this column were as simple to answer as this one. For I feel about that from my point of view, there is only one answer to this question, which was put to me in this morning's mail. The trouble-some thing is how to say it.

"We were the happiest couple on earth, Never a shadow between us, from the day she died, leaving me two lovely children. When I lost her I did not dream that I could ever look at another woman and I vowed I would be eternally faithful to her memory. And now, two years later, I am in love again, and with a girl who seems to me as fine in every way as my late wife. Also, I believe I am loved by her.

"I always thought it would be treachery to Denise even to think of re-marrying. What do you think about it Miss Fairfax? And what would my late wife think? Do you consider I have any responsibility to Gretchen, the girl to whom I think so far not spoken a word of love?

"And the children—how about their side of it? Do not want to do anything they would ever reproach me for. And strange as it is, I am madly in love for the second time of my life."

The way I feel about the question of a widower's second marriage is that he is paying the highest compliment to his first wife. The man who can do without love and a woman's companionship, a woman-made home is apt to have unhappy memories of the first wife who made for him.

But this young widower, who

Hat Fashions Have Gone Flower Mad This Season

Real Posies Add Springtime Sprightliness to Millinery

By MRS. BERT S. McDONALD
Central Press Flower Stylist

REAL, FRESH flowers on hats —and why not? Fashion has gone completely flower mad this season, and certainly smart women aren't going to be satisfied with artificial blooms adorning their bonnets. Real posies, they know, have a greater appeal and add a springtime sprightliness to their appearance.

One prominent hat maker is putting out a line of hats designed especially for trimming with fresh flowers. Following out that idea, enterprising florists all over the country are fast establishing their shops as service stations for milady's millinery. "We trim hats while you wait," is their slogan.

So why not get in line with this latest fashion decree? The next time you want to look especially attractive — when you attend a smart luncheon, tea or dinner, or when you have any other important engagement, bie yourself to the nearest flower shop and have your hat adorned with a cluster of fresh blooms. You'll be surprised and delighted with the smart effects that can be achieved with but a few flowers.

Vary Trimming

What is more, you can give variety to your headgear by choosing flowers to fit with your mood and your costume. And these flowers can be arranged so that they will stay fresh and lovely for a whole day. This is done by wrapping stems in moist cotton and then covering with rubberized tape. Or if the band of the hat permits, the flowers can be placed in a small vial constructed that the water will not leak out.

A sprig of mimosa, for instance, makes a smart adornment for the rough straw mallot hat, and a bit of grosgrain ribbon holds it in place. A veil tied about the brim gives the latest touch.

The collarless beige coat needs a delicate trimming touch with a matching bunch of mimosa tucked in the neckline.

Pink camellias are used on the shepherdess type of hat, right, which is also ribbon and veil trimmed.

The same hat may appear with many different trimmings, you can see, if you wear fresh flowers on your chapeau.

Young Girl Wants to Know When to Tell Her Sweetheart That She's a Divorcee

By VIRGINIA LEE

"DEAR MISS VIRGINIA-LEE:

I am a young divorced woman, only 20, I was married for eight months. Two weeks after the divorce I met a young fellow and he has been taking me out steadily. I don't know what to do. Should I have told him that I am a divorced woman or shall I wait until he proposes to me? Waiting patiently for a reply from you, Miss Lee. Please give me your advice.

C. W."

I think the honorable thing to do would be to tell the young man that you have been married and divorced. It probably will make no difference to him, unless his religion forbids him to wed a divorced woman. It is always well to be perfectly open and above board in such matters. Then there can be no embarrassing complications.

"LONESOME PAL: is a boy of 23. He fell in love with a girl of 17, and went with her for awhile, then because she seemed so indifferent, he stopped going to see her. He tried going out with other girls, but could not seem to be satisfied. He drove over to her home town one night and tried to see her, but did not succeed. He heard, however, that the girl had been told a number of lies about his reputation by several persons who were jealous of their friendship.

"So please, Virginia Lee, tell me what I should do, for she is the only girl I ever cared for in that way? Should I write her or should I go to see her again?"

I certainly wouldn't give her up easily, my boy. I would write her and tell her what you have heard, tell her you want to see her again and ask her if you can visit her. A girl who is worth loving in the way you care for her is worth making a great effort to win. I hope she tells you to come to see her and that you succeed in winning her love.

H. A. L. has several serious problems. She is 18 and has a stepfather. She has been very ill in the hospital and is still too sick to be up.

Every two weeks her stepfather comes home drunk early in the morning and turns the whole family out of doors. He is arrested, but next morning he is let go and laughs about the whole thing. She wants to know where he could be sent so he would learn a lesson.

Another thing, the house in which the family lives is very old and the roof leaks. The stepfather works for the landlord, and the latter tells them that they can move if they don't like the leaky roof, and then the father will lose his job.

Write to the health officer of your town at the city hall, H. A. L., and ask him to inspect the house. As to your stepfather's habit, could not your mother talk to the officers at police headquarters or to the judge before whom your stepfather appears, and tell them of the situation and ask their advice? Maybe a workhouse sentence would cure him of this habit, and maybe not. At any rate, men who are used to dealing with the people who have such faults should know best how to deal with them. I sincerely hope you will get well very soon, and that you will eventually have your own home away from such unpleasantness.

S. J. doesn't agree with my advice to "Old Boy", the middle-aged man who is engaged to marry a woman, his own age. He was puzzled because she always smiles and talks to everyone she meets. S. J. says he is selfish, conceited and jealous, and that he should change before he thinks of marrying.

"I hope she won't marry him," she writes. "Another divorce will only be the outcome and we have too many now."

Old Boy can check up on himself and see if these accusations are true. If he does see this letter and X hope he does.

Certainly a sweet, friendly attitude toward the world should not be discouraged, but a flirtatious disposition should.

Doctor's Book Sheds Light on "Female Complaints"

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.
Author of "HOW TO LIVE"

DOCTOR" is a book by Dr. Arthur E Hertzler, which should be assuring to women. Hertzler likes to call himself a country doctor but, as a matter of fact, he is one of the best surgeons in the United States, although, like the Mayor he works in a country town.

As indicating the quality of book, Dr. Hertzler's remarks on female complaints are very illuminating:

"Female complaints are generally understood to be diseases of the organs peculiar to women. They are handled by doctors who are called gynecologists or "specialists in diseases of women". The doctor's definition of a gynecologist is "an unfortunate individual whose mission in life it is to aid the human female to correlate her biologic instincts with the dictates of Christian ethics."

Women with female complaints are capable of a kind of classification as they walk into a doctor's office. One is the middle-aged woman, who is suffering from many complaints, chiefly because she is middle-aged. Then there is the adolescent girl. Christian lady and plain animal sometimes wage a terrible subconscious battle. Many of these girls can be relieved by a method which appeared as "Psychiatry" in Martindale's "Practice of Medicine", which described it, by the use of potassium bromide, because these patients have small goitres and when they disappear the dizzinesses does likewise.

When to Avoid Operation

Quite large groups of female complainers come to the doctor's office accompanied either by husband or mama. Mama has had all the symptoms and daughter unconsciously imitates her. When there is a strong nervous element in such cases, as there usually is, operation should be avoided if possible because the result will be disappointment.

There is a story about a woman who told her mate that she had just had a talk with daughter. Papa asked, "What new did you find out?"

Another type is the female complainer who comes to the doctor's office unattended and says she wants a physical examination. The diagnosis is plain enough. She thinks hubby has been out visiting the blonde and has brought something home. The chances are he hasn't. If he is a real husband his wife will swear by him. If he is faithful, she swears at him.

The jealous woman nearly always has a faithful husband.

Most female complaints, according to Dr. Hertzler, are not due to any real disease, but to the circumstances of the woman's life.

"NERVES" SHE CALLED IT

Losing interest—losing friends—she grew vexed and more—always too tired. "Nerves," she thought—but it was her kidneys, the fliters of her blood, that needed attention. Frozen Strawberry Dessert Is Tasty With Lamb Dinner

By MRS. MARY MORTON
Menu Hint

Roast Lamb Delmonico Potatoes
Green Peas Beet Salad
Strawberry Cream Coffee

The strawberry cream may be made in an ordinary freezer with salt and ice instead of in the mechanical refrigerator.

Today's Recipes

Beet Salad—Use canning beets, or bake four medium sized beets until tender, peel and cut into one-half-inch cubes. Add one pound shelled peanuts or pecans. Serve with boiled salad dressing on lettuce with garnish of finely shredded red cabbage. The beets are better marinated in French dressing for half an hour before mixing with the nuts.

Delmonico Potatoes

Cut parsi potatoes into cubes and boil until tender. Drain, combine with a cream sauce in which has been stirred one-third cup of grated solid cheese. Place in a baking dish, sprinkle the top with buttered bread crumbs and bake in a moderate oven, 350 degrees, until browned.

Strawberry Mallobt

One-half pound marshmallows, two cups cold milk, one and one-half cups crushed strawberries, one and one-half tablespoons lemon juice. Place marshmallows and two tablespoons of the cold milk in top part of double boiler. Heat slowly over hot water, folding over and over until marshmallows are about half melted. Remove from heat and continue folding mixture until it is smooth and spongy. Let cool until lukewarm then blend in milk, crushed strawberries and lemon juice. Pour into freezing tray of mechanical refrigerator, and freeze at the coldest degree. Stir several times during the freezing. When frozen to a stiff mush, beat with rotary egg beater, then return to refrigerator to finish freezing.

FACTS AND FANCIES

Nasturtium Juice

Orange and tomato juices lose much of their nutritive value after they have been exposed to the air for several hours. Consequently it is a good plan to prepare them just before serving—to buy them in cans which hold an amount that will be quickly consumed after they are opened.

Hides Bed, Springs

When the bedstead is removed at night, the springs are unsightly enough to cause a clever decorator to fling a remedy. A box-pleated flounce, matching the spread, is applied at the top of the springs and not removed. In the daytime the spread overlaps this entirely or in part.

Two New Sandwiches

Banana-Raisin: Mix a one-half cup raisins with one crushed banana. Salt to taste. Spread between buttered slices of bread. Mayonnaise may be added to mixture if desired. Makes four to six sandwiches.

Jiff-Dandy: Spread slice of bread with cream cheese and cover with slices of banana. Butter a second slice of bread, spread with tart jam. Put sandwich together.

What's in a Name?

Avocadoes are sometimes called "sailors' butter" because they were sometimes used for that purpose.

The "alligator pear" name comes from the green, shiny surface, which looks like a gator.

Do This If You're NERVOUS

Don't take chances on harmful sedatives that may prove habit forming. Instead, get the pure, scientific medicine that has proved its value to thousands. Dr. Miles Nervine Tablets contain Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound—made especially for women from wholesome roots and herbs. Nervine helps to relax your system and thus calm jangly nerves. Follow directions in folder. Get Nervine Tablets and make this test.

For over 60 years Lydia Pinkham has told another how to be "mistress of herself" with Pinkham's Compound—at 85 cents TOD.

AT HIS MAJESTY'S REQUEST

Floral Patterns Are Particularly Good This Spring

By LISBETH

GAY PRINTS appear each spring, and this season flower designs are particularly good in both crepes and sheers.

Stripes also come forth with the flowers of spring, especially for suits, and this year navy, like checks and plaids, have aligned themselves with solid colors in these same suits, giving variety to many a tailleur.

A charmingly feminine costume is shown above. The Burgundy silk chiffon coat with white flowers in a long shirred coat with three-quarter length sleeves is worn over a plain, short-sleeved Burgundy chiffon dress.

The large white panama hat trimmed in Burgundy, white bag and gloves and wine pumps complete the costume.

Watch for smocking and shirring on dimes this season. It is an important fashion note.

The costume just described would be a charming one for the bride's trousseau, and the suit shown at the right is one you will enjoy while on a honeymoon and will stand you in long afterwards.

Cool, Smart, Young

It is smart, cool and young. It is equally good in navy and black, with a fine stripe, the material tested rayon—the suit consisting of blouse, tying at the throat, and jacket, a collarless cardigan. The large print is in solid color, while sailor hat, while pullover gloves and roomy black or navy bag—depending upon the color of the suit—and your costume is complete.

In Paris, prints are being shown almost exclusively for mid-season. Many are done on organdie; use enormous designs of flowers, wheat, iris or dahlias.

In stripes the color gamut is interesting as many pairs are shown—for instance, navy stripes on pink ground, and pink on navy.

As to colors, blues are in the lead, says a Paris house, usually vivid shades, with deep pinks, like strawberry and cyclamen, second.

Left, long, shirred coat of Burgundy silk printed chiffon worn over plain dress; right, navy or black tested rayon suit, skirt in plain color, fine striped cardigan jacket and blouse.

Today's Garden-Graph

BY DEAN HALLIDAY
Released by Central Press Canadian

TODAY'S GARDEN hl e oc RESIST THE temptation to use too many different kinds of flowers in planning a perennial border. Use limited numbers of fewer species. It is advisable to repeat the same group of plants at regular intervals along the border. This ties the planting together in a flowing line.

Shown in the above Garden-Graph are plants that can be relied upon for color and form throughout the different flowering seasons.

The best effects in such a border as this are obtained from bold, massed plantings, with the plants in clumps of five or seven apiece.

If the first sowings of flower seeds were not successful they should be repeated now. Succession plantings of gladiolus should be kept up at ten-day intervals, using the larger bulbs first.

Keep your electric light bulbs clean for the sake of your eyes. Bulbs are best cleaned by wiping with a soft cloth wrung out of soapy water. Care should be taken not to get the metal part wet. If it does get wet, however, remove from the bulb socket, turn the socket until it is perfectly dry, for sometimes may create a short circuit.

McDOUGALL MEETS COUNT ZARNOFF

Wrestling Fans on Wednesday Assured of Fine Main Bout

Seldom in the annals of modern wrestling do the patrons of the game sit silently in appreciation of the recognized ability of wrestlers and merely applaud spontaneously with repeated outbursts of handicapping only, but that is exactly what occurred at the Hume Arena last Friday night during the Count Zarnoff-Sammy Stein bout, which the former ultimately won. Even the most bitter and biased wrestling fan later readily admitted that the exhibition of pure ability to counter-wrestle displayed by the pudgy Count Zarnoff, the bald Russian of nobility, not only was spell-binding, but undoubtedly the best exhibition ever staged in a local ring.

Met with loud applause was the announcement that Count Zarnoff had signed to meet Scientific Scotty McDougall, veteran of many a fine battle, in a return two-round bout at the Hume Arena Wednesday night of next week. It will be interesting to watch the reaction of the fans, as we applaud the efforts of both Zarnoff and Mc-Dougall and customarily are found loud in their hopes for victory towards both.

BUFFALO BISONS GOOD LONG SHOT TO BEAT BEARS

O'Neill Has Bunch of Heavy Hitters And Good Mound Corps

TORONTO WINS TWO

Earl Caldwell Drives in Winning Run in Second Game

(By The Associated Press)

It looks practically impossible to stop Newark Bears at the rate they're going now in the International Baseball League, but if you're looking for a good long shot, try Buffalo Bisons.

Buffalo, guided by Canny Steve O'Neill, is third now, a game behind Jersey Giants, but likely will move up a notch or two when Bisons reach their own park. O'Neill has lined up a bunch of long distance hitters behind a veteran mound corps that is capable of steady work, and there's bound to be trouble up there when long hits count.

The Bisons showed what they can do to short fences yesterday when they hammered out a double victory over Baltimore Orioles, no mean sluggers themselves. The scores were 13-9 and 16-2 and they just about tell the story.

The Bisons made a total of 33 hits, including first game homers by Mary Olson, Moe Mullaney, Ollie Carnegie and Woody Abernathy. They had to use four flingers then as Bill Ciaseli and Frank McGowan contributed four baggers for the Orioles. But in the second game Bob Kline contributed a six-hit pitching job and the herd made it easy for him by scoring 11 times in the fifth.

Bears Win Two

All that didn't help the Bisons overtake Newark, however, for the Bears routed the Rochester Red Wings 12-8 and 7-2 to make it ten victories in 11 starts. They had little trouble in the opener as Mickey May's two homers, double and single packed a 14-hit attack. After a desperate brought a close call, however, as they trailed 4-7 going into the last inning. Newark grabbed three two runs, then finished it off with one wallop when Lee Scarella drove in the winner in the fifth. Ed Heusser was the second hurler to be used.

Jersey City held second place by splitting with Montreal, running the Royals' losing streak to six straight as Babe Herman's four-ply clout led the way to an 8-5 victory then going down 7-3 before the five hit flinging of Harry Smythe, Montreal veteran.

Toronto Maple Leafs doubled their victory total by whipping Syracuse Chiefs 9-5 and 4-3. Syracuse pitchers gave up 11 walks in the first clash as Johnny Gee took his first defeat of the season while Neil Caldwell, Toronto flinger, drove in the run that won the second game.

Pete Fox of Tigers On Hitting Spree

Detroit, May 2.—(AP)— Ervin (Pete) Fox, Detroit Tigers' hustling right fielder, seems to be outforging a lot of good hitting pitchers and himself.

On a sensational hitting spree topped off by five-for-five against Cleveland in second day, the Tiger veteran is up in the .400 class.

Hard-working Pete has a .451 batting average, based on 23 points more than he customarily hits in the Spring, and his friends are saying "Pete's finally done it."

Not six years Fox has been with Detroit, more or less regularly, but he's had in the early season, but today he is among leading batting in the major leagues and wondering why. Hey? Yeah? Trouble of the Indians, with .463, leads Pete by .011.

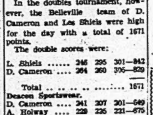
BELLEVILLE AND PETERBORO DRAW

Each Team Rolls 3326 in The Five Men Event

A rather unusual incident occurred during the Eastern Ontario bowling tournament at Peterboro over the week end when two contesting clubs, the Deacon "Sports-wear" of Belleville rolled a tie three string with the Peterboro K. of C. quintette, each team aggregating 3,326 points. The local team will have to return to Peterboro to replay the game later during the tournament.

In the doubles tournament, however, the Belleville team of D. Cameron and Les Shiels were high for the day with a total of 1671 points.

The double scores were:



L. Shiels	246	295	301—842
D. Cameron	264	260	305—829
Total			1671

Rodney Boone, prominent newspaper man of Fort Worth, Texas, Fred Ericksen, played a friendly match on one of the Florida courses recently. It was a friendly match friendly, but to hear Boone talk to his opponent you wouldn't think so. He gave me the impression that winning the match was the most important thing in life to do that day.

That is the spirit to have when playing any kind of competition, and it's a good idea to concentrate on the things you think will help you to win but you should look after the right things. When Ericksen found his ball in a bunker where he had to stand with his feet on a sandy surface which caused him to slip when he swung at the ball, missing the shot cost him the hole and put him behind in the match. In addition, it robbed him of confidence about the rest of his game.

Very often players make the mistake of overlooking conditions about the lie of the ball, or surface on which the feet rest, which are bound to influence the result of the shot. If you find your feet slipping, or sinking when they are likely to slip, you should take a shorter hold on the club and an easier swing. This will offset the handicap of uncertain footing and assure of playing from a difficult lie.

If in doubt about any of these shots, be sure to take it easy. It does not pay to take long chances with them.

COMMENTS FROM THE COACH

Physical Fitness Chief Necessity In Any Sport

By Lloyd A. Percival

Number 2

Lloyd Percival

The Old Timer lit his pipe and leaned back. "These young athletes aren't what they were used to be. Why, they aren't even in good condition. Although I don't agree with the old timers concerning the general ability of present day athletes, he is close when it comes to condition.

For even athlete playing around the various big and county leagues who is in the best possible shape, there are a hundred who are not. It's very easy that these lads, who want to be topnotchers, don't get it into their heads that condition is essential. If they realized that every touch game they play while in poor condition helps them steer to the boneyard of sport, perhaps they would get started.

Trying to make a name for yourself in your chosen game without condition is trying to climb a greasy pole—you always end up the bottom. Train all time and effort spent in making sure you are in perfect shape pays big dividends. As it is generally is much faster of late and brains are becoming more important. It is a wise guy who makes his mental assignments easier by easing the burden on his body. You might just as well go out to play with a stone on your back as try and play in poor condition. Let's figure it out. When the body gets tired the job of concentrating gets tougher. The mind and body are closely co-ordinated, and it naturally follows that if one is tired the other will suffer. You know as well as I how much effect it has on your temper when you are aching and weary. To be brief, when the muscles and nerves are tired and overworking it usually follows that concentration is lost, quick thinking and effectiveness are lacking at enough to put you at a serious disadvantage.

Lessens Chances of Injury

Once the body is in first-class shape you have something. Just add it up. You are less likely to get injured. You can concentrate without physical irritation. Your muscles are ready and able to carry out any smart moves you think up. Your knowledge that your condition is o. k. helps give you confidence. If the going gets tough you know you are sure that your body won't let you down. You wouldn't expect to see your car walking down the street minus your pants—well, you won't get very far without condition either.

Here is a story of an experiment that was made in a college in the States. It chiefly concerns the mind, but as you will see could easily be adapted to training the body also. This professor of psychology had it all figured out that if a person trying to do a certain problem tried first to do a more harder one, then that first problem would seem easier. In fact, it would be easier than it was at first. On trying this theory out the theory showed he was correct. If you are still with me let's follow this up. Adapt this principle to your training. Try and accomplish in your practice sessions something harder to do than will be necessary in the games to come. If a man is in condition to go 10 rounds, it's a sure thing he will be able to go at top speed for three. Not Hard to Do

No matter what handicaps face a young fellow, there is absolutely no reason why he should not be able to get himself in good shape. The first and most important fundamental for anyone starting out on a career in sport is: GET INTO THE BEST POSSIBLE CONDITION. Take a look at yourself and see if there isn't something you can do to improve your condition. Perhaps a few of very few athletes who cannot find some improvement they can make in this regard.

If you are merely playing a game for the fun of it and you have no real ambition to get anywhere in competition, you don't need to read on as an exception to the rule. Remember this, every time you play a game without being in shape you are taking a big risk of injury and with your health. Games are good for you.

It's no effort for the man in front...he's in shape. The man behind will be sorry. Still the average fellows' backs is where he had in mind with his shape. You can't fool Mother Nature.

but if you aren't ready physically to take the strain on you will be sorry. If you are only playing for fun, I might point out that running after a tennis ball with your tongue dragging on the court is not the most pleasant occupation in the world. It is no alternative about this business of physical condition—it's either condition or collapse.

Gabler, a big right hander who also has played with the New York Giants, was obtained today by the Giants from Cleveland. Gabler went from the Giants to the Bees in the Waite Berger deal. He won four and lost seven for Boston last year.

DANGER IN THE MIST

CHAPTER 5

Elisa Sees a Ghost

I spent the evening collecting every bit of evidence exposing my identity, and burning it in the furnace. It was some job and when I gazed about my denuded room I did lighted fire as though I'd been "in service" all my life.

Luckily, I'd brought few clothes with me, but from the better looking apparel I carefully cut all the labels. I wasn't going to have the good old Marsden name mixed up in any murder scandal because of me.

I tried to hang around and see Mac but when it got to be after ten and he did not appear, I went to bed for I was so tired and dopey, I wouldn't have known the first part of the night if the murderer had stood over me with a loaded revolver pressed against my temple.

And so I was awakened by something going bang-ety-bang down the back stairs, followed by some terrible groans—my heart just about called quits!

As I threw out of bed, I heard Barnes' door open and we collided with a thump. Mac jumped on the light and there on the stair-landing was a hooded head, Barnes' shaking knees and limbs up—Elisa!

My—I'm killed!" she groaned. But she wasn't even hurt—just shaken, and frightened green!

"I swooned that she had come out of her room to go to the bathroom. The hall was in darkness, she peered the head of the stairs, something grabbed at her throat, she gave one leap and fallen backward down the four or five stairs to the landing.

It was a perfect wonder she was not killed! She declared that someone had rushed by her as she lay on the landing—and there had been a fiendish chuckle of laughter!

"Nerves," said Barnes. "Drink this."

"Nerves n-nothin'" she quavered. "I-I-I—tell you I've seen a ghost! He was always lurkin' around to grab me for somethin'!"

Well, we finally got her back to bed without arousing the main house, and Barnes insisted that I go down to the kitchen with him and have a drink. "You look kinda shot," he said.

Poor old Barnes—trotting about in his pink pajamas! I felt I hurt him lots better after that night. And when, later, I got his confidence I came near to think about that.

It was two-thirty when I went back to my room. For a long time I kept on my bed-light. I'll confess I was darn nervous. Something had grabbed Elisa! She was not the kind for imaginings. But I couldn't believe in ghosts!

Finally I hung off my light and tried to sleep.

Just as I was dropping off, I heard a queer sound outside my door, and then a scurrying and—laughter—diabolical laughter!

A door closed.

I just went right down under the covers! Electricity or no electricity, nothing on earth would have taken me into that hall!

"Billy!" chided Mac the next morning. "Grand little detective you are!"

"But, Mac—there was something there!"

"Don't doubt it. If you'd gone out in the hall—who knows? You might have stepped right on the murderer! Say—bet it was old Parker! Darned old snooper!" A nervous expression came into Mac's eyes. "Judy—I' mabout all in! I'm thinking of getting up this detective business."

"Oh, Mac—your clue! In all that happened here, I'd forgiven. Did you find out anything?"

"All together too much," he gloomed. "Norma Caldwell killed her husband."

Something came up in my throat and choked me. Lovely Norma Caldwell with her tragic eyes! I couldn't stand it—I—just couldn't stand it!

"Mac—you are not sure?"

"Well, I'll give you the slope and you can judge for yourself. I got a hunch that Mrs. Caldwell and Murdock were going to meet on the summer house near the tennis court, somewhere about midnight. I'd no idea the time, and I nearly froze to death in that foggy mist for two blessed hours. Finally I finally made it around eleven. It seemed they hadn't been there to get a word together all day, for Parker had watched them like a cat watches with a couple of mice. Murdock said—Norma, I'm worried stiff. I'm afraid you'll have to go right in after I left you last night, didn't you? It was exactly what I told the sheriff!"

"And then she said—no, that she had told the truth—she did not go upstairs at all. She said that Caldwell was terrible to her there that night—she did threatened to kill Murdock unless she'd promise to ask him to go right away. She left him in sort of a drunken stupor but she was darn worried and she stayed down in the library and tried to read.

"I brushed his hand across his forehead. "That's the hell of it! You wait! Murdock tried to comfort her—tried to get her to tell everything, but she only sobbed and said she couldn't. And after a while they went back to the house, and I crept out of the juniper bushes where I'd been hiding, and—Judy! I ran smack into a flash-light and behind that light was friend Parker!"

"Oh-h-h! heard, too!"

"Of course he'd heard—the old devil! He said—'Ah-ha—another listener in my party tonight, my young man!' But I told him to go to the hot place and here's hopin' he takes an express. So, Judy—you see, she's guilty all right."

"No, Mac—she didn't do it, but she knows who did and she's just about frightened to death. Remember there were other people in that house that night—it wasn't all nerves that made her see and hear things. I know what I'm going to do! I'm going to be a regular bulldog every single thing I heard that night and I'm going to do it right now!"

"Guess I've gone on the suspected list," confided Mac. "When I went to my room after breakfast, every darn thing in my bag been searched. Luckily I didn't have any love-letters from you Judy."

"Bah—never wrote a love-letter in my life."

"Umm—but you're going to. Look at me and deny it—young lady!"

I looked at him, and—well, I didn't deny it.

"When we're married," he teased, "I shall insist that you always wear a little black dress and a cute little apron and one of those saucy little caps. Say—there reporters were asking me about you yesterday. One of 'em got an awful case at first sight. I told him where he could get off."

"Was it that nice-looking one with the nose-glasses? Oh, Mac—hi-ease! there's someone coming!"

The someone was Barnes with a telegram for me—the first in a series. It was brief and to the point. "Come home at once. Dad." And was blissfully ignored as well all the others.

CHAPTER 7

A Strange Wound

It was a busy, nerve-racking day for everyone. The fog had lifted and the water was a clear, heavy-gray blue, with the harbor dotted with sailing craft.

It did not seem possible there could be such a thing as fear and sorrow in such glorious surroundings.

But Norma Caldwell looked even more frightened and tragic than she had on the day before. Miss Lydia was constantly at her for some reason or other. Reporters were had arrived with innumerable boxes, and there was a constant coming and back and forth to town.

The funeral was to be the next day. Friends and relatives were beginning to arrive and gather. They weren't an excited bunch with the suicide theory, but with the shocking hint of murder. There were reporters everywhere—insolent and insistent, ready to pounce on every clue.

It was not until late afternoon that I had a word with Mac. The Sheriff Wilson. I have always wondered since how much he already knew of the things I told him.

Sheriff Wilson—rolling about like a huge boulder but never-the-less, gathering his men on all sides. Not much escaped Elisa's faded blue eyes!

"Now—let's see, young lady, we'd better check up on the time of these events. You went to your room at twelve-thirty and soon after that you heard the conversation of Mrs. Caldwell and Dixon downstairs. About fifteen minutes later you heard them come back and ask a long time to get to the front of the house. It was one-thirty when you heard Barnes go to his room. Now—you're pretty sure it was Barnes—you did not see him?"

Of course that was true.

"Now, when did you open the window, Miss?"

"I heard the clock strike two o'clock—perhaps twenty minutes after that. Then I must have gone directly to sleep."

"And then I was screamed at shortly after three." The sheriff looking thoughtfully into the distance. "Say the murder was committed around one-thirty. Barnes was out during that time and so was Eddy."

"It was Mrs. Caldwell."

He turned sharply. "Mrs. Caldwell said she was in her room."

"But she wasn't!" I blurted out. "She was down-stairs, in the library. And then I told him my word for word the conversation Mac had overheard.

"And, oh, Sheriff Wilson—don't you see? Miss Lydia hates her so and she's so anxious for them to get her. Mr. Lydia will do all she can to influence the detective, and if you believe this, he will be positive—"

"But he can't arrest her till I say so," interrupted the sheriff, "and I never make it a point to arrest anybody till I'm pretty sure they done the deed. Don't trouble your pretty head about this detective. I don't think—he uncovered a clue in that room. He was terrible sore at the way everyone had rushed in after the tragedy and destroyed all his precious finger and foot prints. And whoever had handled that gun was mighty careful to leave no damaging mark. In fact, the whole place was pretty carefully cleaned up—too carefully. Never-the-less," he winked slyly, "I picked up a few little mites of evidence before our friend got on the job—just a few little mites."

He drew in his breath with a sharp whistling sound. "Another young lady—I sh't saying Norma Caldwell is innocent of this. She's got to be made to talk some more."

"There's one other thing, Sheriff. There's something queer about this house," and she told him of Elisa's experience.

A merry twinkle came into his blue eyes. "I've known Eliza Plunkett since she was a kid in pig-tails and she allus was a mighty queer proposition, though you might not think so on first acquaintance. I expect to be mixed up in a murder is just about finishing her. She'll be seein' all sorts of things—ghosts included."

I opened my mouth to say "But I heard that laughter," and closed it again. I didn't want him to think me just a bunch of silly nerves. Perhaps I was imagining—

"You keep your eyes open, little lady. You have a chance to see and hear a lot, and these things you've told me today, some of 'em might well into the little detective. Know what I like to do winter evenings? I like to take one of them big picture puzzles all cut up in the oriolest shapes—rabbits and dogs and fishes and—and things. I've sat up till all hours of the night putting one of them things together.

"Perhaps they cost a heap of money, but there's a summer chap I got out of a fix once, and he sent me a present. Say—that's it. Well, you see—a case like this is like one of them puzzles. You fit a little word in here and a little bit in there, and after a while it begins to look like something.

"I can see you're pretty worried about young Mrs. Caldwell. You think about this. If she'd done the murder, she'd have gone back down-stairs an hour and a half later and screamed to wake up the whole house? No, she'd a kept still, and let some one find him in the morning."

He reached over and patted my hand. "Don't worry. The most important thing you've told me is about Barnes. I'm sure he already knows a lot he hasn't told and he's kinda upset about it. Got to get him talking. And there's another puzzle piece—whoever done this was mighty anxious to have it appear suicide. And somehow, I can't see Mrs. Caldwell setting the scene so careful-like. Unless—someone else went in after her—"

"Barnes!" I cried breathlessly.

He nodded. "Maybe—maybe. We'll get a long ways to go and a lota turns in the road. You keep your eyes open—and your Barnin' ear tuned in."

This talk with Sheriff Wilson did not leads of any kind. I knew only that Norma Caldwell couldn't be guilty—and right away after words I simply swilling until after the funeral to pounce on her, that was one sure thing.

I was more than busy all the rest of the afternoon and evening. Mac was out with the car until a late hour so I had no chance to tell him of my talk with the sheriff.

Mrs. Caldwell asked me if I would come to her room about eleven. It was an unusual request and I wondered a bit as I went through the hall.

She was lying in bed and I thought how desperately ill she looked.

"I'm sorry to disturb you at this late hour, Judy," she said with a faint smile, "but—there's a wound on my shoulder and I can't see to dress it, and I don't dare let the girl in—I don't want to tell anyone, but I know I can trust you not to talk, Judy. Look." She sat up in bed and slipped back her silk robe.

Across her right shoulder was a deep, ugly-looking scratch.

I gave a little gasp of amazement.

"It's really nothing to be alarmed about," she said. "You see—I must have left my screen up at the window last night and a squirrel or chip-munk must have come in. I was lying over on my face and I must have been asleep, when I suddenly felt this thing tear across me, and heard it go across the room. I was so frightened. I—I think I fainted. After a time I came to, and got up and closed the window, and I kept my light on for the rest of the night. It's just my silly nerves—any other time I would have made a big joke of it. I would, Judy," she said, as task to a whisper, "I—I heard it laugh—a horrible laugh!"

Laugh!

I had all I could do to keep from telling her of Elisa's experience, but I knew I must not add to her overwrought condition.

I bathed the wound in a hot, antiseptic solution and bound it up with gauze.

She was so dear and sweet as I thanked her and again cautioned me not to speak of it.

I was all of a tremble as I went back through the long corridor. Mac and the sheriff had both made light of Elisa's story—I just wait till I told them this! For I felt in spite of her caution, that Mrs. Caldwell knew about it.

Oh—what was it. What evil thing was lurking about this house? Squirrels could not laugh!

I opened the door into the servants' hall. This hall was dimly lighted and my heart beat faster as I hurried on to my room.

The door was open! I was sure I had closed it.

As I stepped inside and reached for the wall switch, the faint light in the hall revealed a figure outlined against my window—a tall, white figure!

I never heard that wall switch!

CHAPTER 7

Voices in the Garage

I do not know if I screamed, and I have no remembrance of how I got down these back stairs—out through the kitchen—across the porch—and down the path leading to the garage.

There was a flash of lightning and huge rain-drops splashed against my face.

"Oh, Mac—Mac! Come quick! There's a ghost—a ghost in my room!" I cried as I reached the garage door.

His room was above—I heard his voice at the window. "Judy! Judy —is that you?"

"Oh, Mac—come!"

"Just a minute, dear—I'll be right there!"

I simply fell into his arms. "It's a ghost!" I sobbed. "A tall white ghost in my room—by my window!"

And Mac shook me!

"Stop trembling, Judy! Stop it—I say! Don't be such a silly goose! There are no such things as ghosts." He shook me again.

It was the very best thing he could have done. I was so mad I bounced right out of his arms, and fairly flew up the path, with him following close behind. "I'll show you, Mac Stewart— I'll just show you!"

I must have thought ghosts walked around to be exhibited!

A light shone from the kitchen, and Mac, in his pajamas and Elisa in her curlers, her old kimono over her long white nightgown.

She peered out at us. "Judy! I never expected to frighten you, child. I knew you was with Mrs. Caldwell, and when the sudden shower came up, I went in to close your window. My sakes—how you did run down from stairs!"

"Ah-ha! Your ghost, Judy!" grinned Mac.

I could have killed him!

I was so mad I never told him a word. I just flounced right past Elisa, and the next morning at breakfast when he facetiously inquired, "See any more ghosts, Judy?" I simply ignored him. The wretch!

The night shower had brought again another wet, rainy morning, but by two o'clock in the afternoon, everything was in a hub-bub.

Mrs. Caldwell whispered to me when she came downstairs that her shoulder was much better—"thanks to your nursing, my dear." And then she asked me if I would sort of keep an eye on Eddy that day, as she did not want him to go into town.

I heard her telling him, after lunch, to stay in his room and not go tramping off in the rain. But after the family had left I saw him sneaking down the path to the boat-house.

Oh, dear—I would have to go after him and try and get him to come back. I went to my room and got into my galoshes and rain-coat and started out.

But although I collected all around the boat-house, I could not find him, and of course I was unclean to go down the pier stairway leading up to Mr. Caldwell's room and decided but nothing would have lured me to go up there, anyway.

I went down to the water's edge. The tide was in, and it was fascinating to watch the waves break over the big rocks. I jumped from one rock to another until I came to the Alcott dock, and then I climbed the steps to their place. The path led by their garage, and I was amazed to hear the sound of someone talking in the room above.

The Alcott's had no chauffeur or other help that summer, being life everyone else, in reduced circumstances. So I knew that room was unoccupied.

There were only Mr. and Mrs. Alcott and Peter in the family, and the three of them had driven into town in the forenoon.

I stood underneath the window and listened.

There came Eddy's loud voice saying about a "secret—we'll never tell," and then—laughter—that terrible, weird laughter I had heard once before!

I turned to flee, but, remembering Mac's derision, I summoned all my courage and, going around to the front of the garage, I pushed back the doors and went in. Stairs at the right ascended to the room above. I ran up and banged at the door, and called, "Eddy—Eddy!" but all was silent. I tried the knob, but the door was fastened.

Of course, Eddy could not hear, but that other—why, there was no other!

It was Eddy, talking to himself—Eddy who had laughed!

I turned then and ran away from that garage—through the path in the woods—back to the Caldwell estate. I was suddenly terribly—horribly afraid of Eddy! I felt I had put my finger on the mystery. It was Eddy—out knowing about that night of the murder; Eddy, in the dark hall, grabbing at Elisa; Eddy sneaking into his sister's room and scratching her with his long fingers; Eddy, who had killed Mr. Caldwell.

Good Advice About Constipation!

A doctor would tell you that the best thing to do with any constipation is to get at its cause. If you're constipated, don't. Drink some Smith-Sakaloff's remedies. Find out what's making you the trouble!

Chances are you won't have to look very far, if you eat, just the things most people do. Most likely, you don't get enough bulk. And "bulk" doesn't mean just a lot of food. It means the right kind of food; that's all. And "bulk" means cellulose. And you find lots of cellulose in Kellogg's All-Bran.

If this is what you lack, your trouble is crisp crunchy Kellogg's All-Bran. Eaten regularly, it relieves the "need" you need plus the intestinal bulk, Nature intended.

Eat it every day, drink plenty of water, and join the "regulars"! All-Bran is made by Kellogg in London, Canada.

WAKE UP YOUR LIVER BILE—

And You'll Jump Out of Bed in the Morning Ready to Go

The liver should pour out two pints of bile into your bowels daily. If this bile is not flowing freely, your food doesn't digest. It just decays in the bowels. Gas bloats up your stomach. You get constipated. Poisons of your decaying food are absorbed into your blood. You feel sour, sunk, and the world looks punk.

A mere dose of salts or a mineral cathartic won't get this bile flowing. You need something that will start the liver to work. It takes those mild, old fashioned Carter's Little Liver Pills to get these two pints of bile flowing freely. Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills by name. Refuse substitutes. Only 25c at all druggists. Don't be satisfied if you have no use of laxatives or cathartics to keep your bowels regular. Carter's Little Liver Pills will do this. Be sure you get them. Insist on Carter's Little Liver Pills. Only 25c.

Winners in Strenuous European Road Race

THESE attractive Frenchwomen and the Jave-born Dutchman at lower right took top honors in the 1938 running of the Monte Carlo Rally, Europe's greatest road race. The women not only won the Ladies Cup, but they drove their French Ford V-8 so skillfully on the 2,163-mile sprint from Athens that they took seventh place in the general competition. Although road and weather conditions were severe, especially over the Alps, Mme. Geo-mahe Rosard, Mme. Simone and Mme. G. Largeot reached the triumphal arch at the finish line happy and unitred, as the picture shows. Bakker Schut, of Holland, is shown beside his Ford V-8 club coupe just after he had defeated the 124 other competitors, some of whom drove the finest continental cars in the strenuous race. The remarkable showing of Ford V-8s caused wide comment in Europe. Fords took five of the first seven places and captured 13 trophies. Schut and his partner are shown in front receiving the trophy for capturing first place.

Pirates Fall by Wayside And Now in Third Place

INDIANS HOLD ON

DiMaggio Slaps His First Homer But Yanks Beaten

(By Sid Feder)
(Associated Press Sports Writer)

That annual shot in the arm Pie Traynor gives his Pittsburgh Pirates every Spring is beginning to wear off in the early season. The Paul Waner-led Pirates have gone up for that expected and awaited waltz to the mire with terrible Bill Terry's Giants.

The annual custom for the Bucs is to keep up with the opening pace a little longer than this. Last year, they waited until May 15 before they started their slump.

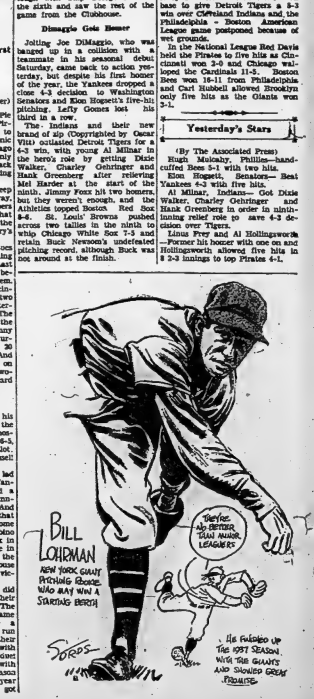
But during the week-end Cincinnati Reds topped Pittsburgh in two games, adding a 4-1 decision yesterday to Saturday's shutout. The Reds have, for the moment, the Bucs so long it stopped being funny and started to be serious. Yesterday, it was the first time after 20 straight beatings by the Pirates. And when they repeated yesterday, on the strength of Linus Frey's two-run homer, it was simply unheard of.

Pirates Down to Third

That defeat dropped Pie and his boys back to fourth place in the National League and the Cubs, nosing out St. Louis' cardinals 6-5, moved into second spot. Again it was Lazzeri and Russell who turned the trick.

Lazzeri, you remember, is the lad of 35 the Cubs got from the Yankees last winter. He clouted a two-run homer in the second inning, his fourth of the season, and Russell—well, Jack's so ancient, that he gave Babe Ruth one of the boners when they repeated yesterday, on the fourth inning and lasted the Hitchcock-against the Cub Honor gang's late drive to take the victory.

Of course, the Cubs conquest did not help matters much in their chase after Terry's Terrlers. The Giants almost kicked the game away against Brooklyn before a crowd of 40,244, but shoved a run over in the eighth to stretch their winning streak to ten straight with a 7-6 victory. Featuring the duel was Johnny McCarthy's homer with two aboard, his fourth of the season and the first heav-ho of the year for being "Scaly" Grimes. He got tough with Ump George Barr in the sixth and saw the rest of the game from the clubhouse.



Dimaggio Gets Homer

Jolting Joe DiMaggio, who was banged up in a collision with a teammate in his seasonal debut Saturday, came back to action yesterday, but despite his first homer of the year, the Yankees dropped a close 4-3 decision to Washington Senators and Ken Hogsett's five-hit pitching. Lefty Gomez lost his third in a row.

The Indians and their new brand of sip (Copyrighted by Cazar Witt) outlasted Detroit Tigers for a 4-3 win, with young Al Milnar in the hero's role by pitting Dizzie Walker, Charley Gehringer and Hank Greenberg after relieving Mel Harder at a crucial spot of the ninth. Jimmy Foxx hit two homers, but they weren't enough, and the Athletics topped Boston Red Sox 8-6. St. Louis' Browns pushed across two tallies in the ninth to whip Chicago White Sox 7-5 and retain Buck Newsom's undefeated pitching record, although Buck was not around at the finish.

Yesterday's Stars

(By The Associated Press)
Hugh Mulcahy, Phillies—handcuffed Bees 5-1 with two hits.
Elon Hogsett, Senators— Beat Yankees 4-3 with five hits.
Al Milnar, Indians— Got Dizzie Walker, Charley Gehringer and Hank Greenberg in order in ninth-inning relief role to save 4-3 decision for Indians.
Linus Frey and Al Hollingsworth —Formed the basis of the Hollingsworth allowed five hits in 9 2-3 innings to top Pirates 6-1.

Mulcahy Wins One

Most amazing performance of the day, however, was that by Hugh Mulcahy, husky flinger for the Philadelphia Phillies, nicknamed "batting pitcher Mulcahy"—describes his past performances, but he pitched a two-hitter, topped Boston Bees 5-1, and beats Jim Turner to doing it.

Yankees defeated Washington 4-2 Saturday while Chicago White Sox won 3-0 from St. Louis Browns. Rudy York homered with two on base to give Detroit Tigers a 3-2 win over Cleveland Indians and the Philadelphia - Boston American League game postponed because of wet grounds.

quick turned his pants pocket saying, Good nite all my loose money. Well we picked up 17 cents, mister, Lucky Leroy said, and the man said, All rite, keep the change, the next thing to go would of been my automobile tire and then I would of been out of luck.

And he kept on going looking like somebody's feeling, lucky, and as follows went back over the trale and Lucky Leroy was the only one that found anything else, being 2 more cents and sporting maybe he was responsible for the whole thing after all.

BEVERLEY BAXTER TO DESCRIBE OPENING EMPIRE EXHIBITION

"Moving with the news" in his coverage of the British Isles for the Canadian radio public, Beverley Baxter, M. P., follows the King to Glasgow for the opening of the British Empire Exhibition.

Tremendous commercial and industrial significance in the eyes of the entire Empire attaches to the Fair, which His Majesty today declares officially open. The distinguished Canadian-born member of the British House of Commons, speaking from Glasgow, will describe the panoply of the Royal ceremony, and the wonders of the Fair itself. Under the continued sponsorship of General Motors of Canada, this celebrated feature is presented at 5 p.m. S. T. by trans - Atlantic broadcast over station C. B. I. on Tuesday.

Little Benny's Note Book

Me and Shorty Judge and Lucky Leroy Shoonter was walking along and Shorty stopped, and I said, O boy, a cent.

Meaning me laying on the payment rite in front of me, and I hurry up stooped down and picked it up and Lucky Leroy Shoonter said, What's you know about that, all you have to do is just walk along in my presence, and you'll be lucky. It wouldn't surprize me if Shorty found something too, he said.

Being just what Shorty went and did, finding 3 cents half sticking out of a crack, and the next minute Lucky Leroy found 10 cents just as he was about to step on it, saying, That proves all the luck just comes from me being with you, so I really ought to make you pay up everything you find, half for you and half for me.

Like fun, no sir, nothing doing, me and Shorty said and Lucky Leroy said, All rite, then I got a good mind to turn around and walk the other way, then you'll find out if you find anything or not, and I'll do all my own finding. I dont need any help. What's that? he said.

Meaning a sound like money dropping, which it was, being a cent and still doling, and we all grabbed for it and Leroy got it and I said, Good nite it must all be dropping out of that man's pocket, he must have a hole.

Meaning some man rite in front of us, and Shorty said, Well, we got to ask him, according to law. And he yelled, Hay mister, have you got a hole in your pocket, are you losing money? and the man

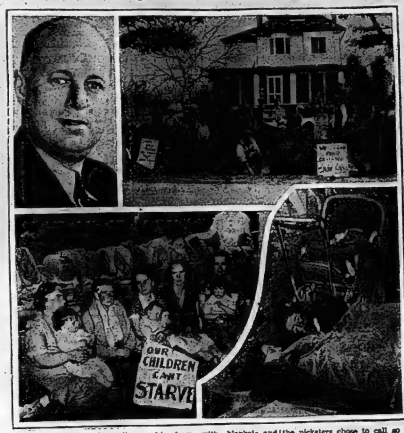
NEWS OF THE WORLD AS TOLD IN PICTURES

De Valera Marks Anniversary of Irish Rebellion



Prime Minister Eamon de Valera of Eire is shown kneeling in the cemetery of Arbour Hill barracks at Dublin as he recited the rosary for comrades who died before British firing squads for their part in the rebellion of Easter week, 1916. Behind the prime minister is a firing squad composed of survivors of the ill-fated rebellion. De Valera was sentenced to death for his part, but his sentence was commuted. Now De Valera and Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain of England have signed a new pact between their two countries which eliminates much of the traditional "hard feelings."

Russian Prince Charged With Manslaughter

Prince Alexis Dawydoff, member of the former Russian Imperial family, is pictured, still seated, dazed and bruised, at the wheel of his car after it had jumped the curb and crashed into a New York shoe store. Mrs. Margaret Abrams, wife of a Wall Street broker, is shown dead in the curb, while a third occupant of the car, Mrs. Zinovia Marning, was rushed to the hospital in a serious condition. Prince Alexis was placed under arrest on a charge of manslaughter.

Relief Recipients Picket Reeve's House

Relief demonstrators, demanding more relief, have camped on the doorstep of Reeve E. D. Maguire, of Toronto township, upper LEFT. On arriving at the reeve's home in Clarkson the demonstrators were informed that Mr. Maguire was not at home so they settled down on his lawn with blankets and food to wait for him, upper RIGHT. Some of the demonstrators brought their children with them and are shown waiting for the reeve, lower LEFT, outside the reeve's home. Mr. Maguire did not return to his home at all the day the picketers chose to call so they decided to wait through the night for his arrival. Overcome by sleep two women demonstrators curled up in blankets, against the fence surrounding Mr. Maguire's home, and spent the night sleeping under the stars, lower RIGHT.

Royal Commission Now Sitting in Ontario

Most Efficient in the World

Under Britain's re-armament program the Territorial army will be equipped with this new anti-aircraft gun. Claimed to be the most efficient of its type in the world, the new gun will fire 12 rounds a minute to a hight of six miles.

Blossom Time on Niagara Peninsula

The first blossoms of the season are beginning to make their appearance on the Niagara peninsula as evidenced by this picture. Officially blossom time will not open until about May 6, according to fruit growers, but recent warm weather has brought thousands of the blossoms out.

Winning first prize for original music compositions in a contest held by the Canadian Performing Right Society, Eldon Rathburn, LEFT, 21, of St. John N.B., will receive a scholarship covering a year's tuition and maintenance at the Toronto Conservatory of Music from Lord Tweedsmuir. Second place in the competition was won by Leonard Basham, RIGHT, 20, of Vancouver, B. C. Clermont Pepin, CENTRE, 11 - year - old French-Canadian boy from County Beauce, Que., was awarded a special prize to encourage him in following his musical education.

Dafoes Stage Reunion

A reunion of cousins was held when two well-known Dafoes met in Toronto recently, when Dr. A. R. Dafoe, physician to the Dionne Quints, and John D. Dafoe, right, editor of the Winnipeg Free Press and member of the royal commission for Dominion-provincial relations, which is now sitting in Toronto, met at the Ontario parliament buildings.

Premier Denies Change in Dionne Guardianship

Premier Hepburn has denied reports that any change in the guardianship of the Dionne quintuplets is being contemplated by the Ontario government. The reports stated that Judge J. A. Valin, RIGHT, of North Bay, would retire from the guardianship and that his place would be taken by Judge J. A. S. Plouffe, LEFT, of Nipissing district, Dr. A. R. Dafoe, CENTRE, might also resign as guardian, the reports stated, although he would remain as physician to the quints.

Star's Secretary Charged With Embezzlement

Simone Simon, Pyrch actress who has gained wide popularity in Hollywood, is shown as she affixed her signature to a felony complaint against her ex-secretary, Sandra Martin, (inset). Miss Martin is charged with embezzling $18,000 from the star's personal bank account, while Simone was on vacation in Europe. John Klein, district-attorney's investigator, is pictured with Miss Simon.

SAYS ONTARIO'S FEDERAL BURDEN TOO GREAT

Chinese Report 7-Mile Advance in South Shantung Sector

800,000 CHINESE READY TO ATTACK IN NEW ONSLAUGHT

Japanese Lines Buckle Completely Under Chinese Push

NIPPONESE RETREAT

Japanese Fail in Attempt to Wipe Out Stain of Defeat

Shanghai, May 2—(AP)—Chinese dispatches tonight reported a seven-mile advance on the southern Shantung front, focal point of the war, and declared Japanese lines had buckled completely under the Chinese onslaught.

The advance was said to be the first thrust of a general Chinese offensive, in which 800,000 men were declared ready to participate.

Scene of Major Jap Defeat

The report of the advance was made between Tsierhchwang, scene of a major Japanese defeat early last month, and Pihsien, 15 miles to the southeast, in Kiangsu Province.

In this sector the Japanese had been massing most intense efforts in their recent drive to wipe the stain of Tsierhchwang and reach the vital Lunghai railway.

Now, however, said dispatches from the front of Hankow, these Japanese forces are retreating rapidly northward.

Net is Tightened

Shanghai, May 3—(AP)—Chinese infantrymen reported in Japanese sassulks on three fortress-like villages today and then advanced their own lines a mile, in counter-attacks drawing their net tighter about Tsaohsien.

Vienna, May 3—(AP)—Salzburg Festival, as the world has known it for the last 10 years, is no more. But Austria's new Nazi masters say: "Long live the German festival in Salzburg!"

Arturo Toscanini, Bruno Walter, Max Reinhardt and the Austrian composer Schoenberg are words of music each year into a glittering International social function.

The Nazi purge of Jews has eliminated Walter and Reinhardt. Toscanini gave notice he would not participate in the 1938 festival.

ASKS IF WINDSOR RECEIVES GRANT

Duke Mentioned For First Time in Eleven Months

London, May 3—(AP)—The Duke of Windsor's name was heard in the House of Commons for the first time in 11 months when a Labor member asked if the ex-King was receiving a salary from the armed forces.

F. R. Leslie, the questioner, said he would ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, Sir John Simon, tomorrow "what position the Duke of Windsor holds in the navy, army or air force and what remuneration or emoluments he receives from those positions."

The Duke still holds the rank of Admiral of the Fleet, Field Marshal, Field Marshal of the Royal Air Force, but he lost special seniority, which gave his ashore precedence over his inferior Asia in summer; and from the interior to the ocean in winter. They are caused by the great seasonal temperature contrast between land and sea. They are found in other parts of the world but are most pronounced in Asia.

THE WEATHER

Toronto, May 3—(CP)—Synopsis —A disturbance of decreasing intensity moving northeastward across Manitoba, has caused moderate to local rain over the Prairie Provinces and thunderstorms have occurred in the region of the Great Lakes, but the weather has been fair from the Ottawa Valley eastward to the Maritimes. Pressure is low over the middle western States and an Atlantic disturbance has formed in the Jances bay region and over the Pacific States.

Lake Region: Fresh east and southeast winds; partly cloudy today and Wednesday with not much change in temperature; scattered showers.

Maritime: Partly cloudy today and Wednesday with not much change in temperature.

Saskatchewan and Alberta: Partly cloudy tonight and Wednesday; a little warmer on Wednesday.

GOV'T APPROVES FRIENDSHIP PACT WITH MUSSOLINI

Chamberlain Leaves Impression of Quick Pact With Germany

LARGE MAJORITY

London, May 3—(CP)—Approved by the House of Commons by overwhelming vote after bitter opposition criticism, Prime Minister Chamberlain's friendship pact with Italy was declared by him to be important step nearer its going into effect.

The accord, expected to be approved in the House of Lords shortly, became effective upon Italian withdrawal of her soldiers from Spain and is intended to clear up friction in the Mediterranean, North Africa and the Near East.

Mr. Chamberlain, defending the accord yesterday in the face of Liberal and Labor attack—featured by a fiery speech from David Lloyd George—told the House the Treaty signed in Rome April 16 was a great step toward avoiding European war.

Toronto Police To Discuss Ban On Certain Magazines

Toronto May 3 (CP)—Police Commission will discuss bans placed on certain magazines in Toronto at a meeting in the near future, Mayor Ralph Day said today.

Commissioner today made his decision to ban the latest issue of the United States magazine "Time," the mayor said he had read a few lines of an article and "what I read was sufficient to show me the character of the publication." He had found it "against the public good."

Cambridge, Mass., May 3 (AP)—Major Charles Lindbergh, Lucky Lindy also is city censor, today banned the last issue of a bi-weekly magazine which he said was a "scurrilous attack against a news dealer for allegedly selling obscene literature."

Leahy made plain he sought the action as a "test case." The city purchased his action on an article entitled "Los Angeles Sporting citizen," and "the filthiest thing I ever read."

FALLS 30 FEET FROM WINDOW

Kitchener, Ont., May 3 (CP)—Dorothy Wrich, aged two, suffered severe bruises in a 30-foot fall from a window in her home last night. Her condition is not regarded as serious, said Dr. H. F. Hamilton, attending physician. The child was apparently standing on a chair in front of a window at her home when she leaned out, slipped and fell.

Premier Daladier Orders Increases in Man Power

Head of Government Ruling French Nation by Decree

TAXES INCREASED

Paris, May 3—(AP)—Increases in man power for all France's armed forces were ordered today by Premier Edouard Daladier, head of the "national defence" government now ruling the nation by decree.

An edict which became law this morning demands more soldiers, sailors and aviators, along with many new sacrifices from French men to enable the nation to support the cost of the modern machinery of war.

Decrees in the same action increased France's annual tax bill by 9,000,000,000 francs ($120,000,000).

WILSON-HOUSE BREAK RELATED AFTER 14 YEARS

AUTHOR TELLS STORY

Wilson on Another Occasion Left When Lloyd George Called

New York, May 3 (AP)—Breaking a silence of 14 years, Don Sloan, author and newspaperman, disclosed in his column in The New York Sun today, Col. Edward M. House's version of his break with Woodrow Wilson in Paris in 1919 at the time of the Peace Conference.

Sloan said that House, active for the United States Government during and after the War, himself told the story to him and Dan Lee Hermann Kohlsaat, Chicago publisher, on Feb. 3, 1924, the day after dinner. With the death of House on March 28—Kohlsaat on October, 1929—Mr. Davis said he saw no reason to withhold the story.

House's Call

Davis wrote that in June, 1919, House was staying at the Hotel Crillon in Paris and that Wilson, President of the United States, was living at the residence of Clemenceau Murat. They were in frequent consultation, and one afternoon Wilson dropped in at the hotel to pass the time of day.

While they were talking, a card was brought in. "Someone for me?" asked the President. The reply, Col. House," replied the doorman, "Mr. Clemenceau is calling."

Arrival of Clemenceau

The president, Davis quoted House as saying, "arose and said: 'Let me not disturb you,' and with that, before I could protest, he hurriedly left and closed his hat and let himself out through a private exit."

House said he thought Wilson was not disturbed at the time. Later events led him to think otherwise. He remarked that Wilson was not a well man.

A few days later Wilson again called on House and was setting down some notes on a writing pad when a doorman announced that Lloyd George was calling on Col. House.

Lloyd George's Visit

"I asked that he be shown into an adjoining reception room," Davis continued. "This time the President's hurried, nervous exit with his retirement when Clemenceau

TRIBUTE PAID TO SCOTTISH PEOPLE BY KING GEORGE VI

Opens Empire Exposition on Banks of Clyde Before 100,000

QUEEN IS PRESENT

Called Remarkable Achievement And Will Promote Understanding

Glasgow, May 3—(CP)—The King opened the Empire Exposition on the banks of the Clyde today with a tribute to the "vitality and initiative" of the Scottish people.

He spoke before 100,000 in the stadium of the great steel and coalmining city built over 175 acres of Bailahouston Park.

The Queen was at his side and 5 thunderclaps rolled from the stadium as trumpets announced the arrival of Their Majesties in the open carriage.

King was in the uniform of an Admiral of the fleet and the Queen wore a pale grey and beige gown.

The King spoke for seven minutes, his voice confident and resounding. He would provide the meeting place for many nationalities and "help toward a better understanding among the peoples of the world."

Their Majesties moved at the exhibition grounds a few hours after 300 fifers and drummers had walked out in an "outlaw" strike against the Scottish Motor Traction Co. in a dispute growing out of the discharge of a conductor.

The Transport and General Workers Union, to which the striking Bailahouston bus drivers belong, refused to recognize the walkout.

The King and Queen Elizabeth were received by Lord Provost Lord Kinin, President of the Exhibition, and Lord Elibank at the sovereign said:

"The Queen and I are very happy to be in Scotland once more. We will see today the completion of the vitality and initiative of which we saw when we were last in

Colorful Hore-Belisha Seen as Prime-Minister At Some Future Day

By GEORGE HAMBLETON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

London, May 3—(CP)—In his exit, colorful personality of British politics, Leslie Hore-Belisha has both given and taken at the English language and shocked military tradition to its depths. For Mr. Hore-Belisha has a way of being unconventional. And he is a politician, by no means orthodox.

Four years ago when he became Minister of Transport, road accidents were rapidly climbing. "This massmurder must stop," was his dictum. Things started. Mr. Hore-Belisha, Transport leaped to the front page. As words of warning followed words of advice and the Ministry of Transport seemed to be for once in public department doing something at all, the energetic minister presented the Belisha Beacon to a startled world.

Belisha Beacon

The Belisha beacon was Mr. Hore-Belisha's advice to stop road accidents. Along main streets, colored globes on standards marked crosswalks where it is prohibited to park right of way. "Orange groves" scoffed the critics. "Belisha beacons" laughed the public.

And the game stuck.

In May of last year, Mr. Hore-Belisha was transferred to the War Office. For a while he was not heard of him. Still less was heard of the Ministry of Transport.

Army Reforms

The Hore-Belisha was again in the pictures. He was at army manoeuvres. Grateful press photographers recorded his plump figure sighting a gun, immortalized his smile as he stirred the soup, his air of supreme content as he cheered with the rookies.

"Mr. Hore-Belisha, you may have seen his picture in the papers," drily remarked Prime Minister Chamberlain at the annual Conservative conference. And the conference, appreciating the touch, gave another cheer.

But these were only the preliminaries. Mr. Hore-Belisha had begun game in hand. It was the army sanctions that mattered.

Revolutionary Changes

One day, in a few terse sentences, he announced a series of revolutionary changes in higher command, in equipment and ability that would be the main entitlement of promotion. "Here's the new line," he explained it.

He stretched further. He sought to popularize recruiting by improving conditions and pay. He stirred the House of Commons by promising he could see no reason why recruiting age limit should be lowered from 18 to 17. He curtailed army sports by cutting out "regimental glory" and "the game for the game's sake." For Mr. Hore-Belisha wants all soldiers to be interested in sports. But army games must not be semi-professional.

'Has Gone Far'

Then the Lords who believed Mr. Hore-Belisha had gone far afield at the head of the cabinet table in the House of Commons. He already gone far since those stirring days of 1919 when he was Attorney-General in the formation of the National Liberals.

And Mr. Hore-Belisha has a flair for politics. It is said of him that at the mature age of 10 he listened with rapture to the speeches of Winston Churchill. One minute book of "Sir Clifton School-boy Debating Society naively records that on one occasion "Hore-Belisha spoke six times and was asked not to speak any more."

New 21-Year Term For Army Career Men

London, May 3 (AP)—Leslie Hore-Belisha, Secretary for War, today announced a new 21-year term for army "career men."

It will be open to men between the ages of 18 and 24. Pensions of at least 14 shillings ($3.50) a week will follow a regular 12-year enlistment with an optional nine-year re-enlistment.

Mr. Hore-Belisha estimated the plan, which also offers increased pay and better family allowances, would cost £2,000,000 a year.

He also raised the upper age limit from 28 to 30 years for the short-term seven-year enlistment, with five years in reserve service.

There will be a medium enlistment for men up to 35 who already have completed 12 years in the regular army. It will be six years regular and six years reserve service.

Mr. Hore-Belisha put this year's goal at 53,000 new recruits.

MILLIONS WAIT TO SEE HITLER ON WAY TO ROME

Special Train Speeding Towards Rome For Visit to Duce

WELL-GUARDED

Rome, May 3—(AP)—Chancellor Hitler's special train pushed through Northern Italy today toward the Brenner Pass and into Italy today.

Bands played the German and Italian National Anthems as the train pulled into railway stations at Brennero, lavishly decorated with flowers and bunting.

The Fuehrer was up to receive the emissaries of the King Victorio Emanuele and Premier Mussolini, sent to welcome him to Italian soil.

Chief were the Duke of Pistoia, for the King, and Achille Starace, Fascist party secretary, for the Duce. Giuseppe Bastianini, foreign undersecretary for foreign affairs, represented the government.

Soldiers on Platform

There were small crowds and many soldiers. The 18th regiment of infantry was on the platform at Brennero, along with squadrons of artillery, Alpine troops, Blackshirt militia and Carabinieri.

A second train, carrying Rudolph Hess, Joachim Ribbentrop and other of the German party, followed through the pass early after Hitler's train had departed toward Rocca.

SEES NO REASON WHY PROVINCE SHOULD COMPLAIN

Commissioner Says if One Part Contributes More, it Must be Richer

EQUALITY OF TAX

Toronto, May 3 (CP)—When Dominion taxation applies uniformly to all parts of the country according to income, Commissioner J. W. Dafoe of the Rowell Commission said today he could appreciate how Ontario could complain of contributing more than its share.

If one section of the country contributed more than another it must be because its wealth is greater, he said, commenting during presentation of Ontario's brief to the Commission.

"If Ontario had the happiness of being a poor country it would not have to worry about paying a good proportion of the taxes," Mr. Dafoe suggested.

Speckled Trout Weighs 4 lb.,9 oz.

Owen Sound, May 3—The Beaver River produced a speckled trout weighing four pounds and nine ounces to win the first prize in the Owen Sound Rotary fishing contest marking the opening of the season, and which ended yesterday.

The winner was Robert Lee, Owen Sound. It was the largest speckled trout seen here in years. Lawsuit Quashed, Stands as a close second with one weighing four pounds two and four ounces, ounces, and there were many weighing more than two pounds. Never before in the history of the sport have there been so many fine trout caught at the opening of the season.

Anglers came here from all parts of Ontario and a large crowd watched the presentation of prizes after the season's first contest.

COMPULSORY VOTING REJECTED BY 18 TO 3

Ottawa, May 3 (CP)—Two votes were taken in the House Committee on electoral matters today and in both cases the committee re-affirmed its opposition to the principle. The first was on compulsory voting, against which the committee had gone on record in 1937.

Today, it asserted by 18 to 3 its stand against compulsory voting and by 16 to 4 it endorsed its decision of last year rejecting the alternative vote in single member constituencies.

PROVINCE PAYS 45 P.C. FEDERAL TAX COLLECTIONS

Receives Only 30 Per Cent of Dominion Expenditures

COMMISSION TOLD

Federal Tax Revenue in Ontario 30 to 50 P. C. Higher Than in Quebec

By CARL REINKE
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Toronto, May 3—(CP)—The people of Ontario have carried more than their share of the financial burden or confederation, in the opinion of the Ontario government.

They have carried an increasing proportion of the Dominion tax load in recent years, so that the province is receiving only 30 per cent of all Dominion tax collections while contributing 45 per cent of federal expenditures, Chester Walters, Deputy Provincial Treasurer of Ontario, told today before the Rowell Commission.

No Subsidy to Ontario

The province recognized that transfers of taxes from one part of the country to another were "inevitable and just" in a federal state, he said, "Ontario has never shirked its fair share of responsibilities in carrying the burdens of confederation. But the figures show that the suggestion, sometimes made by certain other provinces and in other briefs that Ontario does not pay its fair share of taxation are both inaccurate and ungenerous."

The provincial tax load, the Dominion tax load falling on Ontario had increased steadily from 40.4 in 1928-29 to 46.3 in 1936-37, he said, while that on the prairies had fallen steadily from 11.3 per cent in 1928-29 to 10.3 per cent in 1936-37. Percentages of total Dominion revenue coming from the Maritimes, Quebec and British Columbia had remained fairly steady.

POLICE DEPARTMENT BUYS NEW FORD

Belleville police will ride in a shiny new Ford sedan purchased today, the Belleville Police Commission ratifying the purchase of a new police car at their last meeting. Tenders were received by the Commission last year following which a new Ford sedan was purchased. The car will be used by the police radio, will be trunk station, at call 2.2.3., until subsequently, be placed in the new police car.

PARKS BOARD TO PLACE MANY TREES

Endeavouring to fulfill the numerous requisitions for the replacement of young trees throughout the city, the Belleville Parks Commission met last evening and voted to place out as many young saplings as they have at hand.

The evening's agenda consisted for the greater part, of routine business, but included a motion to redecorate the buildings at Victoria Park. With Commissioner C. J. Symons in the chair, the Board paused a motion to meet at 3 time at strategic points throughout the city within the next fortnight. Other requirements of the park in the city, where it has been necessary to remove old ones, will be made as soon as subsequent shipments are received.

Tree trimming and the planting of floral gardens in the city parks is the order of business as the Parks Commission at this particular season of the year, however.

BELIEVE YOUNGSTERS STARTED GRASS FIRE

Fire thought to have been started by prankish youngsters in grass near a residence at 104 West Moira Street yesterday afternoon gave firemen a busy fifteen minutes before it was finally subdued.

A chimney fire at the corner of West Bridge and Ann Street caused some concern last night, but prompt action on the part of the firefighters averted any serious damage.

ACCUSED MAN GIVES SELF UP

Arthur Meeks, wanted by the Belleville police on a serious charge was not in Montreal as stated in the Monday issue, of the Ontario Intelligencer, but he came voluntarily from Napanee, where he was working on a farm and gave himself up to the police. The error made is herewith corrected.

SPEED LAWS ALSO APPLY TO HARBOR

First cases of boat speeding in the Belleville harbor have been complained of by other boat owners whose craft are on the water, and whose anchorage is threatened by the waves of the fast boats. It is pointed out by the local Harbor Commission that slow speed regulations govern water traffic in and out of the harbor and that these must be kept free of all anchored or moored craft.

HUMANE SOC. AWAITS FIRST COMPLAINTS

Annual report of the city auditor to report any abuse or neglect of work horses, dogs, cats, livestock and who will pass it to the local official queries in which to lodge protests and complaints, are advised that the telephone number of the Belleville Humane Society will in future be the home of the superintendent, Dr. R. W. Tennent; phone 2.2.3., or the police station.

NAPANEE YOUTH SUFFERS EYE INJURY

In one of the first fishing accidents of the season, Percy Green, 17 year old Napanee youth, on Sunday had his left eye so severely injured by a fish hook that it became necessary to take him to the Kingston General Hospital where Dr. Polgreen was forced to remove it. The youth had been walking down an incline near there when it is believed he tripped and fell, with the end of the pole penetrating the eye.

United States where prices on the ton of anthracite coal have risen 50c the ton, a further tax of ten cents the ton on United States railways has also been announced. It is believed, locally though no definite statements were given that this will effect the cost of Belleville delivered coal some 50 or 60 cents per ton. Added to the troubles of the local dealers is the fact that supplies at present are reportedly low.

"We can't absorb all the costs, so it is likely that the customer will have to pay it," stated the manager of one of the larger fuel firms of the city. "The trouble is over there, they don't know when to stop. How long is plenty high enough and further rises will only mean hardship to Belleville people."

228 DOG TAGS SOLD TO DATE

Local police today revealed the application for dog licences are not being received with the usual promptness of previous years. The issuing of dog tags for the current year opened on March 15th, but to date only 228 local dog owners have procured their 1938 dog tag. At a corresponding date one year ago a total of 475 had been purchased by dog-owning citizens. The police department, through which the dog tags are issued, merely wished to bring the point before the public. Last year a total of 651 dog licences were sold in Belleville they revealed, leaving the present issue of 228 far in decrease to last year's final figure.

'LUNGE FRY SHIPPED TO NORTHERN LAKES

Heaviest culture in years, the local Government Fish Hatchery east of the city now contains an estimated total of 4 million rapidly-hatching spawn of the muskellunge reared here from lunge spawn being received from the Lakefield district.

Hundreds of the tiny, wriggling fish are being shipped daily to points throughout the north from the hatchery by trucks, as fast as hatching from the eggs develops. North Hastings lakes will receive many of the consignments.

Other varieties of fish now being bred at the hatchery include 40 million pickerel and an estimated 600,000 lake trout which will also be liberated through the north.

A new department at the hatchery this year is the culture of nearly five million whitefish which are being reared in the outside basin and long fish for the eggs. The spawn of this fish is being received from the Napanee River where the heaviest spawn runs on record is reported this year.

LOCAL YACHTING CLUB SHOWS IMPROVEMENT

Considerable improvement, inside and out, has been effected by members of the Belleville Yachting and Athletic Club on the waterfront clubhouse this Spring. New docking space has been added and a firm, wooden platform and anchoring posts have been put in. Interior work has included the construction of lockers, while considerable redecorating is also to be carried out in the lower section of the building by members of Jas. Cook.

The first water sports and boat owners' general meeting will be held in the clubhouse Wednesday evening.

NO SAILING PLANS FOR YACHT ORIOLE

The Gooderham-owned yacht, the Oriole, berthed at the government dock for several years past and now being given its annual Spring overhaul, will not sail this summer unless some new owner purchases her, Capt. Millette has intimated this morning by Captain Bateman, who by a few short trips were made by the steamer last year in order to spread the canvas.

FIVE MILLION FRY PUT IN CROWE BAY

Consigned from the Glenora Hatchery, a total of five million pickerel fry were placed in the waters of Crowe Bay, near Picton, Ontario, this week. Arrangements have been made to further replenish the Crowe Bay waters with 2,000,000 lunge and 200,000 bass this month, and in June.

FREIGHT ROBBERY INVESTIGATED HERE

Manufactured goods of unestimated value, but believed to run into hundreds of dollars were discovered by Canadian National Railway police of the local division to have been stolen from the C.N.R. freight cars in Peterborough over the week end.

The thieves broke the seals of eleven of the string of cars on the siding and the goods quietly loaded by the right-of-way, it is believed. The cars are to be taken to Belleville where an examination and inspection will be made and extent of the loss determined.

Arthur Jones Returns to City After Wintering in Florida

Used Sides of Trailer to Advertise Attractions of Hastings County

HAD INTERESTING TRIP

With the tan of Florida suns and not winds of southern climes giving him the appearance of a picture of health, Arthur Jones, advertising manager for the extraordinary for Belleville and Hastings County, arrived in the city yesterday culminating a trip that covered five thousand miles, one hundred and eighty-one miles, through, as he puts it "the heaviest traffic in the world" and scratching a fender."

Recorded the last few miles of his lengthy trip from the south by Traffic Motorcycle Officer Douglas Ellis of the Belleville Police Department, he was afforded the welcome of his native city in front of the city hall by his Worship Mayor Jamieson Bros., Chief of Police Alex. Kidd and a number of friends upon arrival shortly before three o'clock.

Representing what he described as the "best publicity stunt in the world," was the comfortable trailer in which Mr. Jones lived under Floridian skies during the two Winter months. Lavishly covered with printed advertising illustrating the beauties and attractions to the Amusements touring Belleville and the County of Hastings, "the home on wheels" included everything for the comfort of the occupant.

Mr. Jones was soon the centre of an admiring crowd of his former associates in this city among whom he distributed a number of tropical gifts as souvenirs of his trip.

The author of several articles published during the Winter months in the Ontario Intelligencer, Mr. Jones travelled extensively among the main points of the southern state in order materially for his literary efforts. Principal among these was the gorgeous Festival of Sarasota, graphically described in one article while another colorful event "covered" by the roving writer was the professional tennis match played by Fred Perry and Bunny Austin, British and American champions respectively.

All-Star Scholars Will Present Program for Beaches

Entertainment Committee Arranges Concert For Friday Evening

IN COLLEGIATE HALL

Finest Amateur Talent of City Schools to Take Part

Arrangements are fast being completed by the Entertainment Committee of the Belleville —Beaches Association for the all-star concert and review for citizens of the Belleville district being held by school children of the city's public schools, St. Michael's Academy and the Collegiate and Vocational Institute, in the Collegiate auditorium the evening of May 6th at eight o'clock.

The concert being held to provide funds for further civic beach construction east of the city, is expected to be one of the best presented Belleville and district has seen. The success of the concert is indicated by the fact that all acts presented by the combined school will be selected from the most successful concerts held by the schools during the past period. All star cast will be used. It will be the first time Belleville and district residents have been privileged to see such combined talent.

Funds for the beach are badly needed and the Beaches Association has taken this means of raising money to carry on. Lately considerable interest has been aroused among residents of the city over the project, and local civic and fraternal associations have taken hold in an effort to assist. Worthy of mention is the Belleville Horticultural Society which has arranged an auction sale, dance and planting program, much of which has already been carried out on the beach which has fast taken shape this Spring.

Those comprising the entertainment committee of the Beaches Association are hopeful of the success of the concert, acts of the calibre of Rose Silver; Dr. V. Blakelock; Alderman Laurie Lewis and A. B. Baird.

Capt. Millette Presents Pins At Conclusion of Inspection

Cadet R. Kerr Gets Gold Medal in Shooting Competition

PRAISES CADET CORPS

Reviews Demonstrations by Queen Victoria and King George School Cadets

"Public School Cadet Corps of Belleville compare favorably with similar corps of cities of its size", Captain P. J. Millette, headquarters staff, Military District No. 3, stated today at the conclusion of his inspection of the cadets at Bridge, Mary, Queen Alexandra, Queen Victoria and King George Public Schools.

Favorably impressed with the showing made by the corps of the city, Captain Millette added that additional credit is due the cadets in view of the fact that their training time was limited. "They are the youngest corps of the kind to be seen in the Collegiate Institutes of the province and Belleville is to be congratulated on the fine showing and appearance of its public school cadets."

Completing his inspection today Captain Millette reviewed the corps of King George and Queen Victoria schools, where cadets went through the various formations of battalion, company and platoon drill. As King George School, the cadet corps was under the instruction of Cadet Instructor C. A. Brown. Here as in other cases, the high standard of youths gave physical training demonstrations in conjunction with the cadet drill. No first aid demonstration was given at this school although cadets have undergone intensive construction in this important phase of cadet training.

Results of shooting competitions will be made public at a later date, Mr. Brown stated.

Queen Victoria School

Shooting a smallbore and execution of manoeuvres that marked them as being one of the better corps of the city, Queen Victoria Public School cadets under the command of Cadet Captain A. Rigby gained the admiration of a representative crowd of spectators and fellow students as they marched before the inspecting officer and members of the board of Education shortly after ten o'clock today.

Trained by Captain J. E. Bateman, A.L.I., the cadets, constituting the largest corps in the city executed the various formations of platoon and company drill, general salute and other manoeuvres.

A signal corps under Cadet-Lieut. M. Carson wig-wagged colorful semaphore flags following the corps' inspection while a bugle-light of the affair was a demonstration of first-aid given by this department of the corps. A physical training demonstration under Captain Bateman, in which were incorporated several games drew the plaudits of the crowd.

Following the inspection and various demonstrations, prizes and awards were made to cadets of the school in the various competitions. Awards were made as follows, announced by:

Cadet Instructor—Captain J. E. Bateman.

Captain A. Rigby in command of the company.

Platoon Commanders— No. 1—Lt. J. L. Carter; No. 2—Lt. R. Kerr; No. 3—Lt. J. Gardner; No. 4—Lt. Spring; Signals—M. Carson; Sgt.-Maj. R. Howe.

Platoon Sgts.—No. 1 Sgt. T. Leyenaar; No. 2 Sgt. A. Robinson; No. 3—Sgt. J. Mills; No. 4—Sgt. Bruce; Signals—Sgt. D. Cherrie.

First Aid Demonstration

Cpl. A. Jay in command.

Pins and Medals Presented

Presenting the handsome medal of gold, bronze and silver pins for shooting efficiency and proficiency petitions, the inspecting officer again congratulated the cadets on their ability with rifle over the ranges. Cadet R. Kerr, with the Gold Medal and Pin, gained the highest Rifle Association for the highest score made in the school. Cadet R. Kerr compiled the fine average of 88.3 per cent. out of a possible 100. Other awards follow:

Bronze Medals for 85 per cent. average—R. Kerr by 88 per cent.; J. Gardner 88.3 per cent; J. Mills 86.3 per cent.; G. Theobald 87.1 per cent.; Cpl. Bigby 87.1 per cent.; A. Geen.

Dominion Marksmen Association Pins—Bronze Pins for shooting ten targets of 75 per cent. or over—Cpl. Bigby; Cadet R. Kerr; G. Theobald; J. Salz; J. Gardner; W. Price. Presented by Lt.-Col. Beverly Gribble, E.D.

Silver Pins for shooting ten targets of 86 per cent. or over—Cadets —A. Bigby; B. Kerr; J. Mills; J. Geen.

Strathcona Silver Medal for best shot of last years rifle shooting—Cadet H. McCowan. Presented by Chas. Hyde, chairman, Board of Education.

Obituary

MRS. HELEN A. RUTTER

After an illness of one week's duration Mrs. Helen Attilla Rutter, widow of George A. Rutter, died at her residence, Camilton Road, Trenton, on the Belleville General Hospital on Monday afternoon, May 2. Friends will regret to learn of her death.

The late Mrs. Rutter, who was in her 71st. year, was born in Murray Township, Northumberland County, her parents being the late Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Cooney. For some time she resided at Montreal View in Prince Edward County and for the past twenty-six years she made her home in the city. In religion she was a member of the United Church in Camilton and was well respected.

Surviving her are two daughters, Miss Attilla Rutter at home, and Mrs. Arthur Mumby of Corbyville; two sons, Percy Rutter, Belleville, and Clinton Rutter at home; one sister, Mrs. Emma Cooney, Brighton, Ont.; one brother, William Cooney of Trenton, Ont.

The funeral announcement is made elsewhere in this paper.

MRS. ADAM L. HOUGH Stirling

Stirling, May 3 (Special) — Mrs. Adam L. Hough, highly respected resident of Stirling for the past 55 years, died in Kingston on Monday after an illness which had extended for nearly ten months. The late Mrs. Hough was formerly Theresa Butler, being the daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. James Butler and was born in Belleville 74 years ago. Since residing in Stirling the deceased took an active part in the social and church life of the community and was well and favorably known to a large number in the community who will exceedingly regret her death. She was a member of the United Church. Left to mourn is a husband, one son, James, principal of Deseronto Collegiate and two daughters, Mrs. W. J. Whitty, and Mrs. Henry Tulloch of Stirling; nine grandchildren and two great grandchildren. The funeral will be held on Wednesday at 2.30 in the United Church with interment in Stirling cemetery. Rev. W. J. Scott will officiate at the service and the pall bearers will be Edward Palmer, Edward Fraser, W. Anderson, Charles Linn, Alex. Parks and E. Morrow.

MRS. KENNETH McGOWAN Huntingdon

Huntingdon, May 3 (Special) — Word was received in this district this week of the sudden death of Mrs. Kenneth McGowan of Rochester, N.Y., and formerly of Stockdale, to which city on Monday, she deceased was the former Bessie Verna Hall and was a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Reid, Murray Township, she being born 39 years ago at Stockdale. It is understood the late Mrs. McGowan suffered a stroke and expired in a very short space of time. The deceased was a member of the United Church and leaves to mourn, her husband, Kenneth and James Reid McGowan, three months old; two brothers, Leonard and Harold Reid, both at home; Mrs. Arthur Mirs, Carter of Belleville; Mrs. Phillips of Codrington; Mrs. John Wickens of Murray Township, and Lois and Comile at home. No arrangements have been made for the funeral but it is expected the body will be brought to Stockdale for interment.

Mealtime In School Discussed

Lunch Hour Is Time to Teach Table Manners

By GARRY C. MYERS, PH. D.
Head Department Parent Education, Cleveland College, Western Reserve University

MANY CHILDREN take their meals at school cafeteria. Usually there is bedlam when they eat; very little that is suggestive of culture and refinement.

In many schools the lunch period could be made longer, or spread over several periods, so there would be less crowding, less confusion, less haste. Non-metallic trays would reduce clatter.

Suppose a teacher were host or hostess at everyone or several tables. "Hard on the teacher," you say, yet the lunch period might be counted as a teaching period. Certainly it would be made more profitable for real education than any regular teaching hour.

I came across one school in which mothers volunteered as hostesses. The presence of a cultivated woman creates a refining atmosphere. While it might be hard to make the very large cafeteria a place for learning the social graces, there could be much improvement. Commendably, some student bodies through their student council conduct a civilizing program in the cafeteria. In the smaller schools it should be relatively easy to introduce refinement at the lunch hour. I wonder why more school principals have not done something about it, and why P. T. A's and women's clubs have not manifested more interest in this problem.

College Dining Halls

I shall never forget a dinner hour I enjoyed in the dining hall of the Mississippi State College for Women. There was an atmosphere of self-control and culture that was very inspiring. Most of the young ladies in that school go out to teach. See what a refining influence on the boys and girls they meet. But as I recall scores of other college dining halls, including teachers' colleges and small liberal arts colleges, in which I have eaten, the total memory is one of crudity and uncouthness. And the boarding halls of some of the athletic training tables!

It seems to me that of all the need for educational reform, none is more urgent than that of introducing more refinement into the college dining halls. A good place to begin this reform is in some of the dining halls of the state teachers colleges, since they reach indirectly so many of our children. Also many men and women from the church colleges go into teaching. Whether they teach or not, good manners in this widest sense would be very available to them. After all, the exercise of good manners is basically the exercise of great consideration and regard for the rights and feelings of others—the spirit of the Sermon on the Mount. Many Christian colleges might grow more deserving the name "Christian" if they to introduce more of the niceties of social grace into their dining halls. What do you think about it?

On 12th the Vienna newspaper "Echo" wrote:

"Who used to be in the audience? Who stood at the director's podium? Foreign Jews! Who staged Goethe, conducted Mozart, played the roles of German heroes? Jewish emigrants!

"Remember we German Austrians were wall flowers at our own Salzburg festival. We arrived there afoot, on bicycles, or third class on railroads, and they stuck the sign "sold out!" before our doors."

"To Germans Alone"

After a diatribe on "half-naked Parisiennes, Viennese Jewesses and flaxen-yellow Englishwomen" in former Salzburg audiences, "Echo" continued:

"Let us rejoice over the new Salzburg. It will—for the first time—belong to us Germans alone. And if we invite foreigners, let them regard themselves as guests, not as masters of the house."

A wise man once said there are two ways to save money: "Increase your income, or cut down your outgo."

Much as we'd like to, few of us can regulate the amount of money we take in each week... But all of us have control over what we spend. And many a family bank account has been made possible by CAREFUL SPENDING.

That's why it will pay you to read the advertisements in this newspaper. Day after day they show you where to get the things you need . . . where to get the fullest dollar's worth for every dollar you spend.

A careful reading of the advertisements . . . today, tomorrow, and every day after . . . will help you to do something that we'd all like to do:

BUY WHAT YOU WANT — AND HAVE MONEY LEFT OVER!

Police Blotter

A nightly average of slightly over 12 transients, seeking shelter at the police station for the month of April was announced by police officials today. A total of 377 transients signed the register at the police station for the month of April, 1938, a slight decrease over the same month of the previous year, however. Last night 23 were given lodging at the police station.

Police throughout the district have been busy checking motor vehicle brakes and generally enforcing the various Highway Traffic laws with the advent of warmer weather. The department has issued orders that all licence plates must be kept clean and visible, with a penalty to those who fail to adhere to this section of the law," warned police officials today.

Local police apprehended a Belleville man yesterday and held him in custody regarding the recent breaking, that has occurred on the East Hill of late. "The matter is still under investigation and we have nothing to report," added police when referring to the subject today.

Rules for Week-End Guests

Betty Furness
A perfect week-end guest

By JULIET SHELBY

Central Press Writer on Beauty

WEEK - END invitations that come about this time of the year are a real thrill. The lure of the country gets you, and you just naturally want to get out where things are green and buds are bursting. Even though your out-of-town friends love you dearly, it's important to be as nearly the perfect guest as possible.

To a constant guest you've got to do more than look pretty and not mix with your knife. And on the other hand, don't act like you have been hired to put on an act. Do a lot of listening, and when you talk say something either interesting or amusing.

If you are adept at sports and games, don't cry like a sick cat if you fail to win. And if you are just no good at all pick out one of the timid young men on the house party. He will teach you.

Be willing to stay up late, admire that scenery get up early and talk to your hostess' relatives and children. Forget about bumpy beds, meals at different hours from those you are accustomed, and a possible wait for your bath.

Another important item that is a necessity if you want to have a return engagement, is to take the things you need. Pick the correct clothes. If you don't know your hostess very well, ask one of your friends who has been there before. Don't wear afternoon clothes when everyone is in sports clothes, and don't come down to dinner in slacks if everyone is dressing for dinner.

Take Own Cosmetics

You should also take your own cosmetics. Nothing is as hard on the friends you visit than constant borrowing. Pack up a little kit just for those things. There are lots of them on the market, but you can also get a little bag, rubber lined, that will fit into your big bag.

Put in your tooth brush, tooth paste, soap and wash cloth. Take a face powder for daytime, and a lighter shade for evening. Drag along your little makeup too. It will make you look more exotic for evening if you apply eyeshadow, mascara and pencil. It will be an interesting change from the healthy-looking outdoor girl you were all day. Don't forget your sunburn lotion, your cold creams and eye lotion or your night creams. And above all things, don't forget to take plenty of facial tissues.

Thus equipped you'll be a great success if you will be tactful enough not to flirt with your hostess' husband or beau.

appeared, was indeed definite.

"There is no reason Mr. Lloyd George should be kept waiting," he said, carefully folding his notes and placing the sheaf in his breast pocket. "Nothing that I had to hand is of the least importance, I assure you."

That was the end of my long and intimate friendship with Woodrow Wilson. Whether or not he resented my association with Clemenceau and Lloyd George at a time when he was the accredited leader of thought and exposition for the United States is for you gentlemen to reflect upon as you see fit. The facts are as stated."

Smart Accessories Are Needed To Make Any Costume Stunning

By Central Press

ACCESSORIES count, indeed, in this season of style whimsies. Hats and bags, gloves, jewelry, shoes and hose all add immensely to the chic of any costume.

Checked tweed is back for sporty afternoon wear, and it makes the smart suit pictured.

A severe black bonnet with turned-up brim is given a colorful reminder of the season by the enameled pastel tulip clip by Monet which decorates it.

Flared washable doeskin gloves by Fabor of Paris, and a large black suede bag with monogram formed of gold short and long letters, and a long chain to be worn over the shoulder, completes the costume.

A real fight between the coat and the suit makes for a great variety of fashions. Little to fear from any suit when a coat is as massive as a fitted double-breasted reefer in navy blue woollen with white pique underlining, heart-shaped revers and crescent-shaped pockets.

DISCUSS ANGLO—FRENCH NAVAL CO-OPERATION

During a recent visit to Paris, Alfred Duff Cooper, RIGHT, first lord of the British admiralty, was photographed with French Minister of the Navy Campinchi. It was suspected at that time that the two men talked on closer co-operation between their respective navies in case of war. Shortly after this meeting, French and British statesmen met in London and announced specific plans, involvin pooling of military and economic resources, in case of war, as an answer to the threat of the "isms" in Europe.

PROVINCE PAYS

Federal Revenue Per Capita

Dominion tax revenues in Ontario per head of population were about the same as in British Columbia, $50.37 and $47.57 respectively, 30 to 50 per cent higher than Quebec and more than double that of the Maritimes. They were 25 to 30 per cent higher than the Prairies before the depression and have been about double that of the Prairies for the last six years.

Dominion revenues collected and expenditures made in the five regions last year were as follows, with percentages in brackets: Maritimes 6.2 per cent (13 per cent); Quebec 24.4 per cent (22.5 per cent); Ontario 45.3; (30.2); Prairies 15.3 (25.6); British Columbia 8.7 (8.2).

Deficits Mean New Debts

Deficits meant additions to the government debt, because much of them in the long run was borne by such taxes in proportion to its contributions, Mr. Walter said. So the net result of Dominion government finances has been to transfer $75,000,000 or $80,000,000 from Ontario for the benefit of the Maritimes and Prairies.

In addition there were Dominion loans totalling $131,980,000 outstanding against the Prairies from the past seven years which would probably be written off—with Ontario bearing 45 per cent of the load.

Ontario, B. C. Bear Most Taxes

Totalling Dominion, Provincial and Municipal taxation, he found Ontario and British Columbia were the most heavily taxed area in Canada, with per capita rates of $104 and $109 respectively. Quebec was $67, the Prairies $61 and Maritimes $48.

"It is admitted of course that the real burden of taxation is a function of income and that during the past eight years per capita income has probably been higher in Ontario and British Columbia than in other parts of Canada," he said. "Income on the Prairies probably compares favorably with that in Ontario in prosperous years. Unquestioned it has been depressed in the past since 1930."

As far as Ontario provincial finance was concerned, he noted the total cost of government in 1920 was $8.44 per head, or $7.32 with offsetting interest from revenue-producing assets deducted. By 1930 the figure was $18.95, or $15.61 less interest receipts. Between 1930 and 1937 there was another increase of $4.33.

BEACHES AND PARK SCHEME

It is to be hoped that the Beaches project gets off to a fine good start early this spring. With the cooperation of the people the committee has this year every hope of making the largest contribution to the development of the plan in any year so far.

With the one thousand-foot-long beach and the park extending for three thousand seven hundred and fifty feet, which is estimated as one third of Belleville waterfront, there is in the whole background as far back as the railway track. Soft maples are being put in along the roadway which winds through the grounds. And a large number of pines are being set out throughout the park grounds. These trees are the fine contribution of the Belleville Horticultural Society to the beach and park scheme. Reaction of what this will mean even if it is only in the growth which nature supplies, brings up visions of a lovely grounds and wooded area and beach at which the citizens of Belleville can spend their spare hours or holidays.

Two things are necessary, offers of filling material and money donations. If citizens have material which they are having taken from their grounds, they may make a fine contribution in having it delivered at the beach. Cash donations would speed up the work, assisting in blasting operations which are necessary for drainage and such like.

The committee reports a growing public support of the scheme and is confident that its proposals will receive every sort of cooperation and aid, necessary to give Belleville what nature has in large measure made possible. Especially are such assets as public beaches and parks are outspoken in their belief that no city has so fine an opportunity for development of a recreational area as Belleville has in these grounds.

The committee should have every assistance in their unselfish work in endeavoring to create in this spot something of which Belleville now and generations hence will be proud.

There is the site, much has been done in building the beach and laying out the park, but much remains to be done.

Those who are interested—and all should be interested—should visit the grounds and see what has been accomplished. If they do they will all be advocates of the project.

INSPIRING STORIES

Port Arthur News Chronicle votes to do honor to the names of writers of books for boys a generation or more ago, such men as Horatio Alger, G. A. Henty and Harry Castleman. They provided sustenance for the mind and soul. The stories of youth who went with Clive to India, Wolfe to Quebec, and many others of similar historic events, without a doubt provided inspiration for many a lad of other days. Horatio Alger wrote books for boys and through the media of "Ragged Dick" and "Tattered Tom" and a score of other heroes sought to encourage youth in its adversities of all sorts and in conspiracies and, throubh indomitable will, always came out on top."

The News Chronicle says that it seems a "great deal could be bained by those in charge of the training of youngsters if they could find a means of extracting from these old stories the message of honor, courage, determination and chivalrous spirit to be gathered from almost every page."

Even today many of these stories can be read by those in middle life and older who feel the urge they felt so many years ago.

Of course much may be sure—these books were pure in thought, and could be trusted in the hands of the young. Of some books today, mainly for adult reading however, the same cannot be said, for they have something undesirable about them, a desire to show the sordid and something worse than sordid side of life. These books which the News Chronicle praises are not of that kind, but are rich in inspiration for boys in overcoming obstacles of station in life and triumphing over limited opportunities.

"I conceive the first duty of government is to protect the economic welfare of all the people in all sections and in all groups" —Franklin D. Roosevelt.

RAIN

In the magic of the rain-drenched dusk, gray streets and empty pavements
Are changed to rippling rivulets of glistening red and gold.
The air is faintly redolent and filled with expectation
And tiny blades of tender green break through the warm, wet mould.

In the beauty of the rain-cleansed dusk, when the magic shower is over,
The birches steal spun silver from the low moon's lingering beams,
While rich and full upon the air a robin sings in rapture
And deep within a drowsy pool a captured planet gleams!

THIS IS RED CROSS WEEK, the annual roll call for subscriptions to this very worthy work. Belleville always does its share to support the Red Cross and the local organization has set the figure of one thousand dollars as the objective for this year, and that is little enough considering the many calls upon the funds of the organization in this era of wars and rumors of war, in addition to the hospital work carried on along the far-flung outposts of Empire. Pioneer work of the Red Cross in Canada's far north where hardy prospectors and adventures are forever pushing back the line of settlement is amazing in its efficiency and self-sacrifice—the Red Cross is functioning and saving lives and alleviating pain where otherwise much suffering and loss of life would result. Courageous prospectors, fighting the hardships of the wilderness are opening up vast riches in natural resources which will benefit the entire nation and it is well that these loving officers were elected: President, Col. THE PLAIN TRUTH

The little man was tearing down the street at top speed. A long way behind him toiled the landlord of the local inn. At the corner the policeman stood, regarding the scene with a smile.

"Why didn't you stop him?" panted the landlord, as he drew alongside the man in blue.

The policeman looked surprised.

"He told me you were racing him for the price of a drink."

"So I am" shouted the landlord 'He hasn't paid for it!'

The Farm Up-to-Date

Helping to make rural life more attractive than in the past, with the hope of keeping young people on the farm and make farming and its kindred branches their life work, is the aim of the Junior Farmers' organizations.

Junior Farmers' clubs and institutes have become a strong feature of the rural life of today. Years ago it was said the country boy and girl could not interest themselves on the farm. Today there are as interesting times and as delightful social gatherings there as in the city. They are fewer, of course, a decidedly desirable factor.

It is an old saying that if the girls can be persuaded to remain on the farm and the life can be made pleasing and desirable, the drudgery eliminated, and city conveniences enjoyed, then the boys could not be driven from the farm. The saying may be considered generally true.

Then, to enable girls to make farm life attractive as well as profitable, they have to be helped by those who have had a scientific study of the subject. And this applies to the boys as well. The Junior Farmers' work is effecting a transformation that is pleasing. The girls are being taught the theory and practice of household duties. They are shown how dairying on a small scale can be made a delightful occupation, the making of clothes as nice as professional dressmaking, the science of cooking dishes that are tasty and healthful and the cultivation of all those fine qualities of womanhood. These are taught, and the boys learn how agriculture can be made a delightful, and profitable, occupation. The old methods that made farming distasteful are no longer appeal.

Rural boys are being given practical demonstrations in the principles of farm practice. Encouraged to raise pure stock of their own and exhibit at the fall fairs, they learn to take a keen interest in everything about the farm.

It is timely that the government of Ontario is giving the welfare of rural youth. Agriculture is the backbone of the country, and in Ontario it is strong right arm. In the cities provided for young people, but until comparatively recently the rural schools have been more or less neglected, except for the imparting of the essentials of education. Today there are many of the cities who envy the country boys their health and vigour and the independence of life and work.—Guelph Mercury.

The Niagara Falls Observation Bridge

Following is a Memorandum by Premier Hepburn Giving an Explanation With Regard to The Controversy Over The Application For The Niagara Bridge Charter

The Province of Ontario has recently spent large sums of money constructing new improved highways leading to Niagara Falls and connecting up with the vast highway net work throughout the province. These important highway connections at Niagara Falls are of particular importance in view of the enormous number of tourists who are attracted to the falls and other Canada at that point. The Province has also spent large sums in developing and beautifying the area in that neighborhood through the medium of the Niagara Parks Commission. It was realized some time ago that in view of the large investment, and the number of highways and through the Park Commission, and by reason of the great importance of this point of entry for American tourists, that it was essential that a modern and proper bridge be constructed which would adequately handle the present and future traffic, and at the same time provide modern and adequate facilities for the millions of tourists who visit this spot. It was realized that the existing Falls View Bridge was entirely inadequate to handle the present traffic and also it was believed that this bridge was not entirely safe and created a danger. As a result of this appreciation the Parks Commission obtained reports from competent engineers which confirmed that the old bridge was inadequate for present traffic. In the meantime the apprehensions held in this regard became heavier and heavier as time sped. The old bridge was constructed during the war period and after the collapse of the former bridge which the same owners, The International Bridge Company, had previously constructed at that point.

It is conceded that the present bridge construction, in order to keep four lanes of traffic moving, that the approaches to the bridge so that traffic may fan out immediately upon the customs and immigration inspections will not check the movement of traffic thereon. The old bridge location only has available slightly over one acre on the Canadian side and this property whereas bridge engineers agree that a minimum of five acres is required for this purpose. It is impossible for the International Bridge Company to handle further land at the Canadian approaches as on one side they have the Canadian National Railway Station, and on the other side a large amount of land which is the property of the Niagara Parks Commission. There are many reasons why the new bridge would be advantageous and it was felt that the new bridge should be constructed several hundred feet north where there would be more adequate bridge approaches, and also where a much more satisfactory link-up could be made with the new streets leading to the bridge approaches.

Should Not be a Toll Bridge

The Province of Ontario feels that any bridge which is publicly owned toll bridges should be permitted to operate, and therefore decided that the only circumstances which when the initial cost is recovered by tolls that the bridge become a free bridge publicly owned. It is not legally possible for the Province of Ontario or the Niagara Parks Commission, which is an agent of the Province, to build a bridge in question directly, according to a long established practice of Department of Justice at Ottawa. It is, therefore, necessary to overcome this difficulty in some way. The most common authority between, in this instance, the Province of Ontario and the State of New York. It is necessary that both should be induced to provide a job for his Saskatchewan brother. Relief funds were drawn upon to pay the railway fare of the father and it was understood that as soon as he got established he would move his wife and five children to Saskatchewan.

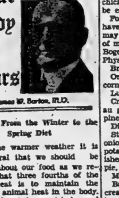
Months passed and nothing was heard of Ivanowski senior. Finally relief administrator made further inquiries in Winnipeg, found that his father was making very good wages, as I accordingly in March, 1936, the Ivanowski family of Saskatchewan under escort to face a charge of non-support this morning after his arrival, the magistrate released on order that in future he should send half a week to his dependents. Next day he returned to Winnipeg by train.

At the date of writing, Mr. Ivanowski, who evidently a poor correspondent, has neither written to his wife nor sent her money. But the Saskatchewan relief authorities about taking further legal action. They propose to sue him for nearly $120 medical account to pay.—The Printed Word.

A Non-Smoking Alliance

The Pipe of Peace, it appears, is shunned (in more senses than one) by the men who command the peace of the world. The heads of the Ber., lin-Rome alliance are both, in fact, non-smokers. Hitler's public policies are tobacco so much that he cannot even endure near him anyone who uses it, and this, too, he follows the Napoleonic path. Although a snuff-taker, Napoleon loathed tobacco smoke and revolted by the tobacco smoke of his pipe-puffing marshals.



Ranged against the non-smoking alliance are the heavily smoking democratic statesmen, Mr. Roosevelt, Mr. Chamberlain, like the rest of his Cabinet, is fond of smoke. M. Blum, the French Premier, is the cigarette-smoking statesman par excellence. Far away in the White House Mr. Roosevelt puffs at his cigarette, and in the Kremlin Stalin smokes his curly pipe and non-smokers. Hitler's public policies are tobacco apparently go together. Mr. Chamberlain hopefully sags that Mr. Hitler and Herr Ribbentrop were heavy smokers, as was Mr. Eden with his cigarette.

Perhaps the non-smoking dictators are in the saddle it seems the pipe of peace is shattered. Well might Lord Cecil of Chelwood confess he trusted no man who did not smoke!—Manchester Guardian.

Ivanoskis on Relief

From a town in northern Saskatchewan comes a story illustrative of some of the difficulties of administering unemployment relief. In 1933 a Polish laborer and his family, consisting of a wife and four children, applied for and obtained a relief allowance. The husband, who had to be paid in 1934, at an increased rate, due to the birth of another little Ivanoski, plus a capital outlay of $200 for the expense of bringing him into the world.

When $120 accounts had again to be paid in 1935 and 1936, the relief administrator decided that the Ivanovski expense was getting beyond the town's resources. After a little detective work he discovered that there was Winnipeg another Ivanovski who had a small contracting business which could be induced to provide a job for his Saskatchewan brother. Relief funds were drawn upon to pay the railway fare of the father and it was under-

Changing From the Winter to the Spring Diet

With the warmer weather it is only natural that we should be thinking about food as we remember that three fourths of the food we eat is to maintain the body heat and energy. Now the body warm will not require quite so much food as in winter. At this point must never be forgotten, the body must keep itself warm even in warm weather, without a plentiful supply of food.

Thus the proper diet in the warm weather is not so much the cutting down on the amount of food but making a change in the diet from the rich or fat foods needed in the cold weather to the "fresh" foods that begin to appear in the stores at this time—fresh fruits, tender leafy vegetables, and some of the Southern grown fruits and vegetables. Instead of the rich meals—pork, fat roast beef, mutton—lamb, chicken, eggs and sea foods should be eaten.

For housewives and others who have the planning of the meals it may be of some help to give a couple of menus for Spring from Dr. Jean Rogers's book "Nutrition and Physical Fitness".

Breakfast—

Orange, scrambled eggs, bacon, corn muffins, coffee.

Luncheon—

Creamed mushrooms, cauliflower and egg, asparagus salad, fresh pineapple.

Dinner—

Stuffed breast of veal, glazed baby onions, dandelion greens, browned potatoes, salad of chicory, endive, lobes and ripe olives, fresh rhubarb pie, cheese.

Menu 2: Breakfast—

Banana, shredded wheat, biscuit, normal a glass of milk.

Luncheon—

Cheese soufflé, new beets with lotge, artichokes with hollandaise sauce, orange salad, strawberry shortcake.

Dinner—

Tomato soup, roast leg of lamb, currant jelly, baked potatoes, creamed spinach, four green salad —lettuce, endive, chicory, watercress—fresh pineapple sherbet, cake

The thought then for the proper diet in Spring is (a) to cut down slightly on amount of food eaten, (b) eat less of the fat and starch foods, (c) eat more of the fresh fruits and vegetables as they become available and reasonable in price.

BRITISH M. P.'S CHEER GRANDI

Chamberlain Refers to Elimination of Danger-Spots

London, May 3—(AP)— Prime Minister Chamberlain told the House of Commons today Great Britain and Italy were drifting rapidly toward war when he became Prime Minister 11 months ago.

Opening debate on the Anglo-Italian agreement signed at Rome April 16, Mr. Chamberlain said that in May, 1937, relations of the two powers were "so unsatisfactory, even so dangerous, it was necessary to make some effort to improve them."

Conservative members cheered the Italian Ambassador, Count Dino Grandi, who followed the debate intently from the diplomatic gallery, when the Prime Minister praised his part in the negotiations.

Restoring Confidence

Mr. Chamberlain's speech was followed by an opposition onslaught on the accord, based on the fact that Italian troops still are fighting in the Spanish civil war.

Mr. Chamberlain said his foreign policy was designed "not only to establish peace but if possible to restore confidence that peace can and will be maintained, because without that confidence no progress is possible in international affairs." He continued:

"We can only obtain that confidence if we can succeed in removing grievances, differences and suspicions which might, unchecked, lead to war.

Eliminate Danger Spots

"That is not a task which can be accomplished in a moment or all at once, but if we can succeed in eliminating danger spots one by one we may in time find ourselves in a position to arrive at the goal at which we are aiming."

Mr. Chamberlain disclosed for the first time that Italy gave Great Britain assurance that "the Italian government will abstain from creating difficulties or embarrassments for the British government in the administration of Palestine."

Oral Assurance In Palestine

Mr. Chamberlain said that in return Great Britain will give "similar oral assurance that Britain intended to preserve and protect legitimate Italian interests in Palestine." These pledges were made in Rome by the Earl of Perth, the British Ambassador and Count Galeazzo Ciano, Italian foreign Minister.

"Oral and not written assurances on this point were given because the matter was not considered to be a fit subject for the usual treaty or other formalities," Mr. Chamberlain said.

"We were perfectly satisfied with oral declarations."

Ethiopian Recognition

Referring to Britain's promise to recognize Italy's rule in Ethiopia, the Prime Minister asserted:

"The only circumstances in which recognition of the Italian conquest of Ethiopia could morally be justified would be if appeasement is a step toward general appeasement."

CADET'S DEATH PURE ACCIDENT

Friendly Scuffle Took Place in Dormitory Before Collapse

Kingston, Ont., May 3 (CP) — Gentleman Cadet Ronald D. Smith of Royal Military College died last Saturday night during a friendly dormitory scuffle with fellow Cadets under "purely accidental circumstances," according to the verdict of a Coroner's jury.

Death was caused by a brain hemorrhage, the jury which inquired into the circumstances surrounding the death of Mr. Smith, son of A. A. Smith, Chief Engineer in the Ontario Department of Highways, found last night. The findings of a Court of Inquiry held yesterday, were submitted to the Minister of National Defence, it was announced.

Dr. James Miller, pathologist at Queen's University who examined the body, testified there was no external evidence of violence. He said he found a massive cerebral hemorrhage at the base of the brain, sufficient to cause death. "I have done 6,000 post mortem examinations and never saw a case like this before," Dr. Miller told the jury.

The scuffle between the Cadets took place in the room of Cadet D. W. Newlands after roll call at 10 p.m. Saturday, Cadet H. G. Campbell, Port Arthur, testified. He tried to push Smith on to the bed during a "shirt-ripping affair." The side of a bed, Smith had said, "will low the car on the right side," Campbell said.

"My only object was to push him on the bed," Campbell continued. "It was all in friendliness." He said the blow did not knock Smith down upon the bed. Smith had sat down himself then suddenly collapsed, "I didn't use force," the witness added. "There was no illwill. It was just part of the horseplay."

They'll Do It Every Time :-: By Jimmy Hatlo

TRIBUTE PAID TO

Glasgow 10 months ago. At that time the work on the buildings of the Empire Exposition had scarcely begun; there now stands in Bellahouston Park, looking out over the River Clyde, a whole town of more than 100 palaces and pavilions.

"This is a remarkable achievement and in recognition of it my first word must be one of praise for the enterprise, enthusiasm and hard work, which have made it possible. The task has been shared by many people. Those who have served on the organizing bodies, the companies governments who are taking part, the directing staff and, last but not least, the workmen.

Performed Willingly

"It has been performed willingly and wholeheartedly by all and I warmly congratulate them. The exhibition is an empire undertaking but it is well to remember that it owes its origin, and to a great extent its execution, to the people of Scotland."

The King said it was a significant fact that plans for the exhibition were drafted "at a time when Scotland was still under the cloud of a long industrial depression."

"For this reason," he continued, "too many people would have hesitated to embark on a scheme of so wide and formidable a scope; but in addition the fact had to be faced that this exhibition would inevitably challenge comparison with those held at Wembley, in New Zealand and in South Africa.

Not Scotland's Way

"Yet Scotland was not daunted, for that has never been her way. She believes that the best means of avoiding trouble is to provide against it and that a new enterprise is the safest insurance against a return of the depression. It is in this spirit that the exhibition has been built and I see in it the symbol of the vitality and initiative upon which the continued prosperity of Scotland must rest.

"I have spoken first of Scotland but I am well aware that without the help and support of the rest of the empire this exhibition would not have been possible. It now stands before us to testify to that willing cooperation which I rejoice to claim is the hall mark of the British commonwealth of nations.

Will Attract Visitors

"Just as men and women have gone out of Scotland in the past to found new homes in the countries overseas, so I hope that this exhibition bulk by their descendants will attract to Scotland many visitors of those distant lands.

"To those who come from foreign countries, I can promise a cordial welcome and I am sure they will not be disappointed in what they find."

BUSINESS MAN OF BELLEVILLE IN GERMANY

Favorably Impressed by Prosperous Appearance of People And Industrial Activity

Glimpses of Germany from the inside were given Belleville Rotarians by one of their number in an informal talk at the regular meeting Monday. Rotarian Fred Deacon, son of Past President W. B. Deacon, recently had the privilege of visiting Europe on a business trip and had some interesting experiences which he related to his fellow Rotarians. Privileged to be in Berlin on the day Herr Hitler made his important speech to the Reichstag outlining the advances made during the four years preceding, seeing the parade and many thousand people, the impression to the outsider was that Germany had made definite strides forward. An examination of the figures given by Herr Hitler in his address proved interesting, showing that in her march toward nacional self-sufficiency Germany had achieved a record of 94 to 96 per cent, quite a remarkable figure when contrasted with Germany's position before Hitler took the helm.

After a diet of American newspaper comment upon Germany and its various alleged disadvantages the visitor is surprised to note the prosperous and contented appearance of the inhabitants and to learn that there is no unemployment, while industrial activity in all classes has more than doubled in the past four Hitler years. At the same time the cost of living has hardly increased, this being due to rigid state control, Deacon was satisfied during his visiting time leading up to the putsch which installed Hitler and Chancellor Schuschnigg. Austria appeared to be in a most nervous state, and Germany and afflicted with many serious problems.

Paris was visited and it was found that business was very unsettled owing to labor disturbances and unstable government. French workmen had succeeded in having their wages materially and lowering working hours but the cost of living had risen as fast as the wages increased and they were no farther ahead, worse off, rather.

England was a refreshing change from continental perplexities and business was found humming, incentive being given by armament activities, housing, and road building.

Interesting sidelights upon Germany's financial position and business operations were given by the speaker, featuring the sale abroad of foreign credits which gave Germany a considerable advantage over other countries in bidding upon large manufacturing contracts.

Introduced by Past President Harry Ackerman, Rotary appreciation was voiced for the interesting address by Jack Hartwick.

An unusual feature of the meeting centred in the tribute paid by President Fred Douglas and members to Harry Hill who is celebrating a milestone this week marking his fifteenth year of one hundred per cent attendance at Rotary meetings.

Dr. Locke and Grant Proctor were received into full membership and appropriately decorated.

Visitors were C. L. Jewell and Charles Sulman.

Wooler

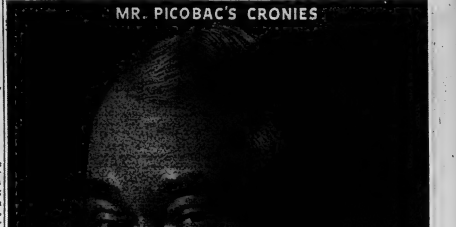
Wooler—The wind and thunder showers on Thursday evening played havoc in some districts.

The "Austin Orchestra" played in Grafton on Wednesday night.

The Ladies' Aid met on Thursday with a noon lunch and quilting in the afternoon.

Mr. and Mrs. Tom Sheppard moved to Toronto on Saturday. Roy Sharpe stayed at their home while they were away.

Miss Spence is hostess to the Jasmine Club on Friday evening.



Mrs. Ross Palmer is very ill, following congestion on her lung.

Sam Sharpe spent Thursday with his brother Charlie and wife.

Eleven members of the Auxiliary of the Woman's Missionary Society motored to Stockdale on Wednesday afternoon to meet with a group of Frankford members. The afternoon entertainment at Stockdale church, Mrs. Mark Reid, President in the chair, Mrs. P. Way read the scripture lesson and Mrs. L. Pye played the hymns. Gwen Eford of Wooler sang "The Garden of Prayer," accompanied by Mrs. Meyers. Mrs. S. L. Terrill, President of Co-Operative Presbyterial, gave a practical talk on the auxiliary work, using the Vice-Presidents and Secretaries to promote the Mission work. Mrs. W. Morrow of Frankford sang a solo, with Mrs. Pye as accompanist.

Mrs. F. Crews of Wooler read "Friendship" by Edgar Guest. Mrs. A. O. Austin of Wooler played a piano solo. Mrs. F. Love of Frankford introduced the speaker Mrs. Harrison of Smithfield who gave a descriptive view of the life of an African, their habitation and the Christian Missions. Rev. and Mrs. Harrison spent two years in Africa. Mrs. Ella Anderson grouped the ladies to enjoy refreshments served by the Stockdale ladies.

Mr. James McMillan has his house wired ready for electricity.

MEET MR. GEORGE BONIFACE, PROPRIETOR OF THE GRAND CENTRAL HOTEL, ESSEX CENTRE.

"Lord love us," says George

The Grand Central Hotel of Essex Centre serves dinner at noon—and a solid substantial meal it it, with two pieces of cheese with your apple pie if you say so. George, the proprietor, (everybody calls him "George") receives his guests in the rotunda and ushers them in the dining-room door with a pat on the back, a murmur in the ear, and a hearty laugh.

"Lord love us," exclaimed he when he saw Mr. Picobac. "What brings YOU down at dinner time? Mrs. Picobac gone on strike?"

"Worse'n that, George," chuckled Mr. Picobac. "She's got the Ladies' Aid in for lunch. So I was advised to clear out."

"You come and have dinner with me," said George, "and I'll smoke a pipe of Picobac with you after."

"George," said Mr. Picobac earnestly, "there's only one thing in this world that can improve a meal . . . cool . . . sweet after-dinner smoke of that tobacco."

"And what's that?" said George.

"Good company," replied Mr. Picobac. "I accept with pleasure."

GOV'T APPROVES

He left the impression he would attempt to form a similar pact with Germany as soon as possible, as he said: "The purpose of our general foreign policy is not only to establish peace but, if possible to restore such general confidence that peace can and will be maintained."

Large Majority

The House gave him a large majority. It defeated 323-119 a Labor motion to renounce the accord. Then it approved the treaty 316-108.

Leader and Minister Hoyer the Prime Minister because he praised Fascist Italy mainly as "a new Italy which under stimulus of the personality of Signor Mussolini is showing new vigor in which there is apparent new vision and new efficiency in administration."

Opposition benches laughed when A. V. Alexander, Labor, interjected: "And new horrors."

In the old days, the Prime Minister said, Britain had a close friendship with the old Italy—"the Italy which, with our warm approval and sympathy, had won her independence and unity under such leaders as Nazini and Garibaldi. I believe we may look forward to a friendship with the new Italy as firmly based as that by which we were bound to the old."

Biting Climax

A biting climax to the debate came as opposition leader Clement Attlee denounced the Prime Minister.

Referring to Mr. Chamberlain's famous father, Mr. Attlee said: "I have been hearing a lot about the Chamberlain tradition. But Mr. Joseph Chamberlain would got have signed so feeble a document as this and I did not believe Mr. Neville Chamberlain would have put his hand to so dishonorable a document."

Resenting the fact Mr. Chamberlain frequently left the House during opposition speeches, Mr. Attlee said he was guilty of "bad manners" because he treated the opposition with "sneering contempt." He added the agreement was trumped up to save the Prime Minister's reputation.

Replying to this attack, Richard Butler, Foreign Under-Secretary said Mr. Chamberlain was becoming known as a "man of agreements." The Anglo-Italian agreement, the Anglo-Eire agreement, the strengthening of bonds between Great Britain and France, all were to the Prime Minister's credit. An Anglo-United States trade agreement was approaching.

levying a flat eight-per cent increase in all direct and hidden taxes.

Announcement of the government's intention to enact additional fighting men was contained in the Premier's report to President Albert Lebrun on a decree operating a new credit of 4,712,500,000 francs (about $141,274,000) for national defence. Daladier said this would be used for:

Strengthening the army by incorporating an unstated number of reserve officers into the regular service;

Increasing the air force from 44,000 to 52,500 non-commissioned officers and men.

Dear Silver:

Dear Miss. Beeckman:

Would you be good enough to tell me about the correct way of handling the dessert spoon and fork? We had a discussion at the dinner table about it. We always place the dessert spoon and fork above the dinner plate. I have all the silver to be needed at each meal placed on the table when it is laid. In my opinion the spoon is used in the right hand and the fork in the left hand for puddings and fruit desserts and the fork in the right hand and the spoon in the left hand for pies. My guest maintained that the spoon should always be used in the right hand regardless of what is being served.

There is no American way of using spoon and fork for dessert, is there? At any rate, I have never seen dessert served with more than one piece of silver in the United States.

D.

It interests me very much that in your table-setting you follow the European custom of placing the dessert silverpieces above the plate as you set your table. This time of year is the time when those putting the dessert silverpieces at the sides of the plate instead of it are apt to be "confusing". I am always surprised that more hostesses do not adopt this detail of table-setting, since it is so sensible and convenient.

Your friend is right about the dessert spoon and fork. The dessert spoon is always held in the right hand, and the fork in the left hand, no matter what kind of dessert is being eaten.

Famous Authority on Problems of Love and Marriage.

Luxuries Not the Object of All Women Who Work

Didn't you think it was an exploded idea that the majority of the 9,000,000 married women gainfully employed in this country, worked to secure extra luxuries; that their pay envelopes went to buy gay, expensive clothes, pay for treatments in beauty parlors and such like pleasant squandering, thereby handing out inferiority complexes to the monks of their husbands?

In a recent period of six months' broadcasting, thousands of letters came to me, not to mention those of my usual daily mail, begging me to urge women to save the country by going back to their homes. As if the majority of these women weren't doing their part in saving the country and keeping the home fires burning by going out to work!

I wish it were in my power to refute this calumny that women work for outward eyebrows and expensive perfumes, by sending to "conscientious objectors by women in industry" the reliable Government statistics on wage-earning married women compiled by the Department of Labor. I am confident the true facts of married women, given the power of choice, would prefer to

REILLY—HUFF

A pretty wedding took place at the home of the bride's mother, Mississaga, at eight o'clock on Saturday evening, when Norma Gertrude, daughter of Mrs. Kathleen Huff and the late Howard Huff of Mississaga, became the bride of Mr. Hugh E. Reilly, Simcoe, son of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Reilly, formerly of Belleville. The ceremony was performed by Rev. J. D. P. Kerr of Belleville.

The bride wore a lovely gown of pink satin and was attended by Miss Kathleen Ayres, who wore a blue brocaded gown.

Mr. E. Reilly, brother of the groom, was groomsman.

Following the ceremony luncheon was served at which eighteen guests were present.

Mr. and Mrs. Reilly will reside in Simcoe.

It is, alas, true that most bedcases in the United States do not have both the dessert spoon and the dessert fork placed with dessserts. But fortunately it is true that many hostesses do follow the European custom — and their number too is increasing. More and more they are realizing that this type of service is most convenient for an occasion that are especially popular in the United States.

Wedding Invitation

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I am to be married very soon, and as my mother is a divorcee, I am married; I am in doubt as to how the invitation should be worded. My father is dead, so he can't very probably not attend the wedding.

Customarily, under these circumstances, the invitations are sent in the name of the bridegroom and stepfather. If your relationship with your mother is, as I hope, a pleasant one, you will want to do this. Then the invitation reads: Mr. and Mrs. Cornelius Forbes request the honor of your presence at the marriage of their daughter to

Mr. Philip Dow Worthy

on Tuesday the first of June at four o'clock

The United Church

Evanston, Illinois.

If you prefer, the third line may read "at the marriage of Mrs. Forbes' daughter, but this is not such good form. Also, if you wish to include in this note what the last name of the bride differs from the last name in the first line of it, you may prefix "Miss" before your name.

Fashion Flashes

(By ALICE ALDEN)

Something to see is a hip-length, boxy coat of sesame dyed navy with white tips. This original coat is trimmed with bands of red leather down the front. The leather bands also edge the pockets, which are embroidered with navy blue leather.

Always a winner is the beautifully done princess. A charming model is in black shiny straw with white wings and is trimmed by Venetian design under the chin to the edge of the hat, where it is held by an ornament.

We believe that yellow will be important for both day and evening use. A charming evening frock is of topaze yellow silk. The molded bodice has a long waistline and is formed of pintucked horizontal bands of the fabric, the same width as the box pleats, which stripe the skirt. The rolled fabric belt is tied into a bow, the ends bright with spiral diamante.

Foster Music Prejudices In Child?

Writer Cites Example of Girl Who Grew up to Abhor Jazz

(By LISA GRENELLE)

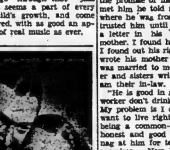
ARABELLA BOWEN was brought up in a cultured home. Every member of Arabella's family loved music, classical music.

Almost from her earliest memories Arabella was taken from concert to concert, and she enjoyed them too, when they weren't too long. Then later she was taken to the opera. From the beginning Arabella was taught to know, to understand (if that is possible), to love and revere the works of the world's great classical composers. Arabella took piano and violin lessons. Father bought her a good phonograph and a couple of dozen of classical pieces—her favorites, or perhaps his.

But No Jazz

But no jazz for Arabella; none of these popular, modern things like swing, jive. To the Bowen family music was almost a religion; jazz music was taboo. When Father got started on the subject, he really was eloquent. This naturally had its effect on Arabella, who grew up abhorring modern jazz with as great a vehemence as her parents.

"How cah-you listen to jazz?" Arabella would ask her friends.



As time went on, this question of music began to make a real barrier between Arabella and her friends. They couldn't play any of the new jazz when Arabella was around for fear of her sarcastic remarks. At Arabella's, among all those records, there wasn't one popular tune. And what good was it that Arabella could play the piano when she didn't know anything you could dance to?

Even her best beau was not too sympathetic on this point. He liked opera all right, but modern jazz did not offend his sensibilities. In fact, he thought that was "swell," too. And when he invited Arabella to a "swing concert", and she responded scornfully, "Oh, let's go and hear some real music," he took her to hear some real music. Arabella remained from Arabella's side thereafter.

"It's a fine idea to bring up our children with a taste for and appreciation of good classical music. But need we also teach them to despise jazz? I know many people will say that modern music is really fond of music cannot endure jazz. But this is not altogether so.

I know several cases. Children will learn to love the best of both, I think, if you make no comment—leave them to themselves. They will go through that jazz phase that seems a part of every modern child's growth, and come out unimpaired with a good appreciation of real music as ever.

Match Hues of Cosmetics To Color of Complexion

(By HELEN FOLLETT)

WITH THE rouge pad gone into retirement, make-up isn't so complicated as in the past, when "factory blonde" often looked like stage stop lights. Now it is only a matter of matching powder to complexion and selecting lipstick carefully.

Beauty shops lure the cash customer to the make-up bar. That is a convenience. There are open containers from which powder can be dipped, applied to the nose and cheeks and results observed.

There are some general rules concerning the synthetic complexion, but, like all rules, they won't hold good in every case. Usually the Nordic blonde looks best when the powder is a faint ivory with a touch of flesh color added, and lipstick a luscious strawberry shade. The blonde will enrich her portrait by the use of rachel powder and a lipstick of geranium color.

Redheads have fair skins, but the color of flaming tresses are brought out if the powder carried a darker cast than the skin. The lipstick of orange red will prove more friendly to her rosy crown than any true red.

Fussers on the legs are no help to the appearance of chiffon hosiery. They make filmy stockings look like sacking.

Depilatories will remove them. Experiment with a small patch, on the effects upon the skin. Some skins react to depilatories and some do it is wise to make a test. The bathing season will soon be on us; it is also as well to get the legs groomed.

Why is the bride always beautiful? Because she is happy. Happiness puts a gleam in the eyes. It floods the countenance with a radiance that is more beautiful than any effect attained by synthetic means—powder pad, rouge compact or lipstick.

Why don't all of us try to be happy? Poverty needn't win a majority prize. Yasuni beauty begins in the mind, no doubt about it.

Foot ills bother almost everybody. Chiropodists say that few women have normal trotters.

Soap should be rubbed straight across. Don't dig into thickened cuticle at the sides of the nail. Soak in warm soap suds, friction with the fine side of the emery board, then massage with mineral oil. If you ever start cutting cuticle you will never stop, as it will rebuild itself and prove troublesome.

Be fussy about the fit of the brassiere. The cups should be supported but not bound. Binding will deplete delicate tissues, cause them to sag and lose tone.

Brassieres, corsets and foundation garments should all be fitted by a professional who understands the possibilities of improving the natural figure line. These that accentuate the good points.

Girls who have to economize, and can't afford perfume, will be pleased to know that a sweetly-scented bath powder will take the place of flavorless talcum.

Use immediately after the tub-bing, when the flesh is thoroughly dried. Delightful fragrance will be present all day long.

Win Husband by Persuasion, Not Nagging, Woman Advised

BY VIRGINIA LEE

"DEAR VIRGINIA LEE:- I read in your column of a man going with a woman who has a bad temper and is nagging all the time. This man doesn't tell of his faults. For a time I thought he was tired with a man for three years with the promise of marriage. When I told him he told me his mother was where he was from. I believed and then he gave me a ring. Day I found a letter in his pocket from his mother. I found he lied to me. He wrote his mother and told her he was marrying me. Now I am nervous and sisters write me, thinking I am their in-law.

"He is good in some ways a good worker don't drink or go out much. He gives me money. I love him. I want to live right. I am tired of being a common girl with no home. I am good in a way, only I nag at him for telling me lies and promises. Now I do not want to want me, but he won't leave. He promises to stay with me. I can't get rid of him. I love him, but I am willing to give him up if it kills me rather than live like this. Please give me some advice. It may help me. Am a sick girl and cannot go on this way. JANE."

Too bad you did not insist in the first place that he tell you all about you he would marry you or you would have nothing more to do with him.

However, don't you see, my dear, that you are going the wrong way to get him to do as you wish? Nothing can wipe out the fact that you have been living with him as his wife. In the eyes of the law you probably are, in fact, his wife. Now if you want to get him to go through a marriage ceremony with you, the best plan is to persuade him gently, not nag and bully him. That sort of thing only makes anyone more stubborn. You know you get worried and sick over the whole mess, feel guilty, and all, but the fact remains that you are going the wrong way to work. Now that you have appointed in him, too, but now you have to be not to be trusted by your mother.

New Frocks for Afternoons Are Colorful and Stylish

Models for Every Occasion Are Simply Cut but Stunning

By LESLETTE

WITH STYLES more varied and colors more alluring than in many seasons—or do they just seem so?—for spring and afternoon frocks offer an unusually exciting fashion picture.

The new softer tailoring has added individuality to the designing of frocks for every occasion, and the useful "in-between" frock, which is neither severely tailored nor obviously dressy, has come into its own as an outstandingly important part of every dress showing.

Bright printed dresses and costumes cut on simple, softly tailored lines or graciously draped in equally simple effects, are to be found in vivid, vital colors and intriguing patterns, or in smart dark backgrounds with pastel designs in delicate floral and geometric motifs. Slim dark monotone sheers are styled on soft, flattering lines, with gay touches of color for accent, and interesting combination print and plain costumes are stylish.

Rayons Lovely

Among the many lovely fabrics used for dresses this season, the new rayons, crepes and sheers are found to be particularly well adapted. Printed or plain, light sheer, dull sheer or crepe textured, these fine fabrics are rich and supple for fine draping and tailoring qualities and lend themselves delightfully to the vogue for pleats, or flared skirts, draped bodices and gracefully molded silhouettes.

This year's softly tailored version of the ever popular shirt-waist frock becomes extremely decorative and adaptable when styled in gaily printed rayon.

In spaced floral or leaf patterns, small or large, in quaint figure designs, such as colorful American birds pictured against bright foliage, in moss, wild rose motifs in close, allover designs, or a scattering on a solid ground of the jacks with which we played as children, they are correct both for sportswear and any other daytime occasion.

In Coral and White

The well tailored frock shown left here of this type uses a cool, fresh flower and leaf motif in coral and white against a soft coral background. Action pleats back and front of the slim skirt, and action-back construction at the shoulder, add freedom in motion to the chic of spaced shoulders, an adjustable high collar, and four high-placed flap pockets at each side of the front closing.

Equally adaptable to the slightly less sporting street and afternoon frock is the interesting astronomical print in spacey design, right. This slim, on-pose frock utilizes the current vogue for pleats to nice advantage. Soft pleated folds each side of the modified V neck carry out the motif of the pearl pleating at the front of the slim skirt, and a narrow white piping finishes the neck, short sleeves and inset self-fabric belt. Decorative white flowers at the back front repeat the white accent. The heavenly bodies, in this print are scattered over a background of Navy color.

Today's Recipes

BANANA FRUIT SALAD BOWL—Wash and dry carefully one or more varieties of fresh crisp greens and place in a salad bowl. Arrange long strips of bananas attractively on the greens. Add a variety of other fruits such as orange and grapefruit sections, slices of avocado, thin slices of unpeeled apple, strips of fresh pineapple, whole berries or cherries. Serve with dressing.

FRUIT SALAD DRESSING — Three tablespoons fresh orange juice, one tablespoon lemon juice, one-fourth teaspoon paprika, few grains pepper, one-half cup vegetable oil or melted butter, one-half teaspoon salt, liquid honey. Combine all ingredients except honey and stir vigorously with a fork. Add honey to sweeten slightly and beat dressing.

ORANGE SOUFFLE PIE — One cup orange juice, grated rind and juice of one lemon, four tablespoons flour, one cup sugar, three eggs. Heat the orange and lemon juice and rind in a double boiler. Combine the flour with three-fourths cup of sugar, mix to a paste with a little of the juice before it is hot, stir in, and cook, stirring, until thickened and smooth, then let cook 10 minutes longer. Add the egg yolks, well beaten, and cook, stirring, until thick. Beat the egg whites stiff, and beat in the remaining one-fourth cup of sugar. Fold the hot mixture into the whites, pour into a baked bran pastry shell and let cool. Top with whipped cream.

BRAN PASTRY SHELL — One cup fourth bran all-bran, one and one-half cups flour, one-half teaspoon salt, one-half cup fat, five tablespoons cold water (more or less). Roll bran until fine and combine with flour and salt. Cut in fat. Add water, a little at a time, until dough is moist enough to hold together. Roll out on lightly floured board to about one-eight inch in thickness. Place rolled pastry loosely in pan. Trim edge, leaving about one-half inch of pastry beyond rim of pan. Fold extended edge under and flute. Prick pastry shell with a fork and bake in hot oven (450 degrees F.) 10 or 15 minutes.

Poems That Live

SONG

Song is so old,
Love is so new—
Let me be still
And kneel to you.

Let me be still
And breathe no word.
Save what my warm blood
Sings unheard.

Let my warm blood
Sing low of you—
Song so fair,
Love is so new!

—Hermann Hagedorn.

TO THE WESTERN WIND

Sweet western wind, whose luck it is,
Made rival with the air,
To give Perenna's lip a kiss,
And fan her wanton hair:

Bring me but one, I'll promise thee
Instead of common showers,
Thy wings shall be embalmed by me,
And beset with flowers.

—Robert Herrick.

Some Folk Shed Skin In Warm Weather

Summer Seems to Be Best Known Cure of Scaly Condition Clendening Says

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

THERE ARE certain people who welcome the warm season that is being ushered in just now because they lose the rough coat of skin they have been wearing all winter. They are examples of the disease which is known as "ichthyosis" or "fish skin". In winter their skin gets rough and scaly and, in fact, they look as if they were covered with fine fish scales. In the summer the skin smooths down and they have as nice, normal skin as anybody.

A similar condition is known as "peeling skin" and presents a very remarkable picture. The most famous case was that of a man who at regular intervals was covered with a red rash with a rise of temperature, nausea and weakness. This red rash lasted for 36 hours and then the skin came off in large sheets, with complete casts of the hands and feet.

I have before me the record of the case of a man of the age of 22 who, as far as he could remember, began having the skin peel off in May. This condition lasted throughout the summer and subsided in October. His sister suffered from a similar condition. His general health outside of this was always excellent and there was no pain or itching. Even when he was not doing this, the upper layer of skin could easily be removed with a little rubbing.

Folk Who Shed Skin

There are also people who shed their entire skin periodically about every three years or so. This is not accompanied by any redness and does not involve the nails or hair. General health usually is excellent.

Nobody knows what to do for these patients.

Summer is the best cure for ichthyosis. In the winter, ultraviolet light and the use of thyroid extract have given some relief, but there is no permanent cure or method of preventing a recurrence with the oncoming of the winter season.

QUESTIONS FROM READERS

G. K. B.: "(1) Is it possible for an improperly fitting upper denture to produce a form of neuralgia—with the pain extending down the back of the neck and with the ultimate effect of nervous exhaustion? (2) Will the use of benzedrine inhaler—once or twice daily at the most—have any injurious effect, and if so, what?

Answer: (1) Yes. (2) Benzedrine is probably not injurious when used as an inhalant, although reports of heart damage and intoxication have been made following its use by mouth.

A. M.: "Will you please tell me through your column if skimmed milk and lemon juice is good for reducing?"

Answer: Do you mean that you are going to use skimmed milk and lemon juice and nothing else? It certainly would be reducing if used in that form but, in my opinion, is a little too drastic.

W. E. S.: "For several years I have been troubled with granulated eyelids. Will this condition in any way harm the eye, and how may I rid myself of it?"

Answer: In the first place, you should consult an oculist to see whether the granulated eyelids are trachoma or something more simple. If it is trachoma, it will take a long period of treatment before any healing takes place. Granulated eyelids which are simply due to a succession of crops of styes may be due to the need for glasses. To prevent recurrence of styes it has been recommended that a camel's hair brush, dipped in a 5 per cent solution of alcohol and brushed lightly on the edge of the eyelid, be used.

A corner in color seems to have been made by tweed suits. A grand new model, made with a long, fitted tunic-type jacket is in mustard colored tweed with nubby flecks in rust. The coat is lined with green flannel to match the blouse, which has a huge self-bow.

SCOTT'S L.U.D.G. CLASS

The L.U.D.G. class of Scott's Church held a very enjoyable evening, Wednesday, April 27, when they entertained the Young People's Societies of Marsh Hill and Alkens at a social evening. The meeting was opened with George Striker, the president, conducting the Worship Service. A hymn was sung, followed by prayer by Rev. Johnson. Misses Helen Appelbe, Jean Badgley, Jeanette Chard and Eleanor Chapman read portions of the Scripture Lesson, after which "I can hear my Saviour calling" was sung. A few remarks were given by Rev. Johnson.

The President on behalf of Scott's extended a welcome to the visitors after which the visiting societies presented an interesting programme. Solos were given by Mrs. McMullen, and Miss Hogle of Alkens and Miss Allison Vandervaker of Marsh Hill favoured with readings. The Marsh Hill Girls' Quartette rendered a pleasing number. By request George Striker gave a reading, "The Quinds of Callander". The meeting closed by singing "God be with you till we meet again."

Following the programme the remaining period was conducted by Edna Ketcheson and Jean Badgley. Refreshments were then served. Votes of thanks were extended on behalf of the visiting societies by Mrs. McMullen and Mr. Ralph Campbell. The singing of "God Save the King" brought the pleasant evening to a close.

CARMEL Y. P. U.

The regular meeting of the Carmel Y.P.U. was held on Wednesday night, April 27. The devotional service was in charge of Rev. Mr. Merrick. The meeting was opened by singing hymns 287 and 175. Scriptural readings were given by Garth Sine and Weldon Prindle. Miss Hazel Hicks gave a reading. This was followed by a splendid talk by Rev. Mr. Merrick. Hymn 37 was sung. Miss Margaret Reynolds gave the topic "A Manifold Ministry", assisted by Misses Nanna Sine, Kathleen Brownson and Monna Wright. This part of the meeting was closed by singing hymn 12. Recreation was in charge of Miss Monna Wright.

Two of Biggest Surprises In Major League Season Are Senators, Detroit Tigers

Washington Fighting For Top And Tigers Tied For Sixth

LINEUP SHAKEN

Lou Gehrig Demoted From Clean-up Position to Sixth Place

(By Hugh S. Fullerton, Jr.)

(Associated Press Sports Writer)

While the next couple of weeks of inter-sectional scrapping may present a different picture, two of the biggest surprises so far in the Major League season come from Washington Senators and Detroit Tigers.

Washington opens its first home stand against the western clubs in the American League today in second place and Detroit stands tied with St. Louis Browns for sixth. That just reverses the way they were picked in The Associated Press spring poll.

The Senators, of course, have benefited by the weakness of Philadelphia Athletics, winning four out of five games, but they're still a half-game ahead of Boston Red Sox and New York Yankees, who have been playing the same kind of opposition.

Gave Yanks Tussle

They gave the Yanks a whale of a tussle yesterday before bowing down 3-2 and they may make trouble for Cleveland when the league leading Indians invade the Capital today. After the Yanks revived batting order, with Lou Gehrig down in sixth place, had popped on Jimmy Dykstra for a 3-0 lead, the Senators started a comeback that drove Monte Pearson to cover and had the home full in the sights before Johnny Murphy checked the threat.

Joe DiMaggio's second homer in two days was the two Yanks blow for it was a costly error, too, that gave the Nats their second run.

Detroit's difficulty has been too much Cleveland, as the Tigers have lost five out of six to Indians' Wes Ferrell. But they haven't been hitting in the clutches and credit for Rhem pitchers haven't been consistent.

Davis Checks Onslaught

Rookie Woodrow Davis was the only one to check the onslaught of the Tribe's slugging yesterday but he didn't come in until a 10-run uproar in the fourth had ruined any faint hope of victory the Tigers might have had. Outfielder Allen held the Detroiters to seven hits, while Rudy Hernandez and Al Wade, Harry Eisenstat and Al Benton for nine in their one hit inning.

New York Giants, invincible in the eastern section of the National League, polished off Brooklyn Dodgers, 11-6, in the third tilt that last home game before starting west. A combination of six-hit flingers by their skilled and honors by Jimmy Ripple, Hank Leiber and Joe Moore enabled the Giants to trounce the Dodgers.

Cincinnati Reds, who tackle the champions next, tuned up with their third straight triumph over Pittsburgh 8-6. Two homers by Ival Goodman paced the Reds and, incidentally, gave Goodman sole possession of first place in four-base swatting.

St. Louis Cardinals, with Paul (Dizzy) Dean's brother, Paul "Daffy" Dean, in the box, made it two straight by routing the Athletics 13-1 in the other big league game. The Red Birds and Browns took the day off.

Yesterday's Stars

By the Associated Press

Cliff Melton, Giants —pitched six-hit, 7-4 victory over Dodgers, fanning seven and walking one.

Gene Desautels, Red Sox—banged four hits in four trips to plate and drove home three runs as Sox routed A's 12-1.

Ival Goodman, Reds —smacked two homers and single in 8-6 triumph over Pirates.

Johnny Allen, Indians —held Tigers to seven hits and chipped in with double and single as mates slaughtered Detroit 11-5.

COMPLETE CARD NOW ARRANGED

Al Dunlop Meets Benny Stien in The Semi-Final Bout

The complete card for Wednesday night's all-star wrestling bout at the Hume Arena was announced by the Toronto promoters this morning and which of course will be featured by a special attraction when Count Zarnoff clashes Scotty McDougall, the Canadian veteran of grapplers, versus Count Zarnoff, the White Russian, whose wrestling prowess preceded him in Belleville last week when he was welcomed by the greatest hand applause given a wrestler in a local ring.

Count Zarnoff's ability as a conditioned wrestler was clearly proven in his victory over Benny Stien last week, when he held and veteran Russian gave a thrilling exhibition of the art of counter wrestling. McDougall's ring ability is world-extensive and equal to that of the versatile Russian, assuring Wednesday night's bouts of metropolitan proportions.

In the semi-final bout Benny Stien, the Jewish adonis and favorite of the ladies, opposes Al "Bunny" Dunlop, whose welcome has long since been worn out in Belleville and resulted in his being lowered to the villain role. The Jewish problem in the wrestling face to Belleville fans Wednesday night in Normal Farral, the rough and ready bill grappler, who is making his first appearance in these parts. Farral meets Mike Dominic in the curtain-raiser.

Five Teams Enter St. Lawrence Loop

Smith's Falls, Ont., May2—(CP) —Ed Sutherland was elected President of the St. Lawrence Amateur Baseball League last night at a organization meeting. W.W. Pollock of Carleton Place, Ont., was elected vice-president. Smith's Falls, Carleton Place, Cornwall, Prescott and Carleton Place delegates assured the meeting clubs would be ready to field teams in the loop which had considerable interest here before 1939 season when the circuit was declared professional by the Amateur Athletic Union of Canada.

Representatives from Ottawa and Brockville were not present but will decide this week whether they will enter a team.

Giants Open Western Invasion Confident In New Found Strength

(By Gayle Talbot)

(Associated Press Sports Writer)

New York, May 3 (AP)— The runaway New York Giants go charging into the western hair of their National League opposition today confident in their new-found batting strength.

Against the eastern half the Giants even Bill Terry by the savagery of their attack, and it takes something special along that line to astonish Bill since he watched the Yankees bat in the last World Series.

It doesn't worry Terry a bit that he'll have to get along quite a while without Burgess Whitehead, his regular second baseman last year. Gus Mancuso, recovering from an appendicitis operation he underwent this spring has kept Whitehead from playing so far and brought on a nervous breakdown that requires a rest and put the voluntarily retired list.

August is going to be better, but I'll admit," I don't foresee the way Johnny McCarthy was going to hit the ball," the Giants' pilot confessed as he watched his youngsters take Brooklyn 7-4 for their 11th straight victory yesterday. "I guess it's the best club I've had, all right."

He has no real fear of Cincinnati Reds, Andrew Cohen, the Giants' start their western invasion today.

In fact, the latest word that when any of the western group is named though he picks Chicago Cubs as his one most likely to prove troublesome.

COMMENTS FROM THE CHEST
Confidence Just Faith In Your Own Ability

By Lloyd A. Percival

Number 5

I have had a lot of queries concerning confidence and how to acquire it. One young fellow asked "I have been told so often that I lack confidence , i t ' s getting under my s k i n. What is confidence?"

Lloyd Percival

Well, my answer would like to make an observation. It is quite likely that a good many of you are thinking the same as the waste to know what confidence is appears to be on the dumb. Not at all, not at all. Confidence is exactly what? Sure, it's easy to say what it is in a general meaning, but let's hear you enlarge on it. This lad seems anxious for a thorough definition so let's see how we make out.

The way of acquiring confidence would be to say, it is something that you must learn to do anywhere. That seems to be an accepted fact. However, that isn't entirely true, anywhere. When an athlete feels sure that his ability is good enough to carry him successfully through some athletic test he is confident. There is also no reason to believe failure is walking around the corner ready to pounce on that old feeling. I might add here that I know plenty of people who get that feeling whether or not they have any reason for it. When this is the case it becomes conceit and is an excellent start to a very rude awakening. Unless a fellow is sure of himself you usually find he hesitates and loses his nerve at the crucial second too late. His real ability is not co-operating and failure is the pay-off. Without confidence you might just as well skip the whole business for trying to be an athlete.

Looks Queer, Sometimes

I heard a man who follows sport very closely and I recall his opinion it was a peculiar fact that some people had confidence and others couldn't acquire it. On the surface it appears rather queer, but on giving the matter a little closer scrutiny, the veil drops off and it becomes a very ordinary fact. Let's put it this way. The person can drive down the sidelines, naturally he is going to have confidence because he has done it. Another player perhaps could get within a foot of the line how he? Hector can he have confidence? Nothing is up to prove to him that that confidence is the actual knowledge that you can do it. And this was not true there wouldn't be any sense to it all and athletes would be getting yearly by the dozen.

Every now and then you read of a player who has a sublime confidence. Sure, but you still usually find that he had plenty of reason to believe in himself. After all, suppose a fellow who couldn't hit a watermelon with the Empire State building suddenly became convinced he could bat 'em out of the park. Unless he was a very rare exception, he couldn't. It is quite possible that this game felt could gradually work up a confidence, but not over-night. So, generally speaking, confidence is a faith in your ability acquired by logical reasoning. If you have done a thing or everything close to it you being able to do it, then you naturally have confidence.

Many-Sided Proposition

I must add that there are more sides to this business. Many people find it hard to keep their confidence in different environments. For example, the fellow who, although he has a mile in practice, wonders whether he can do the same in a game. Because he lets himself become convinced that a game is so much different his faith in himself is low and his curve is a curve any time and if he is concentrating on his job he will do it just as easily as he did in practice. The trouble is that in a game there are quite a few lurking factors such as the crowd and the importance of the occasion. These things upset him and sure enough he fails. The cure here is concentration.

One of these fellows has confidence. Others have to acquire it. The lad with the confidence would look much the same as the lad who doesn't. Don't fuss confidence with conceit.

If you are the type that finds it hard to acquire confidence don't get discouraged. Moaning around the wails of time. Start with the simplest of things and learn to do them well. As the number of your accomplishments grow, so will faith in your ability. Remember that confidence is based on failure. It is also smart to remember that you have a lot. Above all, don't worry and fret. The only reason some fellows stay in a slump is because they start worrying, and sure enough their confidence goes. The subject of confidence is one that plays a important part in sport and accordingly it will be cropping up all over the column in days to come. Don't be discouraged if you can and you can do it again.

Kentucky Derby Shaping Up Like A Real Horse Race

By Orlo Robertson

(Associated Press Sports Writer)

Louisville, Ky., May 3—(AP)— The 64th running of the Kentucky Derby is shaping into a real horse race.

Only four years one or two horses have stood out but it's different this time. Not more than a dozen probable colts are expected to start the mile and a quarter classic on Churchill Downs Saturday. At least five of them, however, figure in the fight for the roses. It's fighting for the major share of the $50,000 added purse, and all the glory that goes with winning the most colorful race in the United States.

Two years ago Maxwell Howard's Stagehand was considered unbeatable. He had eliminated all the rich campaign on the west coast by whipping Joe Widener's Bimelech by a nose in the 1100,000 Santa Anita handicap.

Picture is Altered

Developments of the last two weeks have altered the picture. From the east rose Fighting Fox, latest in the long list of horses from Will Woodward's Belair stud, and Dauber, hard-riding colt from Mrs. Payne Whitney Jr.'s foxhatcher farm, to challenge Stagehand. Another is Pont Jr.'s foxhatcher farm, to challenge Stagehand.

Another is Greentree Race Course in the heart of the blue grass, Wayne Wright's Bull Lea Headley's Menjiw, by only a nose in a mile an an eighth race.

Meeting the opposition in the high-powered combination is Charles Stein's Jacopo. Wise Pax, The horse, owned by A. G. Vanderbilt, scored a victory in the Louisiana Derby.

JUDGE LANDIS TO ATTEND OPENER

Will Occupy a Box With Premier Hepburn on Thursday

Toronto, May 3 —(CP)— President Donald Ross of the Toronto Baseball Club announced last night Judge Kenesaw Mountain Landis, High Commissioner of baseball, would attend Toronto's home opening game in the International League here Thursday when Jersey City Giants.

Arrangements call for Judge Landis to occupy a box with Premier Mitchell Hepburn, Lieutenant-Governor Albert Matthews of Ontario and Mayor Ralph Day are also to be present at opening game.

Club officials said they expected a crowd of close to 20,000 for the occasion. The Leafs finished their training season by winning a double — header from Syracuse Chiefs Sunday and Monday at Hamilton place. Earl Caldwell, a right-hander, is to pitch the opener for Toronto.

WINSETT JOINS JERSEY GIANTS AND ADDS PUNCH

Bears Found Out 12-11 Win Over Rochester Red Wings

ROYALS LOSE

Baltimore Sandlotter Left Baldwin Down With Six Hits

By the Associated Press

Jersey City is in second place, no great honor in the International Baseball League these last two seasons, but things may change—long Tom Winsett is on the way.

Winsett, released by the Brooklyns to the little Giants yesterday, can recapture the batting touch that once made him one of the most feared sluggers in the American Association the Jerseys will have enough batting power to combat the league leading Newark Bears on even terms. Winsett once played for Montreal Royals.

The Bears led by Chalky Keller hung on for an 11-11 win over Rochester, yesterday, while the Giants and Montreal Royals split a 2-2. In the only other game of the day Baltimore downed Buffalo 8-1.

Keller, the league's leading batsman last season, went five for four including two homers, and a double, to lead the attack for the Bears, but Merrill May's single in the eighth inning drove home the winning run. The hit climaxed a four run rally. May also hit a home run in the seventh frame which also included circuit drives by Jack Sherdy and Ben Warren of the Wings.

George Myatt did most of the hitting for the Giants with a double and a triple while Tom Ferrick, ageless pitcher, limited holding the Royals to six hits. Percival Williams got all the game progressed and after the second inning held the Royals to one hit, an infield scratch.

Johnny Wittig, a Baltimore sandlot graduate, stopped Buffalo for the Orioles with six hits, while Jim Bivin batting out 16 including three homers.

When Frank McGowan was tossed out of the Baltimore game in the game it ended a streak in which he had reached first base 30 times out of 21 times at bat.

Between the Lines

By Ken J. Collins

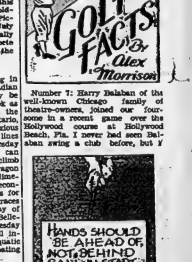
An effort to include power boats in the racing fleet of the Belleville Yacht Club 1938 seasonal set-up has been launched, by President Maurice Callaghan. For some years now the local Yacht Club has sponsored yearly outboard motor boat races on the bay each Wednesday afternoon during the summer months and with increasing success. The Yacht Club feel the time has arrived to include power boat racing on their weekly sports program, especially that motor cars are to be permitted on Victoria Park, Lloyd Hicks, who was the only one to bring power to the Picton Yacht Club and instrumental in the revival of power boating in that community, has recently taken up residence in Belleville and Mr. Hicks is the owner of a fine power boat and will be asked to assist in the promotion of power boat section to the local Yacht Club.

President Callaghan is calling an open meeting at the Yacht Club rooms tomorrow evening, inviting all boat owners, whether they be sailing or power boats, to attend and enter into the discussions. In years past Belleville was a power of strength in yachting circles along the Lake front, recognized as a leading centre for racing for the L.Y.S.A. regattas. There more paramount interests at in aquatic sports are hoping for the revival of such water sports in these parts in the future. Last year Picton had a Gold Cup race, under the auspices of the American Power Boat Association racing committee and will be staged there this year, while the Bay of Quinte Yacht Club of Trenton will also sponsor power boat races this season. The Trenton Club is holding their annual Ladies' Day Function retaining June 30th and July 1st as their dates. It is particularly many of the boats to compete in Picton will also race over this Trenton course.



With the revival of canoeing in Kingston, where the Canadian Canoe Association finals may be held this year, it is hoped that although aquatic sports are on the upward trend in Belleville, that President Callaghan is anxious to have all interested in all lines of boating to attend the weekly night's meeting, so Belleville can become unanimous in their views aboard the aquatic band wagon and endeavour to get into the limelight during the period of reconstruction. Several local courses for both sprint and power boat racing can be established in the Bay of Quinte and even the Moira River, if able. As stated before Wednesday night's meeting is open to all interested in any form of aquatic sports, that might include boating and the glorification.

It is seldom we have been privileged to witness a wrestling bout in Belleville where the supporters of the sport were perfectly satisfied to sit back in their seats and watch the contest with the spirit of the contestants with the occasional boisterous cheer, but this is actually happened the other night when Count Zarnoff, the white Russian nobleman, won over Benny Stein, The Jewish lad from Toronto, to the huge praises of the work of the veteran Zarnoff. Wednesday night coupled with the announcement, that Zarnoff had been signed to meet Scotty McDougall, the veteran Canadian grappler, in the main bout of the wrestling night's wrestling show at the Hume Arena, Belleville, should prove a real treat as manner, with years of experience behind them and strange to say their acts and methods have been made popular only by their cleanness and fairness for action and rough tactics exemplified by the contestants.

The 'Collegiate campus was nothing short of a beehive of industrivity last night, two softball practices and a baseball workout being carried out simultaneously. The Aajmas Club kids and the Vocational Commerce outfiters were at different ends of the field, while "Stub" Barrett's boys were limbered their arms along the sidelines. Three batters were out to run across. "Lefty" Weeks, Joe Kelleher and Bert Noakes all taking the knocks out of their arms.

Coach Barrett is still in the field for another junior inconsistent, however, as Wyeks is over the junior limit. The junior batsters are jubilant in the fact they have uncarthed a likely looking catcher in Jim Pepper, who by he's as good a ball player as his dad of old.) Coach Barrett had 15 teen-aged boys out last night and will resume practice Thursday night. Pepper and Noakes were named Jarrell from the S.S.U., were present also. Permeating new jobes, the size of the lads, there wasn't a spectator in the crowd. The juniors will adjourn to the Exhibition Park following Thursday night's practice at the Collegiate.

Hodge Podge: DiMaggio's big bat is beginning to talk. Yesterday it accounted for circuit blow No. 2 of the season and spoke rather loudly as the Yanks won over the Senators. Lou Gehrig was advanced in the A.L. race, ...Joe McCarthy has accepted Cooper's challenge to the Yankee batting order engineered by the king himself, under which Gehrig worked in the movies, are still causing him, that is judging from his batting average, which looks like a green peace's track time for the mile.....Carlos Bill Terry's Giants made it 11 consecutive yesterday. It's the second Leafy open at home Thursday.....Preston says "no dice" relative to the proposed Inter-provincial baseball league in the Intercounty League.....Did you know the Chicago White Sox have the only Japanese battboy on record, he's Yosh Kawano of Los Angeles, Cal., and not a movie celebrity?

Number 7: Harry Balaban of the well-known Chicago family of theatre-owners, joined our fourscore in a recent game over the Hollywood course at Hollywood Beach, Fla. I never had seen Harry when I took up the game with golf clubs in my hands. I was amazed to see how well he played. He was a natural golfer. Not only did he have a fine swing, but he had perfect timing. He was a natural athlete. Looks Queer, Sometimes

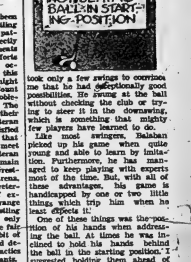
I heard a man who follows sport very closely and I recall his opinion it was a peculiar fact that some people had confidence and others couldn't acquire it. On the surface it appears rather queer, but on giving the matter a little closer scrutiny, the veil drops off and it becomes a very ordinary fact. Let's put it this way. The person can drive down the sidelines, naturally he is going to have confidence because he has done it. Another player perhaps could get within a foot of the line how he? Hector can he have confidence? Nothing is up to prove to him that that confidence is the actual knowledge that you can do it. And this was not true there wouldn't be any sense to it all and athletes would be getting yearly by the dozen.



Every now and then you read of a player who has a sublime confidence. Sure, but you still usually find that he had plenty of reason to believe in himself. After all, suppose a fellow who couldn't hit a watermelon with the Empire State building suddenly became convinced he could bat 'em out of the park. Unless he was a very rare exception, he couldn't. It is quite possible that this game felt could gradually work up a confidence, but not over-night. So, generally speaking, confidence is a faith in your ability acquired by logical reasoning. If you have done a thing or everything close to it you being able to do it, then you naturally have confidence.

Many-Sided Proposition

I must add that there are more sides to this business. Many people find it hard to keep their confidence in different environments. For example, the fellow who, although he has a mile in practice, wonders whether he can do the same in a game. Because he lets himself become convinced that a game is so much different his faith in himself is low and his curve is a curve any time and if he is concentrating on his job he will do it just as easily as he did in practice. The trouble is that in a game there are quite a few lurking factors such as the crowd and the importance of the occasion. These things upset him and sure enough he fails. The cure here is concentration.

One of these fellows has confidence. Others have to acquire it. The lad with the confidence would look much the same as the lad who doesn't. Don't fuss confidence with conceit.

If you are the type that finds it hard to acquire confidence don't get discouraged. Moaning around the wails of time. Start with the simplest of things and learn to do them well. As the number of your accomplishments grow, so will faith in your ability. Remember that confidence is based on failure. It is also smart to remember that you have a lot. Above all, don't worry and fret. The only reason some fellows stay in a slump is because they start worrying, and sure enough their confidence goes. The subject of confidence is one that plays a important part in sport and accordingly it will be cropping up all over the column in days to come. Don't be discouraged if you can and you can do it again.

took only a few swings to convince Coach Barrett that he might good possibilities. He swung at the ball with confidence and has the knack of using to steer it in the downswing, which is something that mighty few players have learned to do.

Like most swingers, Balaban has developed a pleasing, quite young and able to learn by imitation. Furthermore, he has managed to keep playing with experts most of the time. But, with all of these assets and more, his game is handicapped by one or two little things, which trip him when he is under pressure.

One of these things was the-pocket of his hands while addressing the ball. At times he was inclined to hold his hands behind the ball in the starting position." I suggested holding them ahead of the ball, to insure my staggering and hit no less than a dozen tee shots that travelled more than 200 yeard, all on the fairway. The direction and distance came from favoring the left hand, as the forward position of the hands made possible.

The backward position gives you only the right hand to work with. Your left hand and arm are hands ahead of the ball to begin with.

DANGER IN THE MIST

By

Martha King Davis

The boy was deaf—he acted stupid, but I had at times detected a queer gleam in his eyes. He'd be here spells when he was crazy—beset with evil frenzy! Did Mrs. Caldwell know of these spells and was that why she guarded him so closely?

Of course she knew! She knew it was Eddy who had been in her room that night. That was why she was so secret about it.

Did she suspect him of the crime? I thought of what Mac had overheard. How she had confessed to Dixon Murdock that she could not tell him all that happened, but her sister had to go down there. She had moaned of blood and going crazy.

Had she found Eddy at the scene of his crime? Had she tried to make it look like suicide, and then overcome with horror, screamed and fainted?

I felt all hot and shivery and confused. Somehow, I did not want the sheriff to know of my discovery. If Eddy were guilty, I hoped no one would ever, ever find it out.

I went through the rest of that day in a daze. Poor Miss Hamilton! I was still sore at him, tucked a tiny note in my apron pocket. "Forgive me, Judy dear. Have all the ghosts you want, darling, only —please grin at yours truly, and meet me on the dock tonight. Please!"

It was misty and foggy on the dock, Mac and I paid scant heed to the weather.

"Judy—do forgive me, but it was darn funny! Him in her night regalia and the expression on your face—oh, boy!"

I was still too upset to feel very joky about that experience. "You won't think it so funny when I tell you what I'd been through. I guess you would have thought you were seeing a ghost." And I told him about Mrs. Caldwell's shoulder.

He did not speak for a long moment, and then he said—a bit reluctantly: "You—you're sure it was scratch and not the graze of a bullet?"

Oh, dear—I hadn't thought of that!

"There is someone about this house, Mac. Someone crazy. And I think I know who it is. It's Eddy."

"Eddy? Go on! Eddy is harmless as a kitten."

"Well—thing this over."

He even afterward told about the episode in the Alcott garage. Mac was inclined to be skeptical of Eddy. "Yes, I agree—he perhaps does play pranks about the house. Maybe a twist in his nature, but he does it as a joke. He may have grabbed Eliza and I haven't a doubt he might laugh that way. But he didn't put that mark on his sister. Why—he adores Mrs. Caldwell. If it had been Miss Lydia—I've seen him make faces at her behind her back.

"No," Mac pulled thoughtfully at his lip, "Eddy didn't scratch his sister. I guess there was a struggle, all right, and did Caldwell did that. She killed him in self-defence. Had a talk with the detective today.

"Hub—that snoopy guy?"

"Well—that's what he's here for, Judy. He's here to find out who murdered Eliot Caldwell."

"Sheriff Wilson is a lot better detective than Parker."

"Wilson is O. K., but he hasn't had the experience this fellow has had. Parker says there isn't a doubt about Mrs. Caldwell, and he thinks she'll confess darn soon."

"He's probably been third-degreeing her. Poor thing! I wish they'd drop the case. Do you know what Eliza isn't quite so handy ful as she was. I heard her tell Mrs. Caldwell to go and lie down after the funeral, and there was actually a bit of kindness in her voice. Perhaps she did love her brother in her queer, cold way."

"More likely she thinks she has her sister-in-law all sewed up. Or, on the other hand, if Mrs. Caldwell gets clear and comes in for all the dough, Miss Lydia wants to stick in. I guess there's a good deal of money, Eliot Caldwell sold on the crest of the wave, sort of unconsciously foreseeing the way things were going. His money is very carefully invested, so Parker says and I 'spose he's been looking into affairs. By the way—did you know we were all going to be called on the carpet tomorrow? Parker wants to put some questions."

"I suppose he thinks the sheriff isn't capable of asking intelligent questions. Hump—I, for one, shan't tell him a single thing!"

Mac slipped his arm about me. "You're a loyal little cuss, Judy. Suppose I told you I committed the gory deed. You don't know very much about my dark past, woman. Perhaps I got the job for the express purpose of bumping off old Caldwell. Would you still love me?"

"He said I loved you. crazy?"

"I'll promise never to shake you again, darling."

But I sensed the twinkle in his eye. "Unhand me, villain—you are not very trusted. You know perfectly well that next time you'd just shake harder. No, mister—the next time I get scared I'll run to that good-looking reporter for protection. He won't shake me."

"He wouldn't dare," chuckled Mac, "for fear he'd lose his nose-glasses."

As we went up from the dock, I suddenly paused. Mac's arm tightened. "What's the matter, honey?"

Mac laughed. "Of course there's someone, silly. They've left. They gave him the key to that room this summer, and he claims it all his own. Sometimes he even sleeps there. They've kept it sorta quiet—didn't want old Caldwell to know, for some reason or other. Want to go over there and take a look?"

But I drew back. "I—I'm afraid"

More Questions

"Come on!" urged Mac. "You know you'll never rest 'til you see the inside of that place."

"But he locks himself in. I couldn't open the door this after-noon."

"Let's make a try."

We pushed our way through the trees and bushes along the narrow path. Mac went ahead of me, and we came under the window of the room over the garage, we looked up and we opened to a head appear for a moment, then was quickly withdrawn.

"That wasn't Eddy!" I exclaimed.

But Mac pulled me around to the garage doors.

They were open. We went softly in and up the stairs. Mac reached for the knob on the door at the top and it opened to his hand. He went into the lighted room and I followed him.

It was an ordinary sleeping-room—cot-bed—bureau—table—two chairs and wardrobe.

But at one end were some cages and boxes. In one of the cages two squirrels peered out at us with their black beady eyes. In another cage a bird of unusual plumage sat budding in a fluffy ball on a perching—there was a mouse mice in one of the boxes, and in a glass jar—tiny fish swam about. But—there was no person in that room!

Mac looked swayfwhere—under the cot—in the wardrobe. He sent to the window and leaned out. No sound!

"Darn queer!" he muttered. "Couldn't have jumped out of the window—too high up. Couldn't have slipped down the stairs and out before we came in. Couldn't even have made the stairs. Gosh! Well, we've been and come in for all the dough, Miss Lydia wants to stick in. I guess there's a good deal of money, Eliot Caldwell sold on the crest of the wave, sort of unconsciously foreseeing the way things were going. "I'll promise never to shake you again, darling."

She seemed to sink deeper into her chair. "I'm sorry—I didn't tell him.You see—he's so deaf—he understand, so little—I doubt—"

Mac offered the information that Eddy was over on the Alcott side, and Sheriff Wilson asked him to get the boy.

Mac returned a few moments later, saying that he could not make Eddy understand, but that Mr. Alcott was bringing him over.

The two entered and sat down by the door. Eddy looked as if he would be all right, and the sheriff nodded assent.

I've thought back at Peter's coming in that way—so casually, and yet—he must have very definitely planned to be at that gathering. He must have known how far things had gone, and that this was bound to be a sort of ending.

"There's a few things," said the sheriff, "that our friend Parker, here, and I would like to check up on. I guess we all agree now that Eliot Caldwell didn't commit suicide, but was shot with his own revolver Wednesday morning around one-thirty o'clock.

"You all told me pretty straight stories that night as to your whereabouts during that time, and yesterday's been a few slight variancies. Fr-instance," he turned almost deprecatingly to Mrs. Caldwell, "you said that you went directly to your room after talking with your husband at the boat-house, and that it was between twelve-thirty and one a. m. that you stayed in your room until after three. Do you still stick to that statement?"

There was a tense silence—then Mrs. Caldwell said, a bit defiantly, "Yes, I do."

Mr. Parker leaned forward suavely. "Your sister-in-law has stated that she did not hear you —that you did not come upstairs. Isn't that true, Miss Lydia?"

Miss Lydia set her lips tightly. "It is true. Her room is opposite mine. I was reading and I was wide awake. I distinctly heard Mr. Murdock. I guess I would have heard her."

"I expect you was sorta listenin' for that very thing," put in the sheriff, lapsing as he always did when deeply interested into his own dialect.

Miss Lydia flushed. "I knew Mrs. Caldwell was out with Mr. Murdock. Naturally I cared for the reputation of my brother's wife."

Again that suggestion of a sneer in Norma Caldwell's eyes.

Parker glanced at his notes. "I'd like to ask a few questions of Mac Stewart as to a conversation he overheard Thursday evening around eleven o'clock."

Poor Mac! He stiffened in his chair, and the muscles in his jaw suddenly clenched hand stood out white.

Madoc

Madoc—On Thursday evening about forty friends and neighbors gathered at the home of Mr. M. W. Conner to do honor to Mr. and Mrs. Egbert Demorest (nee May Connor). The evening was spent in cards. The happy couple received many useful gifts. Mrs. Leslie Ashley read the address which was replied to by the bride and groom. Refreshments were served.

On Friday afternoon the regular meeting of the Madoc High School Literary Society was held in the assembly hall with the president, Helen Blue in charge. After the business period during which the minutes were read and approved and correspondence received from Bancroftchewan road, the students of first form took charge of the program. Community singing was led by Ruth Hall and Tom Hawthorne. The chorus "Whistle While You Work" was sung by Jean Irwin favored with a piano solo after which Larry Lazier gave a reading. Glen Haggerty gave a vocal solo. Betty Phillips rendered a piano solo. The school paper was read by the editor, Jean Phillips. After the chorus "High Hat" Dorothy Broad gave a very interesting reading. Slides were shown by Bill Hawthorne. A play "The Fatal Trust" was presented by the following cast: Mrs. Thelma Foster; Princess, J. Kerr-Fisher; Mrs. Fisher; Scene-Shifter, Rita O'Riordon; Curtains, Harold Wannamaker, Vera Bronson.

Much credit is due to the splendid cast and to Miss Phelan for her splendid direction. The critics report was given by Mr. Smith. The National Anthem closed the meeting.

Mr. and Mrs. Monte Seymour of California are spending a few days in town.

Mr. H. Scramith is a patient in Belleville General Hospital where she underwent a major operation.

MELROSE W. I.

The regular April meeting and election of officers of the Melrose Institute was held on the twenty-eighth of the month at the home of Mrs. Maude Clarke. Besides a large attendance of members a number were present from the Quinte district.

The president opened the meeting in the usual way. Several responded to the roll call with a suggestion for the year's program. The member responsible for planning the program to be followed for the year appreciate very much a vote of the Institute.

The Secretary Treasurer read the financial report which shows a balance on hand of $79.80.

Mrs. E. M. Badgley reported on the cemetery work done in the past year and expected a meeting would be held in the near future to make plans for continuing to improve Melrose cemetery this summer.

On behalf of the members, the president, Mrs. Leslie, expressed appreciation to Mrs. Clarke for her the local leader for the past year. Mrs. Mildred Clem the retiring secretary Miss Lily Weese and Mrs. Ed Lester presented Mrs. Badgley with a pair of blue lamps and Miss Wenk with a pair of pictures.

Mrs. Badgley then took the chair and had charge for the election of officers.

The following officers were elected for 1938-39:

Hon. Pres., Miss Lily Weese.

1st Vice President, Mrs. Bruce Sherman.

2nd Vice President—Mrs. Jno. Hall.

3rd Vice President, Mrs. Roy Badgley.

Sec.-Treas., Mrs. G. McAreen.

Auditors, Mrs. R. C. English, Mrs. Arthur Hall.

Dist. Director, Mrs. Harry Badgley.

Additional Directors, Mrs. A. Beglin, Mrs. C. Hagerman. Mrs. Maude Clarke, Mrs. W. D. Robertson.

The girls were getting the program for this meeting and the leader, Miss Lily Weese, had charge. The final lesson of last year's course on mending, smocking and making a baby's bonnet was given by Miss Wesse.

Miss Bertha Smith read a poem. All enjoyed community singing accompanied by Jim Sutar by Mrs. Bernice Robinson. Miss Evelyn Badgley gave a reading "Grandma Decides to Rest" and Beatrice MacFarlane gave a few hints on "dont's" for the Institute members. Mrs. Robinson and Miss Bernice Sharpe sang a duet Miss Bernice playing the accompaniment. Miss Frances Macfarlane gave information on selecting, making and judging the school lunch. Miss Lily Weese concluded the girls' program with a talk on the origin and progress of girls' work sponsored by the Ontario Department of Agriculture. She spoke of the local projects taken up and showed examples of sewing done by the class of girls last winter who did the dance in "Being well dressed and well groomed."

The meeting was again handed over to the president who called on Mrs. Mitchell, president of Quinte Branch, to speak to the ladies. She expressed her pleasure in being present and liked the interest taken by our girls in Institute work.

Collection amounting to $4.85 was received, which paid their membership fee.

The National Anthem was sung and the hostess and lunch conveners served refreshments.

3rd Thurlow

3rd Thurlow—Mr. Andrew Doxtator spent Thursday with his nephew, Mr. Frank Doxtator and family, 2nd Concession.

I'M A MACHINIST
"With a wife and family to support, I couldn't save $6,000 in a hundred years. But I've just found a plan that makes me worth that much to my family. It's the North American Life Provincial Policy. If anything happens to me, they'll get $50 a month for 10 years—long enough for the kids to get a start at earning their own living."
"And there's something in it for me too—an income for the rest of my life when I've retired, plus dividends every year on this profit-sharing plan."
If you are in good health and can afford $25 cents a day, you can provide this protection for your family.

AT THE BELLE

Thrills, laughs and spills seemed to be the keynote of "Paradise for Three" now on the Belle screen. It's laughs and spills for the dad of the escapade in the Alps. And thrills over the revival of the ski jumps made by amateurs.

The all-star comedy cast is headed by Robert Young, Florence Young, May Astor, Edna May Oliver, Reginald Owen, Henry Owen, Henry Hull and Herman Bing.

Most of the snow scenes for the film were made near famous Lake Arrowhead, but the picture company was on location for several weeks, during which every principal was required to ski.

The story concerns a rich capitalist who wins his own name for a prize slogan and goes to the Alps to claim the prize. He pretends to be poor and takes his valet along to act as a rich man. His family follows him to the Alps. Morgan is actually rich, but they make a mistake and enter the slogan contest winner, Young, as the rich man.

Young has been poor so long that he enjoys the mistake, and that's where the trouble starts. Miss Astor tries to vamp all three men, much to the disapproval of Miss Rice, Morgan's daughter, who is with his housekeeper, Miss Oliver, to put a stop to the vamping.

Mingling the sort of intrigue that is making headlines in the newspapers with comedy and humour that also have their place in the news, the composition feature is called "Espionage".

With Edmund Lowe and Madge Evans in the leading roles, the picture was produced by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. It is the glamour story of two people, one, a girl, the other a man, they are assigned to trace a phenomenal munitions manufacturer at a time when his movements are of vital importance to the world, neither is aware of the other's quest.

Most of the action is planned aboard the Oriental Express out of Paris, and the thrills, romance, intrigue and mystery are believable comedy. It has romance, intrigue, and a laugh-provoking climax to top. The Belle News of the Day, will be presented on the same programme.

He Who Laughs Last

By Kathryn Rennie Wilson

Jolly, corpulent old Dr. Billy Henderson, during forty years of practice in Ender, had ushered into the world the majority of the town's six hundred inhabitants. Every one in the village idolized him, for he was a good natured "to a fault and his generosity knew no bounds.

Young Haskell Brown, the custom tailored personality attached office manager down at the pulp mill, had lived in Ender but two years. Just long enough to earn the unenviable habit of leaving his just debts unpaid. His bills were rounded up right and his credit ebbing lower at all the village stores. Billy Brown, pipe, cigarettes, cigarettes even, which he had showered with Beau Brummel lagess were all pretty girls within a twenty mile radius of Ender. There were bills, too, for the best leather with which to decorate his high stepping correct saddle horse, the envy of all of his gleaming chromium-trimmed yellow roadster. Even his select board and keep at the Central hotel.

Dr. Billy Henderson, therefore, listened to a wide wave of protest from his beloved old cronies, the merchants and Main street, when bad little to say in return, but the truth was that he, also, was losing patience with the dashing Mr. Brown.

Soon Doctor Billy was called upon to patch up Brown after a bad spill from his spur-conscious horse. The result was quite successful so far as Brown was concerned but negligible again for the doctor. This was followed by an anxious siege of typhoid with Doctor Billy's skilled nursing. Recovered again, in spite of all this, however, no monetary reward came to him for his services, as Brown's credit exerted in a small town without a hospital.

Then finally, Doctor Billy was called upon to perform an operation on a son through college, so he appealed personally to the pow pykickers to settle up. Billy received Brown's arrears to date were exactly three hundred dollars, a ridiculously small sum for having his life saved several times.

"Great Scott! Doc! Haven't I paid that yet? Bring you in a check today!" exclaimed Brown affably as almost apologetically. Doctor Billy interrupted quickly. But the doctor's day dragged out to dismal hopelessness, for nothing like a check came to his way.

The following morning happening to meet Brown on Main street, Doctor Billy again mentioned the debt. Determined to settle matters promptly, as any man in like position was privileged to do, Brown's face became set and flushed crimson.

"Yes, certainly," he returned stiffly, controlling his temper.

"Got to have it now—have to meet an obligation myself," thought old Doctor Billy quickly.

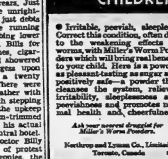
"Glad to accommodate," angrily retorted Brown, producing his check and check book. "I generally can pay my bills."

Soon now, Doctor Billy was astonished to find himself, check in hand, standing at the paying teller's wicket where he presented the slip of paper.

"Confound that fellow! I can't cash it!" muttered the teller to the cashier. "He's always overdrawing the account."

"Scamp!" exploded Doctor Billy exasperately as he began to tuck the check into his wallet, when he suddenly he inquired, "How much does he back on this?"

"One hundred—even," returned Mellings, wearily. "If he doesn't stop this—"



"Humph!" gust out Doctor Billy, as he whirled to the writing stand.

In no time at all he was back at the cashier's wicket. Holding out his own check for one hundred dollars made payable to cash. "Put this in the scoundrel's account" he ordered tersely.

The astonished Mellings promptly obeyed. Then he demanded with an old friend's prerogative, "What's the idea—why should you?"

But Doctor Billy was shoving Brown's check toward the cashier again. "Now if you'll cash this which is good as good," he chuckled grimly, "I'll take a loss of a hundred—and call it a day!"

SCOTT'S SCRAP BOOK

By R.J. SCOTT

Little Benny's Note Book

After school I went in the barber shop just to look at the funny magazines, and the little barber said to the big barber, The thing I dont understand about all this world situation, Fred, is why the different various countries don't just go ahead and get together and agree not to fite, seeing as they all claim they're so anxious to have peace, so why is that, Fred?

It's simple enough, Joe, what they all need is just a little broad mindedness, the big barber said. Now let's just take the various causes of trouble one by one. Take the question of armament and the increase of armies and navies. If Germany and Italy and Russia would only get together in a hart to hart talk and agree to let each other have the biggest standing army and the biggest floating navy and the biggest flying air force, why that'd come to terms in no time, he said.

I see what you mean, Fred, the little barber said, and the big barber said, Then there's the question of international trade, another sore spot. Let all the countries agree to buy each others products without any nonsense about tariff and import duties, the only provision being that each country shall have the sole rite to levrulue its currency if it takes a notion, leaving the others safe and sound on the gold standard, and you'd have economic harmony rite there. And then there's the problem of the supremacy of the races, he said.

Yes, the Japs, now about that, Fred? the little barber said, and the big barber said, There's nothing to it. Give the Japs a free hand in the East, with the option of deciding for herself about the West, and let th while race have complete control in the West with the privilege of using its own judgement where the East is concerned, and everything's okay, he said.

Ending the last of the subject on account of 2 men walking in just then for 3 shaves.

Claims Innocence Not Afraid to Die

Rochester, Minn., May 3.—(AP) —Two women, who were identical twins, that is from a single ovum and alike as two peas, are cited in the proceedings of the Mayo clinic here as evidence heredity is partly responsible for cancer.

Both women came to the clinic here for cancer treatment, both were cured and both are still well. One sister showed up three years ahead of the other. She had a cancer in one breast and then another cancer in the other breast.

Her sister came in afterward with cancers in exactly the same location. In both, the first of the two cancers appeared on the same side.

Dr. R. R. Phillips, who reported these cases, said they told of two other identical twins, women, who each had breast cancers, on the same side, and within a few months of each other. This happened when they were 91.

Plenty of use for a grand handbag a capacious pouch in backed stripes of red, white, and blue calfskin. The tri-color motif extends to the catch, which is a floral design in red, white and blue stones.

WALL ST. CLOSE

New York, May 3—(AP)—Stocks retrieved fractions to around two points of their recent losses in today's market.

Leaders encountered profit taking occasionally when big quotations were reduced a shade, but the upswing was resumed later in most cases. The final list was within a few points of the best of the day. Transfers were about 600,000 shares.

TORONTO STOCKS CLOSE

Toronto, May 3—(CP)— From a slow and uncertain start the Toronto stock market made headway today, especially in the afternoon trading and the close showed gains in the mining and industrial groups. International Nickel featured the base metals with a gain of about 1 1-2 to 46 or better and in the penny list Maybob was in the spotlight in an advance of several cents and a trade of around 165,000 shares. Aquarius Porcupine is also after than the recent average at about 600,000 shares.

The junior oils participated in the rally to a minor extent.

Utilities, paper and beverages registered improvement and the foods, steels and industrials held firm.

Only one or two of the base metals held back. Ventures was off for broken lots and Chromium finished a cent or two down. Sherritt, Wasamac Amulet, Pend Oreille and Aldermac added a few cents each and Beauharnois and Noranda gained 1 to 1 1-2 points each.

Eldorado was strong after an early dip to 2.18. It closed around 2.23 for a net gain of 9 cents. Trading picked up in Lake Shore on a fractional advance and Dome added 1 3-4 while McIntyre flirted 1-2.

Gillies Lake traded about 60,000 shares and closed practically unchanged. Gold Eagle, Francoeur and McVittie were strong spots in the penny list.

Board Room Gossip

By Financial Research Bureau

MARKET COMMENT

Politico-economic news from the U.S., was of a mixed nature. At times, we have been led to believe that business and the administration at Washington were about to compose their differences, while all too frequently a charge from some government spokesman against the attitude of business interests has scattered the hope of compromise and its resultant good effect on confidence, to the four winds. President Roosevelt's programme for business recovery, or rather his proposals to Congress, had a short-lived reception. Reactions have been largely against the spending principle involved. The recession market without any concrete advances made toward the reversal of the industrial down-grade in America.

In the past forty-years the trend of the New York stock market in May has been upward twenty-three times, and downward seventeen times. May markets are generally noteworthy because there was only one year, 1921, during which a decline of sizeable proportions occurred; then the market lost 18.9 per cent. from May 5th to June 20th. The lows of the year were not, however seen in May, and in fact in no one year has the market touched bottom in that month. In 1915, prices dipped sharply in May, following a sustained rally lasting over two months, but the correction was largely technical. In 1926, the upward trend was confirmed in May, and the bull market, of the next three years actually dated from that point the averages failed to decline into new low ground.

Where Recovery Begins!

W. J. Cameron, speaking over the radio during the Ford hour last evening stressed the point that Recovery Begins by individual initiative and not by Governmental methods. This speaker recalled that the countries that have made the most headway since the depression have been the ones where the Government has interfered the least.

What the United States of America needs now, according to Mr. Cameron, is less talk of leadership and more self reliance on the part of citizens.

Every Canadian business man will find the pamphlet on "Where Recovery Begins" interesting and helpful.

Standard Statistics

While we are quite possibly within a few months of the turning point in business, there is not ample reason to move cautiously until that turning point is clearly at hand and characteristics more precisely pictured.

Under prevailing conditions the stock market is not likely to discount changes in business trends far in advance of the actual event.

Financial World

Nothing has yet appeared which changes the opinion that business has almost its downward phase of the cycle, and that, at worst, we are near the end of the bear market. Until there develop evidences that a sustained upward trend for 1938 has been inaugurated, investors will not be warranted in abandoning cautious any policies with respect to expanding commitments.

Exposition Called Empire Showcase

Glasgow, May 3—Speaking at the Glasgow Exposition opening, His Majesty King George said:

In concluding, His Majesty said that the Exhibition would prove a suitable show-place for "A variety of products which bear the skill and resources of the different countries of the Empire are respectively."

"They will, I hope, provide a means whereby each and every one of all nationalities where ideas can be exchanged and points explained to the end that a fuller knowledge is appreciate the outlook and problems of others may be up doing help toward a better understanding of the peoples of the world.

"Confident I am that this great Exhibition can make a real contribution to the general well being. I have the greatest pleasure in declaring it open."

Artillery Salute

A fanfare of trumpets and an artillery salute of 21 guns greeted the King's declaration that the exhibition was officially open and a few minutes later squadrons of aircraft roared overhead in salute over the royal dais.

The Exhibition pavilion Their Majesties were escorted around the Exhibition by Vincent Massey, Canadian High Commissioner, followed by four mounties. At one point the King inspected a display of dolls. She purchased two and remarked that they reminded to the Princesses at Buckingham Palace.

Their Majesties showed the keenest interest in a huge map of Canada mounted on burnished copper, depicting the life and industry of the Dominion.

Before leaving the King paused to chat with the mounties. He asked Sergeant Dunbar, commanding the guard of honour, how long they would be in Glasgow and when Alberta replied they would be there for the duration of the Exhibition.

SURPRISE PARTY ON 79th BIRTHDAY

Mother of William Thompson Showered With Many Gifts

A surprise party was held last night at the home of Mr. William Thompson, Massasaga, in honor of the seventy-ninth birthday of his mother, Mrs. Archie Thompson, when her children and grandchildren gathered to help celebrate the evening which was spent in a social way. She received many useful present. Her eldest grandson, Leslie Thompson read the address, which is as follows:

May 2nd, 1938

"Dear Mother and Grandmother, "We have gathered here tonight on this occasion to wish you many happy returns on your seventy-ninth birthday.

"Words cannot express how grateful we are to have had such a good mother and grandmother throughout these years. Although life may have seemed dreary to some of us here you have always cheered us on our way by the spirit which you received from God.

"We all wish you the best of health, happiness and many more birthdays.

"From your children and grandchildren."

Judgment Reserved In H. T. A. Charge

Judgment was reserved in a criminal negligence charge preferred against John W. Silvera Channonville, in a special police court here before Magistrate E. J. Butler K. C. at the Court House this morning.

The case was preferred by H.T.O. Sam Erwine, was the outcome of an accident on Highway number 2 Shannonville on January 15th last when Stewart Hall, a motorist was driven by Stewart is said by the prosecution to have struck a cyclist, Louis Lemoine, Shannonville. Leverton was knocked from his bicycle and sustained injuries which resulted in his being a patient in the Belleville General Hospital for some considerable period.

His Worship heard the evidence of Provincial Constable Harry and Donnan K. C. and R. D. Arnott K.C., representing the defendent before he reserved judgment until May 9th.

Motorcycle Patrolman Erwine, Leverton, Stewart and John Flisgerald testified this morning. The road was quite slippery at the time of the accident, the defence said. "The cyclist was on the wrong highway" and returned without giving warning as any citizen was approaching," I submit "it was an unavoidable accident," stated Mr. R. D. Arnott.

Greek Society Meets at Ottawa

Members of the Greek race in Belleville and district, as well as representatives from other sections have been given invitations to attend the first National Convention of the Greek Ahepa, a Greek fraternity, which is being held in the Chateau Laurier, Ottawa today and Wednesday. It is not believed that many from Belleville will attend.

The convention will show its appreciation of Canada's part in the Hellenic citizenship in this country by officially recognizing the organization in a resolution, it was stated.

Though it is the first Convention in Canada for only three or four years past, the Society has been active in the United States for some time, with a claimed membership of 50,000. Peterboro has a strong membership city in which organization work has been carried on in the central area.

GARDEN HILL COWS HAVE TWIN CALVES

John Orrill of Garden Hill, just north of Port Hope, believes he has the champion breeding cow in that district. Ten days ago one of his cows gave birth to twin calves. This fact was duly attested. On Sunday of this week another of his cows presented the first bovine accomplishment.

FISHERMEN TOURISTS SLOW IN ARRIVING

Tourist fishermen have yet to make their appearance in the district even if they have been in the province for some days past, it is indicated by the non-sale of nonresident licenses at the office of the Front Street office. Though the fishing season would have been on for more than a week, as yet no sales are reported.

ASPARAGUS SELLS AT 20-30 CENTS PER POUND

A good supply of Spring vegetables featured the produce for the day with asparagus heading the variable offering. Found in abundance the vegetable was offered at 20c, 25c, and 30c each, according to quality.

Spring onions were quoted at 10c and 15c per bunch with fresh lettuce offered at two bunches for 15c. Rhubarb was again plentiful with bunchites offered at 10c-15c.

Eggs showed no change over week-end quotations, being offered at 23c per dozen. Winter vegetables were available selling at prevailing prices.

RELIEF STRIKER IS COMMITTED

Geo. Kellett Charged With Theft And Bail Set at $2,000

Toronto, May 3—(CP)— George William Kellett, arrested when he appeared before Premier Mitchell Hepburn last week with a delegation of Toronto township relief strikers, was committed for trial today on a charge of theft of $310.63 from the Province of Ontario. Bail was set at $2,000.

By an amendment requested by C. J. Snyder of the Attorney-General's Department, the information regarding the alleged thefts was altered to include the years 1936 and 1936, instead of a period in 1936. Kellett pleaded not guilty through his counsel.

Three other men who are on strike for relief jobs in protest against the township's action in cutting relief allowances are to appear in court, as are three women, on charges of creating a disturbance. They were arrested last week in Premier Hepburn's office after the delegation marched to the parliament buildings from Lakeview, where the strike is centred.

Class Antagonism Greatest Menace To Business

Washington, May 3—(AP)—President George H. Davis of the United States Chamber of Commerce said today that class antagonism is the greatest menace to business.

"Experience is bringing home the realization that we cannot carry far by penalizing the good in the bad," Davis told the Chamber. He said in a speech prepared for the Chamber's annual convention. "Under the American system organized as it is, held together by the ties of mutual helpfulness, we all sink or swim together."

New Pension for Widows and Minor Children

Washington, May 3—(AP)—A new pension system for widows and their minor children by receiving study by the United States Social Security Board at the request of President Roosevelt, it was disclosed today.

Benefits would go to the families of workers who pay social security taxes after they become receiving the retirement age of 65. Under existing law, only the worker who dies before the retirement age receive only a sum equal to 3.5 per cent of his contributions from January 1, 1937, to the time of his death.

The Qualified Sow

To qualify for advanced registration, a sow must attain a certain standard in three ways at least.

1. Produce—she must weigh, eight or more pigs.

2. Maturity—the pig must reach a certain standard of weight for age, which is roughly 200 pounds at 200 days.

3. Slaughter Test—that from her carcass must score at least 75 out of 100 point.

As a further step in pig testing, feeding stations are now established in several provinces and when accommodation is available, the four pigs for test are forwarded to the station and placed on test there at 70 days of age. A standard ration is fed and accurate records of feed consumed and weight gain are kept. This gives this additional information regarding actual cost of gains and for this reason the feeding station results are more valuable than those obtained with home feeding. The purchaser of breeding stock is naturally interested in obtaining animals backed by low feed consumption records.

Daladier the Soldier

Edouard Daladier, the new premier of France, represents the genuine native character bit whether he is called as aggressive as he seems or whether a certain weakness is hidden behind his harsh "allbrutal" mask remains to be seen, says Arved Arenstam in the weekly Weltschau of Zurich, translated by The Living Age. Just now France inclines to the strong-man interpretation, the Swiss writer thinks.

"Daladier has been able to keep the army, the sacred defender of the nation, out of the recent heated political struggles. As Minister of War he worked uninterruptedly; improved, built, adapted where changes. This post now is regarded as being virtually apolitical. And though the aviation ministry and the navy ministry exist as independent institutions, actually they are under the orders of the war minister who is the responsible head of the entire French defence establishment.

"During his tenure of that office, his popularity and prestige have increased remarkably. He has striven unceasingly to increase the efficiency and morale of the soldiers."

Daladier sprang from the people. His father was a baker in the Vaucluse region, a mountainous land where the people lack the amiable attitude of the Provencal. Rather, they are like their region itself—rough, even sometimes wild.

"These men, of whom there is not a great many in France, can be killed, mutilated, but they never

Mr. Rowell said he did not recall any instance where government in Ontario did not pay its fair share of taxation, as the Ontario statement claimed.

Prof. Taylor felt that was the implication when the statement had suggested the Dominion taking over several fields. He seemed to be an idea that there was much unfairness in the Ontario tax set-up.

"There are a good many delusions in the rest of Canada regarding Ontario and a good many delusions in Ontario regarding the rest of Canada," said Mr. Rowell.

iversity, for the Provincial Government to make it impossible to collect taxes on land in the West at least.

If that had been done it would merely mean repossession of the lands, Dominion or Provincial, observed.

Prof. Taylor said that while Dominion taxation might be uniform, the type of taxation might bear more heavily on one section than another, a tax on wheat could be passed on, but land bear more heavily on one area than others.

Says Ontario Contributes

Commissioner R. A. MacKay supplied to it would not be fair to suggest Ontario contributed 40 per cent of Dominion taxation, as a percentage.

Good wheat prices would alter that.

Under the Dominion system of taxation in 1937 however the West ran into lean years, the same thing would happen. Prof. Taylor concluded.

PUBLIC FRIEND

Number One!

Can you imagine being without your daily newspaper? You'd have no complete, up-to-the-minute information about what's going on in the world around you . . . no complete reports of great sporting events . . . no recipes, menus or kitchen helps . . . or detailed weather forecasts. And wouldn't you miss the daily visit of your favorite comic character?

But more than anything, you'd miss the opportunities presented by the advertising in your Daily Newspaper, for it is such advertising that helps you spend your money wisely. If you have something to buy, your daily newspaper is your guide to value.

And if you have something to sell, your daily newspaper becomes the "open sesame" to sales . . . Through it, your advertising messages reach the masses of the people interested in what's news today . . . people who have need of your product and the money to buy it!

Hitler Discusses Colonies with Mussolini on State Visit

HITLER LEADS IN DISCUSSION WITH MUSSOLINI

German Chancellor Visits Tombs of Fascist Leaders

POINTS IN REVIEW

Pontiff Laments Swastika Non-Christian Cross Hoisted on Holy Day

Rome, May 4—(CP)—The Dictators of Germany and Italy, in private conversations between the festive duties of Chancellor Hitler's state visit to Rome, today discussed the question of colonies.

An informed source told the Associated Press their exchange dealt entirely with the colonial question. Hitler during most of the talking, Premier Mussolini the listening.

Rome, May 4—(AP)—Chancellor Hitler began a week's heavily-charged program today by paying homage to Italy's Kings and her unknown soldier, who lies in the vast white Vittorio Emanuele monument in Veneta Square.

The Fuehrer laid a wreath at the soldiers' tomb while bands blared and members of his party solemnly stood. They then went to Capitoline Hill to salute the monument to fallen Fascists.

Premier Mussolini called for his guest at the Palace in an automobile. Followed by 15 cars, they rode through streets lined with grands and modern, steel gray morning crowds.

Fancily dressed motorcycle police escorted the party on his morning's round. They stopped first at the Pantheon, where are the tombs of Kings Vittorio Emanuele II and Umberto I. The Fuehrer placed wreaths at the tombs.

The brilliant, unclouded "Hitler weather" which followed him into Italy yesterday gave way to chilly rain before the state round of formalities was completed.

Points Suggested

None outside the group of immediate confidants knew what the two dictators had to say in political conference.

Why the Weather?

By Major A. H. Thiessen

Science Service Meteorologist

Oxygen and free Men did not discover until 1774 that it was the oxygen of the air which is necessary for fire. The oxygen of the air is responsible for most of the oxidizing occurring in nature. The rusting of iron or the tarnishing of copper and silver are simply examples of slow oxidation; while the burning of wood, coal and paper are examples of rapid oxidation, which is the chemical process of oxygen combining with these substances. Breathing is another example of the use of oxygen in our bodies; we breathe out carbon dioxide.

THE WEATHER

Toronto, May 4—(CP)—Thundershowers have occurred in the region of the Great Lakes, also moderate rain in the northwestern Ontario and light showers in some parts of the west, but the weather has been fair from the Ottawa Valley eastward to the Maritime Provinces. Low pressure extends south-southwestward from northern Manitoba to the southwest States, while high pressure covering northwest Quebec.

Lake Superior—Moderate to fresh variable winds; mostly cloudy today and Thursday with thundershowers; not much change in temperature.

Manitoba: West and northwest winds; partly cloudy. Thursday, partly cloudy with much the same temperature and a few light scattered showers.

Saskatchewan and Alberta: Partly cloudy today and Thursday with not much change in temperature; a few light scattered showers.

No Amalgamation Says Ross Gray

Liberal Party Stands For Integrity, Maintenance Of C. N. R., Claim

London, Ont., May 4—(CP)—The Liberal party stands for the "integrity and maintenance" of the Canadian National Railways as a publicly-owned and operated institution, according to Ross Gray, Liberal member of the House of Commons for London West.

Addressing the annual convention of the Ontario Wome's Liberal Association here last night, Mr. Gray criticized what he said was a movement under way for unification of Canada's two great railway systems. Statements by Sir Herard Beatty, President of the C.P.R., about economies that could be effected were "not generalities," he said.

Hon. L. J. Simpson, Ontario Minister of Education, told the listening, Mr. Simpson said that great changes, particularly in the field of education, had taken place in Canada in the past 25 years. In 1875, he said, Ontario's outlay on education was $600,000; last year it was $11,250,000.

Ninety per cent of students have no thought of a university education, only 10 per cent receiving the full benefit of the matriculation curriculum, Dr. Simpson said. He recommended a specialized course to meet the talents of the student. "A smattering of subjects is of little use," he added.

Hon. Earl Rowe Intends to Complete Program of Reorganization

Toronto, May 4—(CP)—Determination to remain leader of the Conservative party in Ontario until he has "shaken from the ship the barnacles and leeches of the past years" was expressed last night by Hon. Earl Rowe before the Eglinton Riding Women's Conservative Association.

"I am still leader of this party," Mr. Rowe said. "And I intend to complete, with your help, the reorganization of the party that I announced after the last election."

ONTARIO ARGUES TAX PRIORITY ON PERSONAL INCOME

Walters Declines to Suggest Alternative Source For Federal Gov't.

COMPENSATING FORCE

Walters Suggests Corporation Income Tax be Retained by Dominion

Toronto, May 4—(CP)—As he pressed Ontario's argument for priority in the personal income tax field, Chester Walters, provincial controller of finance, today declined to suggest an alternative source from which the Dominion could collect the amount now obtained from income taxes.

Chairman H. W. Rowell, of the Royal Commission on Dominion-Provincial relations, asked Walters to suggest another possible source for the Dominion, to collect a quarter of its share.

"That's for them to discover," Mr. Walters said.

Mr. Rowell said the commission had to consider all angles of the problem. "There is no point in their recommending something impractical.

"It is not for Czechoslovakia to tell Herr Hitler where he can get another outlet," Mr. Walters contended.

"I trust the relations between Ontario and the Dominion are not similar to those between Germany and Czechoslovakia," Mr. Rowell commented.

Walters Expresses Doubt

Mr. Walters said he doubted that the Dominion had ever deliberately considered the business of returning the income tax field to the provinces.

Commissioner H. P. Angus asked what compensating force there would be between the provinces if income tax was made provincial.

That would be done through the corporation income tax, which should have been leavily applied in the Dominion, Mr. Walters said.

Ontario Income Tax

Mr. Rowell suggested an Ontario income tax would not help the west and Maritimes to carry the relief load. It would not be applicable across the Dominion.

Mr. Walters agreed there was little uniformity now. Subsidies were not uniform, Ontario getting $9 per acre, while Saskatchewan received several dollars.

Considering Relief

Toronto, May 4—(CP)—The Ontario government today declared its relief policy broader the earlier relief load—if the Dominion would grant it prior right in the income tax fields.

On both moral and equitable grounds the province has first claim on income taxes and all other direct taxes, Chester Walters, provincial controller of finance, asserted as he continued presentation of the province's financial "case" before the Rowell commission.

ROLLED BENEATH STREET CAR

Thomas Arthur, 35, of 61 Dundas St. Arthur, 31, suffered critical injuries today when he fell from his bicycle and rolled beneath a street car on Queen Street. Head injuries were examined for the possibility of a skull fracture.

The girl, who was on the way to work, was pulled from beneath the car's "cow-catcher" by firemen of the nearby Kew Beach station.

Chinese Offensive Along Front Smashes Opposition for 12 Miles

Shanghai, May 4—(AP)—A seven-weary, outnumbered Japanese army had lost 24,000 men, killed in fighting in recent days about Taocheng and Phsien on the south and east of the Lunghai railway in Central China, a drawing formed the west side. There the Japanese lines are fortified and these estimates from neutral sources.

A vigorous Chinese army believed to have been reinforced to 800,000 men, for the counter-assault in Shantung Province, sought to put an end once and for all to the first phase of the Japanese offensive which had for its major objective the linking of conquests in North China and the Japanese-occupied areas about Shanghai and Nanking.

Japan struck back with a ferocious air raid upon Suchow, Chinese base and junction of the east-west Lunghai line and the north-south Tientsin-Pukow railway. Chinese reported 70 killed and wounded and 200 houses burned and destroyed in the raid.

BELLEVILLE THE BEAUTIFUL

For and wide, from ocean to ocean, and even across the seas, this city is known as Belleville the Beautiful, and it is to the best interest of every citizen that this worthy name be deserved. Every citizen should constitute himself or herself a Vigilante, self-sworn to preserve the good name of this city—Belleville the Beautiful. For and wide the beauties and advantages of Belleville have been extolled by the Chamber of Commerce of this city, and it is up to the citizens to back up this worthy organization which represents the best thoughts, and the best ambitions and community building ideas of the citizens.

Belleville Chamber of Commerce, with a view to preserving and protecting the claim of this city to the name Belleville the Beautiful, will launch a Campaign Monday, May 9, 1938, for the purpose of encouraging a general community housecleaning, inside and out, a Paint Up, Clean Up, Fix Up, Plant Up, Campaign.

Belleville City Council has endorsed this project and by proclamation of Mayor Jamieson Bone all citizens are called upon to do their duty in helping to carry out this very worthy object.

No community can get very far without united effort, let us all work together and make this campaign so successful that this city will have a greater claim than ever on the name BELLEVILLE THE BEAUTIFUL.

Let every citizen do something to improve or beautify the city, discourage the throwing of waste paper and rubbish on the streets, lawns and flower gardens can be improved, improvements added to homes and business.

Clean Up, Fix Up, Plant Up Campaign — all working together with one aim, all for one and one for all, and all for the city of Belleville.

CANADA SHORT OF BALANCED BUDGET BY $20,000,000

Exact Deficit Will Not be Known Until Budget Presented

DROUGHT GRIEVOUS

Ottawa, May 4—(CP)—Canada will be short of balancing its budget by the fiscal year which ended on March 31 by about $20,000,000 if calculations by a minority well informed source, based on published revenue and expenditure returns, are correct. The exact deficit will not be known until Finance Minister Dunning makes his budget speech, possibly later this month.

In his budget address a year ago Mr. Dunning—after announcing an over-all deficit for 1936-37 of $87,- 265,000—told the House that expenditures could be kept to $530,000,000 in the next fiscal year he expected the deficit for 1937-38 would not exceed $35,000,000.

O. M. A. President Addresses Health Insurance Plan To Aid Lower Income Groups

Dr. MacKenzie Says State Employer And Employee Would Contribute

A SUCCESS IN ENG.

Toronto, May 4.—(CP)—Dr. A. J. MacKenzie, Toronto, in his presidential address to the Ontario Medical Association today advocated a health insurance plan as solution of lack of medical care given lower income groups.

Speaking to 1,400 doctors gathered for the 58th annual convention, he declared governments are tending to approach more and more on the liberty of the individual and legislators generally accepted health as the people was a proper domain for state control.

Dr. MacKenzie discussed medical surveys in the United States and Great Britain. "There are many unescapable conclusion," he said. "Those in the lower income group do not receive nearly as much medical care as those to whom expense is no deterrent.

Solution Suggested

"The best solution offered would seem to be a form of health insurance for those of an income up to certain limit so that the cost would be known and widely spread.

"There is a reasonable expectation of continuous employment a plan could be evolved after the pattern of the Associated Medical Services incorporated of Toronto) which is being tried out under the aegis of this Association.

"The total cost is borne by the Police Anxious to Discover Source

At the request of Crown Attorney Gordon Walmsley, Provincial Police were called in to investigate the finding of a pair of human hands near Picton yesterday. Although the dismembered hands were in a perfect state of preservation and believed to have been cast among the rubbish by a medical student Crown Attorney Walmsley is anxious to learn how they came to be abandoned, other human bones having been found in Prince Edward County previously.

"We are quite anxious to learn from where where these human hands, that apparently have been preserved in alcohol, actually came from. No doubt they were the property of a university student, but the question of where they came from and who deposited them in the ground should be cleared up in the satisfaction of the authorities," stated Mr. Walmsley to the Canadian Intelligencer today. Sergeant Harry Thompson of the O. P. P. is conducting the police investigation.

BRITAIN UNEASY ON PRODUCTION BRITISH PLANES

Questions Raise Shower of Supplementaries in House

MASS PRODUCTION

Lord Winterton Asks House to Wait Full Statement

By GEORGE HAMBLETON
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, May 4 (CP Cable)—Anxiously deepens over the production of British Aircraft. Back benches on both sides of the House of Commons today reflected the growing uneasiness.

A series of questions addressed to Earl Winterton, Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster, brought a shower of supplementaries. They challenged the efficacy of present production methods, management, time paid, delays in supplies and the equipment of first-line aircraft. It was alleged engineering had been discharged by aircraft manufacturing firms.

Full Statement To Come

On a number of points Lord Winterton asked the House to await a full statement. He will make Thursday next when the Opposition stages a three-day attack on the Government over the whole question.

Considerable deliveries, Lord Winterton said, have already been made, 600 aeroplanes produced under conditions to which large scale production had to be applied consistent with a high standard of efficiency and safety.

Says Works Short of Orders

Duncan Sandys, Conservative, questioned why it was that a number of the Government's aircraft expansion projects were behind, that companies were short of orders and that large scale engineering works were discharging employees.

Lord Winterton: "The numbers employed in the aircraft industry have been largely and progressively increased."

MAYOR WELCOMES SYNOD MEMBERS

Moderator General Assembly Special Speaker of Morning Sederunt

The Synod of Kingston and Toronto was conducted by Rev. Dr. R. O. Stewart, Kingston, at the opening session today. The visiting ministers were welcomed on behalf of the Synod of Belleville in a brief address by Mayor Jamieson Bone. "Municipal governing bodies throughout the land as well as all higher bodies exist, first to the church for the strengthening of moral fibre in their leadership in more than less towards any modern "isms", which are not a help but a real present serious plight," said his worship.

Moderator Speaks.

In an inspiring address, Dr. Munro presented his impressions as he visited various Synod and Presbyteries in all parts of the Dominion. The trend of the times, the church is most impressive from coast to coast. "Places where strength is apparent and isolated areas where there is not such strength." But nowhere is there the sound of despair. Perhaps there is satisfaction in knowing that our problems are characteristic of other denominations. "Travelling in all parts of the nation, one observes the contrast of various bodies attempting to conduct church court. Some Synods poorly attended, others represented in a spirit of enthusiasm. This Synod is the largest and most representative in all our church.

Composed of a minister and representative elder from each pastoral charge, such courts are enabled to give frank and fair consideration to church problems and by resolution present their findings to the general assembly. In 1925 and the years following there was a concerted de-

CHARTS, TABLES ARE EXPLAINED BY COL. BIGGAR

Public Interest in Doings of Senate Committee Keenest in Years

HIGHWAY TRAFFIC

Comparison of Figures of C.N.R. and C.P.R. Lines is Presented

Ottawa, May 4—(CP)—A large crowd of parliamentarians and the general public filled the Senate Railway Committee rooms today when the long-heralded inquiry into Canada's railway problem got under way. Not since the Beauharnois probe of several years ago was there such a manifestation of public interest in the doings of the Upper House.

Charts and tables prepared by the Dominion Bureau of Statistics for the committee were explained by Col. C. M. Biggar, committee counsel. They showed railway revenues rose steadily from 1918 to a high of $653,722,000 in 1928 and then began to fall until 1933 after which they received slightly and rose to $364,788,000 in 1936. From 1906 the number of employees rose steadily, more rapidly to 1930, remaining fairly steady during that time.

CHILD TAKEN IN BY KINDLY NEIGHBOR

When the abandoned alone of little two year old Kathleen Wright, 69 St. Charles Street, were found alongside of the Canadian National right-of-way near her home today, parents and neighbours became alarmed and naturally frightened relative to the child's safety.

Hurried calls brought police to assist in the search for the missing child while parents and neighbours thoroughly combed the railway right-of-way in quest of any signs of the little child. Later, however, little Kathleen was found at 57 East Moira Street where she had wandered in and was being protected by the kindly tenants. Little Kathleen was later returned to her anxious parents who had feared the worst after finding the child's shoes abandoned alongside the railway tracks. The child is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Sam Wright, 69 St. Charles Street.

THREAT TO DESTROY BUILDINGS THWARTED

Flames from a blazing manure pile in the barnyard of H. Boyce, Thurlow Township, threatened to destroy Cannifton, threatened to destroy the farm buildings yesterday afternoon. Neighbors rushing from nearby fields succeed the blaze in its origin and succeeded in reducing it before any material damage was done.

Coroner of another striking from the blazing mass were noticed from the house by Mrs. Boyce who gave the alarm. Fire department officials in Belleville were notified, and equipment and men stood by for some time awaiting word to leave for the scene of the fire should it assume dangerous proportions. The origin of the fire is not known.

MAYOR OF PICTON CASTS DECIDING VOTE

With Mayor Nesbitt McKibbon casting the deciding vote in favor of the year, Picton Council passed at a by-law at a special meeting last night, adopting daylight saving to start on May 15.

A spirited debate preceded the adoption of the by-law with opinion being equally divided among the eight councillors present.

With a deadlock of four each, resulting in the by-law failing, Mayor McKibbon decided the issue when he cast the deciding vote in favor of the by-law.

MALCOLM WRIGHT BARRISTER, DIES

Suffers Heart Attack And Succumbs Before Reaching Hospital

Death came suddenly to Malcolm Wright, well known Barrister and Solicitor of this city, Tuesday afternoon, May 3rd. While at luncheon he was seized with a heart attack and passed away before he could be conveyed to the Belleville General Hospital. The shock of his sudden death came as a great shock to his many close friends and acquaintances and expression of regret at his passing were heard from all sections of citizens.

The late Malcolm Wright was a resident of Belleville for many years and as a barrister and a citizen he deservedly enjoyed the high regard of all citizens. He was a man of upright character and he held a high conception of honor and fairness. He was a great reader and student; a sound lawyer and he possessed the full confidence of his clients, whose interests were at all times a matter of concern. He was a good friend and an interesting companion. As a law student in this city fifty years ago he took an active part in the Legal Society and Debating Assignment. The lawn bowling club and the curling rink were also a source of interesting his earlier years and he entered enthusiastically into these sports in which he was most efficient.

Born Near Picton

The late Malcolm Wright was born near Picton in Prince Edward County and was in his 78th. year. His parents were the late Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Wright; his mother's name was Miss Isabella Urquhart. He was educated in the schools of Prince Edward county and eventually became articled as a student at law with the late S. B. Burdett, Q.C., M.P., in Belleville. Upon being called to the bar at Osgoode Hall, Toronto, he returned to Belleville and entered upon the practice of law. For some years he was a partner of the late J. J. Wills, former County Judge, and after his death he practised alone. At one time he was President of the County of Hastings Law Library Association and also President of

APPROPRIATIONS FOR ROADS CUT

Decreases Likely to Affect Construction of New Roads

Provincial Government appropriations for road maintenance and construction in the County of Hastings will be cut seventeen per cent this year while north and south municipalities will receive from twenty to thirty percent decrease, according to advices received today at the County Buildings.

The decrease will affect the construction of new roads, county road officials reported, as maintenance of the present system must be kept up.

Two power maintainers and two crawlers are at present working in various parts of the county and with upwards of one hundred and thirty men on the payroll at the end of April. This does not mean that this number was employed steadily. W. H. Langdick, county road engineer stated, but at various times.

The county road system will be maintained at approximately the same cost as that of a year ago, he added, but construction of proposed new roads will be eliminated in view of the decrease in governmental subsidy.

LARGE DOCKET AT COMING COURT

Twelve Cases And One Motion Down For Decision

Twelve cases and one motion, the largest docket to be presented at a Non-Jury Sittings of the Supreme Court ever held in this city, is slated for trial before the Hon. Mr. Justice J. M. Godfrey commencing Monday afternoon next. The cases are practically all damage actions and claims.

Two of the cases listed are against municipalities for alleged gross negligence and for damages performed, against the City of Belleville. With Agnes and James Hughes as plaintiffs an action for a total of $1,750.00 damages is being sought by the plaintiffs. An action for $5,500.00 is being sought by a man named Doughty against the Township of Dungannon for injuries received through the alleged negligence of the defendants in keeping a highway in repairs.

Other cases are—Stewart-Warner Alemite Corporation of Canada versus Pratt, a claim for $1,510.97, filed owing on a promissory note; Lapore vs. Rigby, plaintiff's claim for $2,000 for injuries received when struck by the defendant's motor car last November; Preston vs. Gee and Keating, also a damage suit arising out of a motor accident; Phipps vs. Rosins and Gardiner, an action for alleged breach of agreement, amount sued, $2,500; Harwood vs. Ivey, consolidated action with counter claim by defendant regarding purchase and sale of cedar poles; Dempsey vs. Weir, an injunction for $4,000; Hartman vs. McEwen, application to set aside a bill of sale; Pluke vs. Shaw, a mortgage action. The lone motion to assess damages, is listed as between Knox vs. Graydon.

The court will witness the first appearance, in an official capacity of the Hon. Mr. Justice Godfrey in this city, Sheriff J. D. O'Flynn announced today.

MRS. W. McGINNIS NAMED DELEGATE

Will Attend District Meeting of Women of The Moose at Peterboro

The Belleville Chapter 435 of the Women of the Moose met in the Moose Auditorium last evening for their regular session. Senior Regent, Mrs. Hamilton presided. The various chairmen of committees submitted reports on the duties performed designated to them by their Grand Recorder, Miss Katherine Smith.

Mrs. York was tendered a hearty vote of thanks for the success of the banquet conveyed by her.

An invitation was extended to the local chapter to attend the District meeting to be held in Peterborough on May 10th and Mrs. McGinnis was elected delegate for that meeting and it is hoped many of the members will be able to attend in a body.

Obituary

MISS MARIE I. BONSTEEL

Many persons in Belleville were shocked and deeply grieved today when they learned that Miss Marie I. Bonsteel late residence 30 West Bridge Street, had passed away in the Belleville General hospital late yesterday afternoon. Miss Illness with pneumonia was of short duration and few of her friends knew of her illness.

The late Miss Marie Lucile Bonsteel was for some time engaged in the millinery department at the George W. Reid store in this city and by her employers she was most highly regarded. Her pleasing personality and friendly disposition attracted many friendships and her sudden passing has brought sincere feelings of regret to all who knew her.

Miss Marie I. Bonsteel was born in Sidney Township, her parents being the late Benjamin Bonsteel and Mrs. Marie Bonsteel, now residing at Glen Miller, and the late William G. Bonsteel. For some time she resided in Trenton with her aunt for nine years she made her home in Belleville, where she was a member of the United Church.

Surviving to mourn her loss and to whom the sympathy of many friends will be extended, are her mother, Mrs. William G. Bonsteel; two sisters, Mrs. W. R. Vander-voort of Windsor and Mrs. J. A. Sagle, Glen Miller, Ont.; two brothers, Mr. Don Bonsteel, Trenton, and Mr. Clide Bonsteel, Sidney Township.

Further funeral announcement is made elsewhere in this paper.

LATE MRS. GEORGE R. SECKER

The funeral of Mrs. George R. Secker took place from the family residence, 85 Gordon Street, Tuesday afternoon, May 3rd to St. Church, where the Burial Office was conducted by the rector, the Rev. Canon Wright.

Interment was made in Belleville Cemetery. The committal service was said by the Rev. O. G. Wright.

The bearers were Messrs. M. Mathews, J. Grant, E. Sunderland, G. Ronald, B. High and W. R. Pindall.

FRANCIS A. VAN NORMAN

The funeral of Francis Alexander Van Norman, infant son of Horace King Street, took place Tuesday afternoon, May 3rd, from the residence of his father, Mr. Charles W. Van Norman, 42 South John Street, and was largely attended. The service in the house and at the graveside in Belleville Cemetery was conducted by the Rev. Rural Dean A. Bensley Bourne, Vicar of St. Thomas' Church.

The bearers were Messrs. Frank Rushlow, Virgil Little, Arnold Rushlow, Chas. Barriage, Chas. Rushlow and Blanchard Campbell.

A CALL TO SERVICE

Spring is the time of resurrection, the time of new growth, when all nature rejoices in being born again, a time when all old things can be swept away and a new start made with all things made new. Belleville Chamber of Commerce of which I have the honor of being President, begins the year 1938 with high hopes for the general progress and prosperity of Belleville. The Chamber of Commerce represents the citizens of Belleville and tries to amplify the wishes and ideals of the best thought of the community and carry into effect their desires looking toward a happy, contented, prosperous and progressive community.

One of the items on the progressive program of the Chamber of Commerce for 1938 in the interest of a Better and More Beautiful Belleville is to start the spring with a general Community Housecleaning, hence the Paint Up, Clean Up, Fix Up, Paint Up Campaign which begins Monday, May 9, 1938, will usher in the spring season on a progressive note, and give every citizen an opportunity to contribute to the best interests of the city helping to make more beautiful and attractive the city we are so proud of, Belleville the Beautiful.

As the Campaign develops various methods of improving Belleville will be pointed out, and this call is for every citizen to enroll in the pleasant duty of making the city more beautiful and a better place to live in; forgetting all other differences of opinion, if any, and working together with one objective, the Betterment and Beautification of Belleville.

JOHN McINTOSH,
President Chamber of Commerce.

Belleville, May 4, 1938.

FAVORS RELIEF LONG TERM PLAN

Hon. H. A. Stewart Favors Increase Highway Tolls Over Period of Years

Ottawa, May 4—(CP)—The Dominion government should adopt a long-range relief plan, rather than a plan from year to year, Hon. H. A. Stewart, Conservative member of Parliament for Leeds, said yesterday in the House of Commons during debate on the relief bill. For instance, a gasoline bond issue should be floated which, over a period of years, would increase highway tolls. Consideration should be given to secondary roads.

He thought it not unreasonable that after activities of the national employment commission, the government should be asked to give more information as to its relief plans. Throughout the Conservative regime the government had been constantly charged with asking for a "blank cheque."

"Without Difference"

Labor Minister Rogers said the Liberal government's relief bills had provided parliament should appropriate the money to be spent under the Conservative regime. The money was appropriated by Governor General's warrants. That, Mr. Stewart maintained, was "a distinction without a difference."

Plans and projects should not be held back by the government, continued Mr. Stewart, but after they were presented could it be determined whether they were comprehensive and broad enough to deal with relief this year.

Secondary Roads

(Consideration should be given to secondary roads. There was a great deal of "shuttling" between municipal, provincial and federal authorities to see which could get the biggest share of the appropriations.

Rt. Hon. R. B. Bennett, Conservative leader, referred to reclamation work at Port Henry near Kingston, saying he had been informed the contracting firm had as one of its officers the President of the Kingston Liberal Association. This man, he said, made recommendations for work, not only at Kingston but at Trenton, Ont., and other places.

Work at Port Henry

The work at Port Henry, Mr. Rogers said, was done by contract let by the previous government of the Dominion. He had incorporated in all agreements of this sort the clause that no discrimination was to be shown because of race, creed or politics and as far as he knew, it had been observed.

CANADA SHORT OF BALANCED BUDGET

On Dominion affairs he added: "Stating my expectations in another way I shall be greatly disappointed if we cannot keep our total deficit for 1937-38 within the limits represented by the net cash deficit of the Canadian National Railway System."

Deficits Veiled

Canadian National deficits are made up by parliamentary votes and therefore have to be budgeted for like other government expenditures. In the calendar year 1937 while the C.N.R. system more than paids it operating expenses, it failed by $42,857,000 to pay its interest charges.

Bonding Dominion revenues during the earlier part of last fiscal year would have enabled the Finance Minister to present almost a balanced budget, including the C. N. R. deficit, had it not been for the drought which hit Saskatchewan so grievously and extended into Alberta, an informed source has stated. A $30,000,000 deficit would represent about the same amount as the drought cost the Dominion Treasury last year.

Ever Wonder Why You're Constipated?

Do you ever have days when you just have to drag yourself along, when you feel tired, sunk—because of that constipation? Then why not find out the real cause of your trouble?

What have you had to eat lately? Just things like meat, bread and potatoes? If that's it, you may not have to look any farther. The likely explanation is you don't get enough "bulk"—food that forms a soft mass as it passes through. It means a kind of food that isn't consumed in the body, but leaves a soft "bulky" mass in the intestines and aids elimination.

If "bulk" is what you lack, your ticket is a dish of crisp crunchy Kellogg's All-Bran for breakfast every day. It contains the "bulk" you need plus Nature's great intestinal tonic, vitamin B1.

Eat it regularly, drink plenty of water, and join the "regulars"! Made by Kellogg in London, Ont.

WOMAN PREPARES TO SALVAGE OAK

Will Enter Sunken Hull of Ship Which Foundered 70 Years Ago

Leamington, Ont., May 4.—(CP) More than 70 years after the three-masted schooner Oak Grove foundered off Point Pelee in Lake Erie, a grandmother and a diver are hurrying preparations to be the first inside the battered hull and salvage a fortune in oak and walnut logs.

The grandmother is Mrs. Margaret Campbell Goodman, formerly of Detroit, now of New York. Mrs. Goodman, a slender lady of 61, is believed the only woman in the world whose business is salvaging sunken treasure.

Less than five feet tall, and weighing less than one hundred pounds, Mrs. Goodman works under water while directing salvage operations. She's angry at the diver, Jack Browne of Milwaukee, who has announced he will also seek the treasure.

According to information, the schooner foundered in 40 feet of water three miles off shore during a storm, and lies on a clay bottom. The timber cargo is said to be worth $250,000.

"Experts tell me the wood actually improves under water", Mrs. Goodman said. "I should be inside the hull before another month passes. That young fellow Browne will not touch that ship so long as I have my contract. I found the Brunswick, and I'll get the Oak Grove."

Mrs. Goodman contends she located the New Brunswick's graveyard in the fall of 1934, and that she has a contract with Newton Eberle, son of the owner of the boat and last remaining administrator for the Eberle Estate.

Two Severed Hands Found Near Picton

Picton, May 4 (Special)—Mystery surrounds the finding of two human hands at West Lake, five miles west of Picton, Tuesday afternoon. Discovered near an old barn by Albert Kleinsteiber, the hands were identified as anatomical specimens by Coroner Dr. Donald Lighthall, who, with County Constable James Lovelace and Crown Attorney Gordon Walmsley, investigated.

The hands had been sawn from the arms at the wrist joints and skin removed and the end of the fingers dissected, stated the Coroner, who said there was evidence of the hands having been in a preservative fluid. The hands are believed to have been left there by medical students.

Digging failed to reveal any other parts.

PARTY IS BIGGER

Leader of the party though a member of federal parliament, Mr. Howe insisted progress has been made in reorganization in the past six months. He said he would support the Ontario Conservative Association executive in the face of criticism from "someone who was conspicuous by his inactivity in the last provincial election."

Mr. Howe said he would not "criticize those who think the party is not making the progress that it should—they are over-zealous and our party is bigger than their criticisms or the objects of those criticisms.

"It is not yet two years since I was chosen leader. It is scarcely six months since the last election and a lot of things have happened since then.

District Students Have High Standard

Arthur Huff, Bloomfield farmer, finished third with an average of 83 per cent. in the final test of the Kemptville Agricultural School spring term, according to statistics just released by J. C. Shearer, the principal of the school. F. Shelton, Woodstock, and H. Davies, Otlawa, with 83 and 83.5 finished first and second respectively.

Others of this district included in the results are: D. Dorrell, Tweed, 68.9; J. Clark, Belleville, 83.3. In the junior year William Bishop of Belleville finished eighteenth with an average of 72.8 and J. Bunnett, Trenton, 27th with an average of 71.7.

DESERTION PERIOD

Originally passed by committee the bill was returned to it when the Senate objected to the provision allowing a divorce petition after desertion for three years. It also objected to the one year clause. The committee today passed the bill in modified form, after defining cruelty, and sent it to the Senate for third reading.

An amendment was passed providing cruelty should mean legal cruelty "as interpreted and construed by the High Court of England in divorce and matrimonial causes."

The bill as it now stands would widen the grounds for divorce to include desertion for six years, cruelty, insanity for five years and exceptional moral depravity on the part of the husband. Only ground for divorce at present is adultery.

Doubted Passage

Senator A. C. Hardy (Lib. Brockville) doubted whether the bill would pass the House of Commons. It might, however, after one or two attempts. If wide concessions in the matter of desertion were made it might delay the measure because the final compromise might provide a longer desertion period.

Senator Hardy contended that the stiffer Canada made its divorce laws the greater would be the tendency to seek United States divorces which are not recognized here.

In Nevada people are getting a divorce in six weeks and I suppose it will go down to six days by time," said Senator Hardy. "We have in this city people who went over there and got a divorce on flimsy pretences."

He could mention six or seven "prominent people in this city" who got such a divorce. They married shortly after and when they came to Canada it was "a bigamous marriage."

"The stiffer our divorce laws the greater the abuse will be," he added. "I believe the bill should go to the Senate as it is. It is better to go down with our flags flying."

Police Blotter

Police hastened to Victoria Park yesterday afternoon to quell a disturbance that resulted in four men being held on charges of intoxication. P.C. Arnott and Plainclothes Constable Fred Izard investigated the report of fighting and disturbances and found four men engaged in fisticuffs. A portion of a bottle of native wine was found nearby. The quartette appeared before H. S. Wilson, local Justice of the Peace, this morning charged under the L.C.A. Their respective cases were enlarged until Friday. Police report three of the men were attacking the fourth in a general free-for-all participation.

RESPONSIBILITY OF THE CITIZEN

The call has been sounded—paint up, clean up, fix up and plant up. Belleville Chamber of Commerce is leading the drive for beautification and cleanliness and also mean addition of value to property and real estate, protection against the elements and health.

Belleville is set in a district of unusual beauty. Like ancient Rome this city is set upon the hills. From the waterfront to the northern limits the layout offers Belleville citizens the finest opportunity for improvement of their homes.

A thoroughly successful campaign which would add to health through cleanliness, to wealth through improvement of property and to interest of the owner individually and the citizens generally would mean what? Let us see!

Backyards and front yards put in attractive shape because they offer endless opportunities, cleaning of vacant lots, cleaning in the rarely seen cellars and attics clearing out of house gutters, improvement of garages and cleaning of room walls.

How many quarts of paint could not be given the houses, the walls and woodwork of the rooms, how much varnish put on the floors, how many porches, patios, buildings repaired and screens put in place?

Then the planting of trees, shrubbery, flower gardens, grass plots, the trimming of trees.

There comes a huge task of miscellaneous cleanup, removal of rubbish and ash piles, destruction of places of insect breeding, repairing of fences (where they are), disinfection of refuse cans and purchase of adequate receptacles.

Every reader knows how year after year the Board of Health takes steps to see that there is a spring cleaning of properties, knowing full well that unnecessary health risks in this city with garbage collection, inspection and sanitation have gone a long way to eliminate the possibilities of disease by destroying breeding places and improving health in every way possible.

A successful cleanup campaign unites citizens in the great task of cleansing, painting, repairing, improvement and planting, an object worthy of the cooperation of every citizen as the citizen who does not respond detracts that much from the one hundred per cent clean-up and paint-up. Belleville Parks Board and the Horticultural Society are examples when this spirit of citizenship is ornate. Their work bears fruit in a better, healthier, more beautiful city, and so will the efforts of all citizens who live up to the opportunity of having their homes and premises such that they attract admiration and praise.

PRESERVING THE BEAUTY OF ONTARIO

Everyone thrills to the beauty of the wild flowers especially in spring when they gladden the woods so lately freed of snow. But every year fewer people in our cities and towns have a chance to enjoy the wild flowers, because not many of them are left in city parks or in the woods near the towns and cities.

Overpicking is not the only reason for the disappearance of wild flowers, but it one that we should control. Two classes of wild flowers are injured by being picked. The first class includes the Trillium which has its foliage leaves on the same stem as the flower. When the flower with these leaves is picked the plant is robbed of its leaves and no plant can live without leaves because these are the organs that create the it to manufacture its food. The second group of flowers injured by picking are those which depend on seeds for next year's plants. If the flower is picked no seeds are produced and so no plants can grow next year. The trailing gentian is one of the loveliest of this group.

There is another reason why we should not pick the flowers in or near our cities and towns. There are not enough of them for all and if the first person who finds them carries them away, he robs everyone else of the chance of seeing and enjoying their beauty. A wild flower that is picked gives pleasure to only a few people, but if it is left to grow it may be enjoyed by hundreds or thousands.

Many wild flowers soon wither and lose their beauty and very often are thrown away soon after being gathered. They are loveliest when left growing in their natural surroundings. And so for the sake of others and for the sake of the plants themselves we should not pick the wild flowers that are still found in or near our cities and towns.

"There must be no sacrifice of principles and no shrinking of responsibilities merely to obtain quick results that may not be permanent."—Anthony Eden.

That Body of Yours

By James W. Barton, M.D.

Nature's Method of Preventing Constipation

There is a large number of the population who suffer from the habit of bowel—colon—as always full of waste matter which must be removed immediately or the poisons in the waste will be absorbed into the blood and cause many symptoms —lastness, drowsiness, pains in the joints, depressed spirits, and others.

As a matter of fact it is true that a "full" colon will cause above symptoms partly because of poisons being absorbed into the blood and also, as Dr. Walter Alvarez, Mayo Clinic, has pointed out, because the very weight of this waste in colon may cause symptoms by pulling on the nerves in colon and its support-ing structures.

However, Nature never meant that these waste should be rigorously pushed or flushed out by purgatives and cathartics or a complete bowel that requires constant flushing out, cannot remain healthy long. The bowel was not meant to be completely empty. The healthy bowel is full at times and passes downward and out of the body by means of its muscular action.

Muscle tissue can only be kept strong by exercise and if there are no muscles in the bowel to cause its work against, the muscle tissue will become flabby and the power of muscles elsewhere in the body become flabby from lack of exercise, and bowel tissue cannot be kept strong by keeping the wastes moving down by the peristaltic exercise, and rough or fibrous parts of the food.

Thus all the bending exercises, with the arms, legs and body, or work on the outer abdominal muscles, which also strengthen the muscles of the large bowel and stimulate action. In addition, the abdominal massage, or one which causes an extra flow of bile into the intestines, are also very effective.

The fibrous foods which not only help against the nerve endings of large bowel and stimulate bowel muscles, have another value. They aside from the roughness, which stimulating the bowel. They can easily digested foods—meat, eggs, fat, sugar, and starches—do not leave enough bulk or fibrous waste to stimulate bowel action so that foods, which can be digested, waste in them— fruits, vegetables, and cereals—must be eaten to prevent constipation.

Nervous, high strung individuals, with a tendency to stomach and intestinal ulcer, must, of course, avoid these rough foods, and, if unable to control, must take the advice as prescribed by their physician.

BUYING A CITY HALL

Mayor Conboy's suggestion that the public subscription the money for a city hall be taken up, suggests to us that a fine thing if each of our 142,000 people gave $5 towards it. That with the assistance of the occasional tag day and perhaps a slice of the Government grant, would ought to do the trick. Or perhaps the Mayor was thinking of bingo.

What the Journal would like to suggest, in all seriousness, is that we take a leaf from Toronto's city hall problem, raise the money for it out of taxes and pay for it as we build pay each on the spot for every last stone and timber used in the job of labor.

Let us see how it would work. If we put aside a bit of taxes $100,000 a year for eight years, invest it at five per cent, and let the interest let the whole thing accumulate, let it stand untouched for the eight years after the final payment, we should have in ten years time a fund already of a million dollars. Then we could go ahead with the building.

On the other hand, if we do the thing the Toronto way and issue bonds for the whole amount, pay interest on the debentures for fifteen or twenty years, we shall be out of pocket considerably more than $2,000,000 at the conclusion of the other by the time we have the same building for $1,500,000 out of the taxes.

There is nothing hurried about a city hall. We are doing nicely without one. The present one, in fact, a perfect set-up for a highly profitable, city hall, with conventional finance.—Ottawa Journal.

The Protestant Episcopal Church of the Transfiguration—the Little Church around the Corner—has observed the fifteenth anniversary of the rectorship of the Rev. It is still the favorite place of all for romantic couples to be married. "The Famous of the Little Church Around the Corner," of which Dr. Ray is head, has a membership of more than 9000; these people are scattered from Cape Town to Nome, but all remember the Little Church.

During his rectorship Dr. Ray has upheld the traditions of the church, which include marriages that endure, a vast amount of human tolerance and an attitude of friendliness toward the members of the

"Closed" Shop Stayed Closed

The Boston Transcript carried a story of labor relations under the Wagner Act that was typical in everything but its ensuing of the way baseless rumor disputes have been settled by the National Labor Relations Board.

In this case a group of employees in a trunk factory in Chicago, dissatisfied with conditions and demanding the usual "sole bargaining" powers went to the Board in Washington following a strike of a month's duration. Before the Board, they charged that an illegal company union had been formed, and asked that the working agreement between the company and the "inside" union be wiped out.

The usual hearings were held and what has come to be the usual decision was rendered by the Board. That is, the employees won their contention; the "inside" union was ordered disbanded, the group which originally took the matter to Washington was recognized as the sole bargaining agents for all employees in the plant, and the back pay due while on strike was ordered restored.

But, while the pattern of events up to this point was similar to the pattern in hundreds of other cases, the conclusion of this case struck a note of warning that as yet shall not do well to heed. The trunk company found that it had just as much business and good will as a result of the strike and the cost of its defense before the Labor Board in Washington as for the manner in which proceedings of this kind are conducted virtually makes a criminal out of the employer before the "trial" starts) so was so great that the only thing left to do was to go out of business.

"So," comments the Transcript "a concern which has been operating for a long time in Chicago and which has been employing 125 men, is to be forced to liquidation, in another month the factory will be abandoned and the machinery dismantled.

It was a Pyrrhic victory indeed that the employees won before the Labor Board in this case. And while this is but an isolated instance with relatively little at stake it must be clear that as long as the one sided decisions of the National Labor Relations Board persisted so will the unemployment in favor of C.I.O. unions that even William Green of the American Federation of Labor has come out against granting the Board more power than it has now be no industrial peace.

The Transcript concludes: "The Mrs. Abundant Listers down in Washington. No power on earth, labor union, or National Labor Relations Board, can force an employer to run his business permanently at a loss. The Wagner Act has deprived him of most of his privileges, but it has not taken away his right to close up shops when the odds against him are too great."—San Francisco Argonaut.

Bass and Muskie Seen Legendary

It seems to me that the best way to get to the base of conversation problems is by frank and open discussion of the laws that govern human activity in sport and fishing throughout the province. Admittedly, the present laws are not perfect and they will nearly become perfect unless we bring our grievances into the open. It is human nature to do a little ranting in private, and then close up like a clam when the proper moment arrives, but such an attitude has never performed any useful service.

Now, it has been brought home to me, by word of mouth and by letters, too, that all is not well as regards to new regulations covering fishing for pickerel during the closed season for bass and muskinonge. It appears that, while the majority are pleased with the rule permitting fishing from shore, some are not at all enthused over the banning of artificial lures. Since these rumblings reached me I have given the matter considerable thought and must say frankly that I have still to hear from you), that when the motive for such a ruling is known, that it appears to be a just one.

It must be apparent to those who read the regulations that practically all of the restrictions placed on pickerel fishing have not been made with a view to protecting pickerel but are aimed at the individual protection of the bass and muskinonge during their period of spawning. The restriction of artificial lures must be laid into this class. It bars the illegal fisherman from casting a spinning lure in the nose of the spawning bass and more or less "protecting" the pickerel in the same people from fishing those waters where pickerel are seldom, if ever, taken. Now if closed season restriction accomplish these objects, and I believe that they do, then I think which amply justifies their existence.

Those in favor of fishing with artificial lures during the above mentioned period put forth two main arguments. The first is that there are a great many of the more enthusiastic pickerel fishermen who do not possess cars or bicycles which would enable them to obtain the minimum distance from the open fishing waters. If they have to walk any distance, they are at great effort the Department could put plug-bait and spoon fishing entirely that's their opinion. After all, the second place, they argue, the pickerel supply is not affected by forbidden artificial lures because the number of pickerel caught (legally) in the spring are taken by minnow-bait. Why not? Minnows if left to pickerel are not affected.

The second item is answered by the statement in the preceding paragraph. The protection of the pickerel does not appear considered to be of prime importance—in fact there is an element that would like to see them removed at the earliest convenience. This is unfortunate because when the day of the bass and muskie becomes a legend, the pickerel will be the fish we will have to advertise to our tourist friends—and it would be a good idea if we learned a few of its better points now.

But the other argument presents a problem. I have fished with those fellows that make the annual pilgrimage to Lower Locks, the Bonnets and the other regions on the north, and I know the way that they feel about such a regulation, the people who conceived it, and the Fish and Game Protective Association, even though the latter had no hand in it. Included in this group are the boys from the various factories who work till five each night or later and therefore have little time to get out after minnows, the unemployed who have no means of getting out and those fishermen whose knowledge of the art of minnow fishing is a minus quantity.

It is a question whether the regulations obtained justify the ill feeling created among this group I think not. Let the many bass and maskinonge taken off the spawning beds to minimize the necessity for some sort of ruling designed to cut down on such unsportsmanlike practices. Make a effort to have loop-holes through which the undersized fish can escape.

The only alternative would be to name certain specific waters where artificial lures may be used, thus endeavoring in some way to the the pickerel fishing from the trouble in those areas where pickerel are plentiful.

Undoubtedly the readers have some ideas on the subject.

And by the way, since I have mentioned the art of fishing with minnows (and it is an art, I have a little angle-worm that I am passing on to you for what it is worth. One of my best friends showed me it a couple of years ago. He believes that a minnow caught on the evening before—look in the afternoon or morning and you will find that the minnow is a very sick and inefficient fellow, devoid of those essential qualities that go to make a "lively bait." When my friend and I go fishing with the minnows we catch days ahead of time and allow them to live and thrive in a well designed aquarium. After several days' convalescence they go about their work with a vim, vigor and vigor. The only flaw in his theory is that you have at some time or other caught pickerel with dead minnows. I asked my friend about this and he assures me that if you have caught pickerel with dead minnows, during the day, that a particularly ferocious brand of pickerel was responsible for the dead sod even less for them."—Belleville Ontario and Line" in Peterboro Examiner.

How New Industries are Born

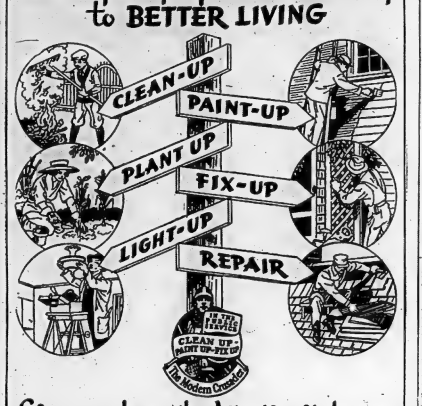
It is said that what America needs to stage it out of the present depression is a few big new industries. Many things just over the horizon, such as television, air-conditioning, in the home and so forth are supposed to have been suggested. But none of them seems yet to have materialized in terms of wages and heavy buying. Indeed the industrialist may suggest that industrialized farming may prove to be the answer?

Industrialized farming would like something extremely complex. Yet it is. Consider Walt Disney's Disney's picture-play, "Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs," as an excellent example. Here is something manufactured out of practically nothing except materials of the mind, the raw facts of imagination. In this country imagination is supposed to be a commodity produced in unlimited quantities. If it can be turned out as an article of commerce which the public will readily buy, then practically should be—well, just around the corner, anyway.

The Disney picture cost about $2,000,000 to produce. Now it will have employment to no flesh-and-blood actors, human attributes being confined to the voices of animated tracks. But it kept a small army of artists, animator and pen men busy for many months. And from all accounts it has already returned more than his investment to Mr. Disney, and is showering fortune on other lucky shareholders in the company, Grumpy and their fellow-dwarfs, despite the fact that they get no wages themselves, have been in existence for centuries.

Here is a second suggestion against recession when the Disney picture magazine have hired this year. Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs have been in most theatres, the evil Queen and Snow White's mother had to lay off a single dwarf.

Moreover, the picture has virtually developed a new industry from its own resources. Walt Disney's imagination have already sold more than $2,000,000 worth of goods since the first of the year. Since January 1st, Walt Disney, Mr. Disney's representative here, 117 toy manufacturers have been licensed to make Disney products for the trade. Another $2,000,000 worth of Snow White products are going to be sold in a three-month period that here-to-imagination is supposed to be two and a half million more handkerchiefs sold in the month. The only thing in the picture that the public doesn't seem to crave is poisoned apples.



One factory in Akron, Ohio, which makes rubber heels, has been running twenty-four hours a day, seven days a week, since the picture stories are closed. Doper and Grumpy are putting men to work in paint factories, rubber heel factories, stone quarries and mills. Snow White's hair, for instance, is now presently begins to radiate. "Snow White" is the greatest full-length picture. What is going to happen when he really gets into his stride? Industrialists, take a look at this industrially fantastic— New York Times.

Relief Gardens Seen Ended

At the peak of the city's satisfied gardening movement recently the council had talked of a permanent development contemplating lots of several acres each, to accommodate as a fitness of helping some citizens to avoid recourse to relief. It was probably last year that extension of the gardening scheme was cautiously considered, with the main reasoning of the original scheme and its broader variation. Members of the council have intimated that the community gardening plan, recognized as a successful experiment for year to year, and extolled as practical means of helping out a number of citizens from becoming dependent upon relief, is not likely to be continued this season. An extension from the present 1,000 relief schedules and costs are higher and there is no additional expense that need not be incurred. Should the response of other years of the number of persons engaged in the community gardening project, the chances are that extension will be considered, and from the spirit of industry, encouragement and profit it is likely to be credited to the scheme, and broader variation. Should extension the council has acquired. It seems rather a community loss that the council is now closing a chapter that had been frequently mentioned as one of the brighter experiences of the years during the depression.—Peterboro Examiner.

They'll Do It Every Time :-: By Jimmy Hatlo

Rev. R. George Stewart D. D. Former Belleville Pastor Is Elected Moderator of Synod

Ministers and Laymen from all parts of the province are in attendance at the conference of the Presbyterian Church in Canada ever to hold session in this city. Representing Presbyteries between Toronto and Kingston and from the border to Hudson Bay on north, the meeting is the means of re-uniting students of the continent's leading schools in theology and umbered among the representative Elders present are many visiting the city for the first time.

The four day session of this great church governing body began on Tuesday afternoon, May 3rd with registration and a group of committee meetings, Business Committee, and meeting of Standing Committee. Visiting elders seeing Belleville for the first time, many from far northern pastoral charges, were enthusiastic in the praise of this city and its churches.

Auditorium Filled

The first official sederunt was witnessed by a packed auditorium of ministers and church officials. A large choir under the leadership of Mr. J. M. Hodgins led in the singing, with an appropriate organ recital of sacred music preceding the religious worship period, conducted by Rev. Samuel Lawrence of Whitby, Ont., Moderator of the Synod. The scripture portion was read by Rev. W. J. Walker of St. Andrew's Church.

In keeping with the solemnity of the occasion the choir under direction of Mr. Hodgins who presided at the console throughout the service offered an impressive choral number. The gathering rose to welcome Rev. Dr. E. Mercer, Moderator of General Assembly of Presbyterian Church in Canada who was conducted to a place of honor by Rev. Samuel Lawrence.

Memorial Service

At the conclusion of the ceremony which constituted the establishing of the roll of Synod with the names being presented by Rev. John Lindsay, clerk and treasurer, the Moderator conducted a memorial service, dedicated to six ministers and fifteen elders who had passed on in the last year.

In his memorial address the Moderator said that since 1907 when he first attended Synod there had been many faithful workers pass on to receive the ultimate reward of all servants of God. In that time I have attended all meetings but one, I have worked with faithful one and two silent servants, who will be equally rewarded by their Master. "There is dire need of young men today as a memorial to the unfailing faith of these men gone before."

"Let us dedicate our lives anew, to the Master whom they served. Throughout the present day there is an apparent indifference. But down beneath the surface there is a great yearning and spiritual longing. May my labors attend to turn their back on the church. But not on the deeply spiritual things of the soul.

"Let this memorial constitute a challenge to each of us: Throughout the world echoes the cry for Christ! We must spread abroad the message of the church summed up in the word 'Christ and Him Crucified'."

Rev. Hugh T. Kerr, D.D.

The guest speaker, Rev. (Dr.) Hugh T. Kerr of Pittsburgh, Penn., was introduced by Rev. W. J. Walker, and his inspiring address on the subject "Resolved Limitation" was one that will be long remembered by all privileged to attend.

Rev. R. G. Stewart

The election of Moderator was conducted by Rev. Samuel Lawrence, Rev. Dr. R. G. Stewart of St. John's Presbyterian Church, Toronto, and former pastor of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church of this city was duly elected to that high office and on assuming the robe of office was conducted to the pulpit by the retiring Moderator to direct the remaining part of the session. Appreciation of the honor was expressed briefly by him, and after a vote of thanks was extended to Rev. Samuel Lawrence upon his retirement the meeting adjourned, climaxing the first session of a great church conference.

Standards Act Condemned

Hamilton, May 3—(CP)— Type of regulation such as the Ontario Industrial Standard, Act is regarded "as disturbing to good employment relations" declared the report of the executive committee presented to the annual meeting of the Ontario division of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association here today.

Issues through labor disturbances in periods of business recovery, and the consequent demands for new legislation the report comments: "As a general rule persons appointed for such offices in Ontario have used discretion in the administration of difficult tasks, but because of pressure of various types, business is more and more being subjected to regulation, frequently of a type that the courts have set aside."

wilderness it finds itself in, today, and if our churches do not watch their step and concentrate on that supreme issue, perhaps they too will find themselves being gradually removed from their place." Mr. Kerr stated in a brilliant dissertation on "Mastery achieved through Resolved Limitations".

In his opening remarks the speaker expressed his happiness at again having the honor of preaching from the church in which "I am no stranger, although this new pulpit is somewhat strange to me".

"I had the greatest honor a minister can have, that some of ministerial blessing of preaching before my mother in this church of St. Andrew's", he said, "I have preached here frequently and deem it a great honor and privilege indeed to have the opportunity of addressing this assembly".

"Take One Thing I Do"

Turning to his subject, Mr. Kerr stressed the fact that it is the man, who is able to say, "this one thing I do", who succeeds. It is the river, that keeps within its bounds that has concentrated power. It is the electric wire with its confined strength that spreads good. "In the words of Christ 'Straight is the gate and narrow the way that leadeth to life and few are they that find it'."

"This is true in all our worlds", he continued. "In music, in literature", here the speaker quoted the works of Hawthorne, Tennyson and others who confined themselves to their limitations, "and we all know how Einstein put his famous hypothesis on relativity in three short pages. In ministry, law, finance, industry, no one man can do everything or all things equally well. In order to achieve mastery we must make up our minds to do the one thing well, for irresolution is the paralysis of usefulness."

"There are people who can never make up their minds to any one commitment and by so doing are failing to concentrate on any single useful purpose."

"This principle guided our Lord", continued the speaker, "and He died to achieve. They asked Him to perform miracles, to come down from the Cross, but He went down the straight way and through the narrow gate. There were self-limitations in His human birth and in His human life. He took Himself the form of man, a servant, and channelled His divine life down through the narrow gate of the human form. That is the mystery of the incarnation."

Not His Own Will

"At the beginning of His life He said He came not to do His own will but that of the One who sent Him. There was a sense of compulsion and massed direction about Him. When asked what He was going to do, He replied "Devote myself unreservedly to the service of the Spirit. I come to save that which is lost."

Outlining many incidents in the life of Christ, Mr. Kerr stressed the many temptations and forces that beset Him. "They tried to draw Him into evil. They asked Him to bow before the forces of the world, but He refused. Today Hitler, Mussolini and Stalin are obsessed with the idea that these same world forces will sweep across the universe."

"But Jesus said 'That is not the way' and summed it up on the Cross when He said, 'I have finished'. When the last scroll was written, He laid down the torch and said to the Father 'I have finished the work you have given Me to do, that of ministry and redeeming the world through sacrifice'."

"But it was through the principle of resolved limitations that He was able to achieve that mastery of the world that is His." Mr. Kerr stated.

The Church today is asked to do everything; solve problems, wars, liquor-traffic and crime, and there should be something done about it, declared the speaker. And there is only one thing we can do about it and that is this, that we can achieve mastery over these problems by going through the straight gate and limiting ourselves to one thing and that is by preaching them.

"The church has only one thing that the world has not", Mr. Kerr pointed out. "The world can beat us at music, at church architecture, riches, preaching, organization and methods of solving problems, but we have only one asset we can claim as our own, and that is the Miracle of Christ."

Asks Question

"What, then, have we to do with this supreme unrivalled asset that is ours and which none wants to claim. The Christian Church has kept faith and been true to that ideal, it would not be falling into the wilderness it now finds itself in, and unless American and Canadian Churches watch their step and concentrate on this supreme issue perhaps they will succeed in this sacred calling God has called us to. We must make up our minds about this great thing".

"Is God a reality? Is He? Is death the end? Is Truth attainable? Is Goodness real? Is there an eternal everlasting distinction between right and wrong? Is Christ's way, Life's only way or is there a life for the modern world? Is His character the only character, Of are we going back? Is His interpretation of Life final or is there another interpretation?" asked the speaker. "The mastery of the answers to these questions can only be achieved through resolved limitations".

"We have listened to the blaring of the trumpets of paganism long enough," concluded Mr. Kerr. "It is time to set ringing the bells of Christendom, bells of Truth, Melody and Joy, for God is Here."

Pastor Introduces Speaker

In his introduction of the speaker, Rev. W. J. Walker, minister of the church airessed the guest that Mr. Kerr was connected with the early days of radio. "I can well remember the stirring sermons that came over Station KDKA as well as the splendid music of his congregation. And all this over a one tube radio set."

"This congregation has a happy association with the name of Kerr," Mr. Walker stated. "When the afternoon sun shines through the stained glass windows in a part of the church it brings out the memorial to Mr. Kerr's mother, who was long associated with this congregation, while his brother was a minister here. The speaker comes from a distinguished family of sons, who are in departments of Christian work, that of healing the body as well as the soul".

"I am happy to introduce to you, the speaker who will bring you a stirring message from the Fountain of Living Waters".

Pity Hazard In a Child's Training

Offspring of Divorced Parents Not Blighted When He is Spoiled

(By LISA ORRINGLEE)

EVERYTHING PITIES the child whose parents are divorced, but whether justified or not, pity is a permissive and a demoralizing thing.

Children, like all smart humans, tend to capitalize whatever and they whatever they can. Why should they, any more than we, refuse to take the advantage when they have a chance? Why should we expect them not to take the centre of the stage when it is offered them?

And the poor, little innocent victim of divorce, who is also the pivot at stake, is naturally the centre of the stage. How does he have to be very old to realize it and get all he can out of it. It doesn't take him long to realize that to the object of pity should go certain awards, such as special privileges, extra comfort, coddling, consolation and excuses for behavior as his part hitherto considered disgraceful and reasonable.

To begin with, the father, no longer being a member of the household, fears to lose his hold on the children's affections, so he pleads as frequent "guests" with them as his business will permit—more elaborate and expensive expeditions than was his custom in the past.

Expensive Presents

He forms the habit, too, just to keep on the good side of them, of giving them more presents and expensive presents than was his former habit.

Their mother, on the other hand, seeing the children come home so radiant, and bearing enthusiastic tales of their day times with their father, is determined not to be outdone. She must give them equally good times; she lets them in by spoiling them—more good times, more presents, less discipline.

Soon the children make the invaluable discovery that they can play one parent against another. Mother must give them as handsome a present or as gay an outing as Father, Father must.

To pity or spoil a child is hardly a good way to help him adjust himself, or to make up to him for anything. The only way divorced parents can pay their children any debt they may owe them is to swallow their own pride, resentment and jealousy sufficiently to meet and agree upon some policy of upbringing. They should agree not to take advantage of each other or the children by spoiling and bribing them for first favors.

To Catch a Woman

By MICHAEL SAUNDERS

Jerry steered his car into the Prospect Park driveway and then slowed down to a leisurely pace. He glanced at Eve who was pensively gazing out of the open window. It was a beautiful warm spring evening with just enough breeze to send the blood coursing through the body. He looked for parking space and soon found it right under several oak trees. He eased the car into the spot and stopped. Eve turned toward him.

He put his arm around her and kissed her.

She pushed him away and looked at him calmly. "Now that that's over, what shall we do next?"

Jerry withdrew his arm. "From which I gather that you weren't thrilled," he said nettled.

Eve tapped her foot angrily. "Jerry, we've gone through this a dozen times before. Each night you drive me out and then proceed to make love to me. And each night I have to convince you that I don't love you. For the last time, Jerry, let's be friends; let's not spoil it by making scenes. If we can't be friends then I'm afraid we shouldn't see each other again."

"That's final, then?" he asked thought-fully. "Just platonic friendship?"

She nodded her head firmly. Her self wondering about Jerry. He had neither called nor phoned. And that she cared—much—but it certainly was not asserting of Jerry to ignore her out of spite. She secretly looked forward to seeing him in the ballroom of the Hotel Clinton. She realized frankly that the reason she was going was because she had heard he would be there.

On the night of the dance, escorted by Donald Meyers, she entered the ballroom of the hotel and gazed eagerly about her. But she was not until she had several dances with her escort that she suddenly spotted Jerry. Her body stiffened. Jerry was dancing with a pretty blond. They seemed to be having the time of their lives. Jerry's part. And he had his head turned up to his and they were smiling at each other. God knows what something else!

Eve's eyes blazed with indignation

Marmora

Rigg and F. Gray, delegates to the recent Industrial Accidents Prevention Convention at Windsor, gave interesting reports of the sessions they attended.

The following poem appeared in The Diocesan Chronicle, written by William James Cotterill, Marmora:

In the Father's business,
Work is left for you,
Others will not do it.
They have theirs to do.
Left for you is good work,
Humble though it be.
This be your endeavour,
To fill honestly.

Much concedes through worry,
You had better trust,
Save up heavenly treasure,
It is safe from rust.
As you find depression
Keeping others down,
Seek to raise their spirit,
Smile against each frown.

In the Father's business
Do not faint or tire,
One day he will call you
To employment higher.
Carry on the good work
God will make it pay,
He's your Senior Partner,
Call Him up each day.

HOW TO WIN FRIENDS AND INFLUENCE PEOPLE

"Many people never attempt to test their ability in new ways because to do so looks difficult. They lack self-confidence.

"For years I was certain I could never learn to play bridge. Then I spent a week-end with some friends and, after dinner, bridge was proposed. I declined to play. Bridge, I said, was a mystery to me."

"Why", my friend exclaimed, "it's no trick at all. There is nothing to bridge except memory and judgment. You once wrote a chapter on memory. Bridge would be dead easy for you!"

"And before I knew it, I found myself playing bridge."

"Tell a child, an employee or an associate that he is stupid about a certain thing and has no gift for it; and you are almost certain to destroy every incentive for him to try to improve.

Massassaga

Massassaga—A number of friends and neighbors met at the home of Mrs. R. Huff on Tuesday evening to honor her daughter, Norma and Mr. Hugh Bailey, with a miscellaneous shower. The address was read by Miss Alma Ackerman, while two filled baskets were carried in by Miss Essie Posts and Miss Helen Wallbridge. Both Norma and Hugh replied in a very delicious manner and thanked their friends for their lovely gifts and kindness. A delicious lunch was served of sandwiches, cake and coffee.

The address:

Dear Norma and Hugh:

It is with the spirit of friendship and goodwill that we are gathered here to rejoice with you on this most important and happy occasion of your lives when the fond dreams of your hearts are at last to be realized in happy wedlock. Our sincere wish for you is that the best be impressed through these words of Edgar A. Guest:

"On Bride and Groom, for you I wish

Is not that every day be fair,
For that could never be, we pray
That you will meet the storms of life
Through all that comes of grief and pain
And hurt and care—may love remain.

Norma, we have always found you willing to do your part, at home and in the community. We shall treasure the memory of our associations and miss your presence at our social gatherings, when you have left your present home in Simcoe. You will be miles away from us but we feel that other friends in your new community will be favored with your assistance.

Some of us have the pleasure of knowing you, Hugh, while others extend to you the right hand of friendship.

We heartily congratulate you in having won as a life's companion, a girl who grew up in our midst.

We all hope that you and Norma have a very successful and happy career. We are assured from that in the future your home will be a centre of gladness and joy and may it be yours in abundant measure.

"A home is built of bricks and stones,
Of sills and posts and biers;
But a home is built of loving deeds
That last a thousand years."

When your daily toil is at an end, as you sit and muse on other things to come, may yours thoughts sometimes revert to the friends of your childhood where a warm welcome awaits you always.

In your home which will be one among the many in your married life, may the gifts which we bring you tonight find a place of usefulness.

May the light of love shine over all and may you find your joys multiplied, your troubles divided by your mutual sympathy and esteem.

New Gas Housers Beginning To Show Promise and May Have Say About Loop Race

McGee Makes Good as Starting Pitcher by Beating Boston

DEAN BACK IN GAME

Hurled Seven Innings to Win Decision Over Phillies 5-2,

(By Hugh S. Fullerton, Jr.)

(Associated Press Sports Writer)

The Old Gas House Gang ain't what it used to be. In fact it hardly has recovered from the gaffe it received when its great mouthpiece, Dizzy Dean, was sold up the river to Chicago. But with a flock of New Gas Housers beginning to show promise, the St. Louis Cardinals may have their usual pieces to say about the National League pennant race.

Let us to encourage the fans' hope that St. Louis may trouble the National League's pennant contenders even if it can't finish on top are Lon Warneke, veteran right hander, and the new battery of Bill McGee and Merle Brenner.

Wins First Start

Warneke has won his last two starts in fine style, McGee getting his first trial as a starting pitcher, probably clinched a job as a ball player when he limited Boston Bees to six hits and fanned six to outpoint the able Lou Fette 3-2. Brenner, who may fill the Cards' demand for a regular catcher, provided the first two runs with a homer and Don Gutteridge made the third the same way.

Meanwhile Dean, who retired from a game last week with a sore pitching arm, worked his flipper for seven good innings against the Phillies and got credit for Chicago's 3-2 victory. Dis was hit hard and looked tired when he turned over the job to Charley Root, but the Cubs gave him enough support to make up for any shortcomings.

Cubs Move Closer

The victory put the Cubs closer to the top as Cincinnati's Reds brought New York Giants' 11-game winning streak to an undignified end by licking the League leaders 10-2. While Paul Derringer pitched nine-hit ball, the Reds collected six runs and the game in the fifth, when Hal Schumacher found his old time flair over Cincinnati no longer was effective.

Brooklyn's star Rookie, Forrest Pressnell, handed Pittsburgh Pirates their fifth straight defeat as the Dodgers manufactured a six-run seventh inning to win 7-3.

The American League standings were shuffled as Philadelphia's Athletics hopped from eighth to sixth place and Boston Red Sox and New York Yankees slid past Washington.

Keltner Clouts Two Homers

With Buck Ross hurling five-hit ball and getting the benefit of a six-run outburst in the third, the A's trimmed Chicago White Sox 7-2. Cleveland's League leaders outlasted the Senators 10-9 as Ken Keltner, Rookie third sacker, clouted two homers and a single to drive in six runs.

Old Lefty Grove went ten innings to beat Detroit 4-3 for his third victory and to become the eighth flinger in major league history to register 2,000 strikeouts. He whiffed six.

Lou Gehrig's first four-pit walloo of the season cheered New York Yankees' fans and helped beat St. Louis Browns 5-1. It came in the four-run first inning. Lou also hit a double and Tommy Henrich tossed in a homer.

MAIN BOUTERS AFTER SHOT AT MASKED MARVEL

Winner of Tonight's Main Attraction Logical Man

Count Zarnoff, the bald, squatty White Russian, who meets Scotty McDougall in the main bout of tonight's wrestling show at the Hume Arena, has wrestled in many countries and before large crowds, but tonight he'll have a tough job on his hands if he expects to win over the canny Scotsman in Belleville.

This bout carries a particular significance, however, as the promoters are endeavouring to sign the Masked Marvel for next week's show and the winner of tonight's main bout will naturally be given the preference as the Marvel's logical opponent.

SCOTTY McDOUGALL

The remainder of the card includes — Semi-final—Al Dunlop, versus Sammy Stein, 210. Preliminary—Mike Dominio vs. Norman Parrel.

JERSEY GIANTS IN SECOND PLACE AND GOING STRONG

Coupling Sturdy Hitting With Some Tight Hurling

BEARS BEATEN

Rochester Turned Trick But Not Until Three Pitchers Used

(By The Associated Press)

It might be well to look after those Jersey Giants with an eye toward arranging things in the International League Pennant Race.

Everybody has been talking about Newark Bears, but the Jerseyites, who were picked as the Dodgers of the circuit a year ago, are in second place right with the Bears and displaying a brand of ball calculated to keep them around or on the top.

The Giants coupled sturdy hitting with tight pitching yesterday when they trimmed Montreal Royals 3-1 and 10-2 in a double header that kept them in the standings on the Bears, who were trimmed by Rochester 10-6. Buffalo did a "man bites dog" act by trouncing Baltimore Orioles in their own park 12-6.

Roy Joiner, the Giants' veteran left-hander, won his first effort of the season, a well-paced seven hitter. Frank Demaree the ace assault with three for three in the 13-hit attack.

The Red Wings, bounced about considerably by the Bears in the first three games of their series, salvaged the fourth game with a 14-hit offensive led by Ball Crabtree and Jack Sturdy. Bob Bowman, a rookie, did a swell job of stifling the Bears' attack in the late innings.

Buffalo got the same number of hits as the Red Wings in beating Baltimore but the Orioles kept right on rapping the ball over the fence. Frank McGowan, Pooch Puccinelli and Phil Weintraub hit for the circuit for the Bisons, which has 38 homers to its credit thus far this season. The victory gave Buffalo a 3-1 edge in the series and put the Bisons only 31 percentage points behind the Baltimore Orioles.

The Toronto-Syracuse game scheduled for yesterday at the Chiefs' Park will be played at a later date.

CALLING 'EM

Between the Lines

with

Ken I. Colling

Over in the town of Picton, with a population of about one-quarter of that of Belleville, they are to have two baseball clubs competing in the O.B.A. this year. Over in Picton they apparently possess some civic pride relative to their sporting activities. At a recent meeting held there in Worship Mayor McKibbon was not only present, but took an active interest and accepted the position of President of the baseball club. The following statement was issued at the meeting in Picton: "Sport is a great advertisement for any town and baseball will mean a great deal to Picton and the club will no doubt receive the full support of all fans"

It seems too bad there aren't enough fans sufficiently interested in the game matter in Belleville to see that there are players anxious to play baseball, but may not be afforded the opportunity to play. Such is the case here. Then again what initiative is it that the Belleville baseball scout and junior Senior O.B.A. ball, if these fans are given a chance to continue their baseball activities after graduating from the junior ranks? Each year's graduates their are about five players now over age. These kids, along with several other promising boys, are quite anxious to continue in the Belleville and a little better than average interclub baseball could well be assured, but apparently the fans at large are not sufficiently interested in organizing a club for the boys. It seems too bad, but if the old story of "Let George do it," but it will never be done.

While the local softballers are practicing faithfully for the coming season much chatter is heard from the various camps, little news has emanated from the camp of Coach "Hank" Ryan's Boots and McCoys at Quinte. While the other coaches are boldly predicting assured victory for their respective clubs, Coach Ryan's quietly practice every other night at Queen Mary School grounds and our operator No. 23 informs us they are going to be no push-overs for Frank Sedore or Chuck Barnett either.

It may be news to even the most ardent wrestling fan, but the success of the game only comes after most arduous training. It has been said that it took two years of intensive coaching and training to equalize before a man can perform ten minutes before a crowd in the ring. More than that, the complete agreement is due to thorough knowledge of the floor points of all the numerous holds known to orthodox wrestling. All of these qualities are known to be possessed by the opponents of tonight's main bout, Count Zarnoff and Scotty McDougall. Fans to witness last week's wrestling show left the Hume Arena satisfied they had witnessed one of the most interesting exhibitions of counter wrestling ever staged in those parts and by the White Russian, Count Zarnoff. Of course Zarnoff will not be able to merely counter wrestle when he opposes Scotty McDougall as the diminutive Scotch Canadian still have to show more aggressiveness tonight at the arena, but if he hopes to cope with the sturdy Scot, McDougall, Tonight's main bout is the talk of the town and will doubtless see the largest crowd of wrestling fans out.

With impromptu games the Tennis Club section of the Quinte Sailing Club held an unofficial opening under floodlights on their keen spacious courts Monday night. A goodly turnout of players were on hand to usher in the season. The addition of six lights is no sure night play, is a big boom to the tennis enthusiasts at the corner of Queen and Dufferin. Incidentally we would appreciate it if the club members would give us a shorter and more concise name, as the name Quinte Sailing and Tennis Club is much too long to include in a newspaper heading. In the meantime the games committee is planning a gala official opening tournament for May 24th.

They do say Bob Feller has grown an inch-quarter and has put in height since a year ago. And they say he's not through yet. . . . The lip is out that the Cleveland is pushed around much more as his fans club operations. He'll cash in his Cardinal chips and let somebody else have the headaches. Sam figures three main bottoms are enough for one man, anyway. Not bad at that. He's hit St. Louis at the turn of the century with only a rack of doughnuts.

Hither and Yon: The Peterboro scribe says he'll "die happy, if we'll only wear our pants in the Carnival some day this summer". . . . Only being too optimistic to-morrow-date in such a worthy cause! to humanity, we'll go one better & we'll wear the conventional dark glasses of a blind Tom' . . . anything to gain a point. . . . mebbe Premier Mitch Hepburn will have to take a back seat for once; Judge Landis is expected to be the big noise at the Toronto International opener to-morrow. . . . The Chief could be in front of his stablemate, Stagehand, while Marvin ran second & Churchill Downs yesterday; coming events sometimes cast their shadows before them and the Derby is on Saturday. . . . They say Max Schmeling has a cool million or 1,000,000 polaroos, they say, but the so-called wise guys are still saying "no dice" for the June fight even yet. . . . Gene Tunney, however, says the Schmeling-Louis bout will be a great go.

SQUIBS, ARGOS IN FINAL GAME OF "Y" LEAGUE

Falcons And Tigers Are Eliminated in Rousing Tussles

FALCONS HANDICAPPED

Losing Team Forced to Play Without Substitutes

The "Squibs", capitained by Jack Dickens and the "Argos" headed by Art Martin won the right to advance to the finals in the Y.M.C.A. spring house basketball league by decisive victories over the respective opponents on the "Y" gym floor last evening, the Squibs doubling the score on the vanquished Falcons 40 to 20, while the Argos eliminated the Tigers by a rather one-sided 47 to score in a twin bill of semi-final city championship basketball. The Squibs and Argos meet to-night in the city finals for the cage championship.

Leading all through the piece the Squibs took a decided advantage over the Falcons in the first game to lead 27 to 14 at the halfway mark and continued their advantage to triumph 40 to 20. Jack Dickens, Bill Stephens and B. Pigden were the chief marksmen for the winners, with Murray Clark and Bill Bateman being the more prolific scorers for the losing quintette. The Falcons were handicapped in the matter of alternates, having to play the game with only the complete team and no substitutes, however. The dashing passing attack, led by Joe Squibs, however, left the losers bewildered throughout.

In the second game, that proved to be somewhat of a route, the Argos were out in front to the tune of 20 to 4 as the half-time whistle sounded and added 27 more points in the last half as the losing Tigers only netted three more. Art Black was the big marksman for the victorious Argos, scoring 18 points, the remainder of the whitemen' scoring threats being rather evenly distributed between the other players, however. Griffith and Argue scored two baskets each for the losers. Last night's winners meet in the city finals tonight at 7.30.

TOMMY FARR MAY MEET STRICKLAND IN TORONTO BOUT

Empire Heavyweight Title Would be at Stake in Match

$25,000 GUARANTEE

Only Few "Minor Details" Remain to be Ironed Out

(By Alan Randal, Canadian Press Staff Writer)

New York, May 4 (CP)— Tommy Farr, Welsh master of the British Empire heavyweight crown, sails for England on the Normandie today with every prospect that during the last week of July or the first in August he'll fight Maurice Strickland of New Zealand in Toronto with his Empire boxing title at stake.

Such a match, of course, would not be for charity. Nor would it be for the good of boxing in Canada alone. Both Farr and his manager, Joe Gould, were attracted by a guarantee of $25,000 offered by W. J. (Bill) Galbraith of Toronto.

"When they offer that kind of sugar we are definitely interested" Gould said yesterday after arranging he had agreed to Galbraith's terms. "Money like that is not to be sneered at."

Bill Daley, Strickland's manager, was offered a percentage of the gate, which Galbraith figured would gross from $75,000 to $100,000. He joined Gould in announcing that negotiations with Galbraith had resulted in a satisfactory agreement.

Few Minor Details

He said only a few "minor details" remained to be ironed out. He anticipated no trouble with these and added that as soon as they were attended to articles for the fight would be signed. Galbraith's next move is to place all developments before the Ontario Athletic Commission.

"All I want is a licence to promote this one bout," he said. "As soon as the Commission says 'go' we'll go."

Daley, happy over landing the bout with the Empire champion, said he and Strickland had been after such a match for three years but Farr had refused to fight the New Zealander.

If everything goes according to Galbraith's schedule, the battlers plan to pitch training camps in Canada a few weeks ahead of the bout, and, as Daley put it, "run the whole thing in championship style," Strickland, Daley said, would be back from New Zealand early in June, ready to start training.

CHAPTER 9

Confession

"Didn't you hear Mrs. Caldwell tell Mr. Murdock in the summer house at the tennis court that" he again referred to his notes. "Lydia told the truth. I didn't go upstairs at all after leaving you. I was frantic, Eliot was terrible to me. He threatened to kill you if I wouldn't promise to ask you to go right away. I left him in a sort of drunken stupor, but I was frightened. I stayed down in the library and tried to read.' And then?" asked Murdock. And Mrs. Caldwell said: 'I can't tell you what happened then. But later I had to go down there. There was blood— Don't this the conversation you heard, Mac?"

And Mac—blessed old Mac—said, "I do not remember, sir."

I could have hugged him!

But wily Mr. Parker simply smiled. "Don't remember? Well — that's just too bad. Perhaps on the witness stand your memory will come back to you. How about you, Mr. Murdock? Didn't Mrs. Caldwell tell you that?"

Dixon Murdock nervously crushed out his cigarette. "Yes."

But Norma Caldwell suddenly leaned forward. A strange agitation she had never known before seemed to have swept over her. Her face had grown hard and a look of determination had touched her eyes. "It isn't necessary for either Mr. Murdock or Mac to answer those questions, Mr. Parker. I am sorry I misled you with my statement, but I'll did not do so immaterial to— to what happened later, where I was at that time. I was the one who knew I could not sleep if I went to my room, that I must go down to the boat-house again until after the clock struck three. I remember hearing it strike."

"You were in the library all the time during those two hours?"

Her throat contracted. "Yes — practically."

"Practically? That's pretty indefinite, Mrs. Caldwell."

The flash of fire died out of her face. She leaned back again. "I cannot answer you more definitely."

The detective settled his tie and glanced at the sheriff with a little nod of triumph.

Sheriff Wilson cleared his throat, "I'd like to ask a few questions, Mr. Parker. I do know as they're specially important, but I'm kinda puzzled about some things I've found out—information that might. There seems to have been other people gallivantin' around besides Mrs. Caldwell and Mr. Murdock." He turned sharply. "How about you, Barnes? Was you safe tucked up in bed—say around one-fifteen that morning?"

Barnes gave a violent start. "I— I didn't hear what you said, sheriff," he mumbled.

"I just asked—was you in bed the night Caldwell was murdered, between the time of one and one-thirty?"

Barnes slowly shook his bald head. "I guess it was about that time I got up. It's just like I told ye in the beginnin', I got this place on my mind an' I never sleep any too good. Somethin' woke me up that night; I thought I heard somethin' at my window, and a sound of somebody walking around underneath. I got up and took my flashlight and went downstairs. I looked around but quite some time."

I wondered did I had not heard him, but it must have been while I was listening at the window, and I knew that was true when he said that he—"plopped it was Mrs. Caldwell and Mr. Murdock that I heard, for I saw 'em going around the house."

"That was before, one," said the sheriff. "Did you go back upstairs then?"

"No—I looked around a spell longer."

"You didn't see anyone else about?"

Barnes shook his head, but his eyes were like those of a tortured animal.

"You didn't run into Eddy any place?" The sheriff's voice was very casual.

Barnes glanced at Mrs. Caldwell she was staring at him—her eyes filled with fear.

"No—I didn't," said Barnes.

"Yet—we know—"

"I tell you, pardon, Sheriff Wilson," interrupted a clear, decided voice. "I guess it's time I straightened out this tangle."

Peter Alcott came forward to the center of the room; his hands thrust into the pockets of his old flannels, a whimsical smile in his straight-forward blue eyes. "You see—I was the one who shot Eliot Caldwell."

It was as though a bomb had burst in that room!

WAKE UP YOUR LIVER BILE—

And You'll Jump Out of Bed in the Morning Ravin' to Go

The liver should pour out two pounds of liquid bile into your bowels daily. If this bile is not flowing freely, your food may not digest. It just decays. Gas bloats up your stomach. You get constipated. Harmful poisons go into the body, acid you feel sour, sunk and the world looks punk.

A mere bowel movement doesn't always get at the cause. You need something that would start the bile flowing. Then you'll feel great. Carter's Little Liver Pills be put these two pounds of bile flowing freely and make you feel "up and up". Harmless and gentle, they make the bile flow freely. They do the work of calomel but have no calomel or mercury in them. Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills by name. Insist! Refuse substitutes. 25c.

I suppose we all uttered exclamations of one sort or another, Norma clutching at me hysterically. But my eyes were fastened on Norma Caldwell. She looked utterly astounded! Then—with a little cry—she jumped up and ran to Peter, she put both hands upon his shoulders. "Oh, Peter! No — no!"

He put his hands up over hers and looking down at her.

And then I did catch my breath! For suddenly I knew that Peter Alcott was very much in love with Norma Caldwell.

I heard Mac mutter, "Gosh!" under his breath, and knew that the revelation was as much a surprise to him as to me.

Peter was saying: "Hush, Norma—let me tell this," and holding her close to his side he turned to the sheriff.

"It happened this way: I went out in my boat that night and got lost in the fog. Pulled in around twelve-thirty. Saw the light in Caldwell's study. Realized straight it was pretty late—and went over to see that everything was okay.

"I'd started up the stairs when I heard Eliot and Lydia talking and was going out, when I just couldn't help overhearing a sentence or two of conversation.

"Eliot Caldwell was threatening to kill his wife, and was using threatening to kill her, but making the most rotten accusations.

"I'm not the sort of person could have heard that tirade and remained still. I was back about to dash in when Mrs. Caldwell came flying out of the study and out. I started to intercept her but then I thought it would only be to her discomfort if she knew I had been a listener. He was the one to deal with. So I just got up there and tell him a few things.

"You're probably saying it was no business of mine, but at that moment I had only one thought, and that was to make it my business.

"I waited until I was sure Mrs. Caldwell had reached the house, and then I went up there. He was drunk—I'd give him that credit. I don't suppose he did know what he was doing. He grabbed up his revolver and leered toward me with an oath.

"I reached for the revolver. God knows I had no intention of shooting him, but I guess I exploded.

"I ran out of the place—went home, I guess I was nutty. Later —my brain cleared. I thought: I've got to make that look like suicide."

He went back and carefully erased every sign of the struggle and all incriminating prints. I—forgot that Mr. Caldwell was left-handed."

You might have heard a pin drop in that room.

"How true, Mr. Alcott," drawled Parker.

Norma Caldwell lifted her eyes to the man beside her. "Thank you, Peter," she said faintly. "You are a dear."

She turned to the detective with the sweetest smile. "I'll admit my yarn, Mr. Parker. The first part is true. My husband was—beastly to me. I ran out, but—I went down there later. His revolver lay on his desk. I—I killed him."

CHAPTER 10.

Barnes Knows

"I 'spose they'll arrest Mrs. Caldwell now," said Elias, as we struggled to put our minds on the preparing of luncheon.

"Why?" I asked.

Elias looked at me solemnly. "She said she done it."

"Oh, yes—I know, but she didn't! She—Elias, what about Peter Alcott? I didn't know he was in love with her." I expected Elias to say—"I didn't know it, either," instead, she nodded. "I guess he's known her quite a spell somewhere. He couldn't keep away from her. But this year's been different —there's been Mister Murdock. I kinda thought she brought him down here to sorta keep Peter away. She's an awful nice woman—Mrs. Caldwell."

I nearly dropped the salad bowl in my amazement at all this from Elias.

Ever since the tragedy she had gone about quietly and muttering to herself, but never had she expressed an opinion. That she liked the young mistress, and resented Miss Lydia's interference in the running of the place, I well knew, for I had seen her cast vindictive glances at Miss Lydia.

But she had never said anything. Now I knew she was frightened about the outcome of this for Norma Caldwell.

The same was true Barnes. He seemed even more bent and old and worried; in fact, he barely touched his luncheon and went off to the garden.

I wished I might talk with Sheriff Wilson, and I had—as yet—found no chance to discuss the morning with Mac.

Mrs. Caldwell did not come down stairs for luncheon, and as I went in and out of the dining room I caught fragments of the conversation of those other three.

"Hmm—so there was an affair with the next door neighbor," said Grace Linnell. "How interesting!"

Miss Lydia answered sharply. "He was here a great deal last summer. Eliot was quite upset about it, but she only laughed and said it was a good friendship."

"And this summer, you've been the goat, Dix." Miss Linnell smiled cynically.

His face flushed and his hand shook as he lifted his glass. "I only wish to say that although I was perhaps indiscreet to allow my admiration for Mrs. Caldwell to get the better of me, she never—at any time—gave me the least encouragement. She was always loyal to her husband."

I had to go out of the room and when I returned they were talking about the disclosures of the morning.

"Of course, I was quite sure from the first that she did it," said Miss Lydia. "I am not saying that it was premeditated—I don't think it happened exactly as she said. She was at the end of her rope. I realize Eliot was sharp with her. He had a bad temper and he was very jealous of her every move. But if she had done her part, everything would have been all right. She seemed to delight in annoying him."

"But she did not kill him," said Dixon Murdock.

Miss Lydia gave a little gasp of amazement. "She didn't? Well then—who did?"

"Peter Alcott." And to the utter consternation of Miss Lydia he added—under his breath—"And I don't blame him!"

"I'm asking the sheriff if I may leave this afternoon," he went on. "I have told truthfully all I know of that night. But I will leave my address, and if I am wanted—"

"There will be a trial," said Miss Lydia stiffly. "We shall all have to testify."

"Good lord!" cried Grace Linnell. "I hadn't thought of that! I suppose we will all have every dern thing in our past exposed." She looking aghast, and as things developed it seemed she had reason to be upset.

Ah—we all thought we knew so much at this point of the tragedy, when we really, knew so little.

As soon as possible in the afternoon, I got hold of Mac. He had just come from taking Dixon Murdock to the station.

"If ever anyone was glad to shake the sand of this vicinity out of his hair—that guy sure was the gladdest."

"Don't blame him," I sighed. "There's too much sand in my shoes for comfort."

"Yes—not to hearing, are—you Judy?" There was real alarm in his deep voice.

"Oh, I wouldn't leave on a bet. But that's not saying I'm not just about dead with worry. When things happen as they did this morning—"

"Doo—weren't you surprised when our next door neighbor stole the picture?"

"He's a honey. I'll bet, deep down in her heart, Norma Caldwell is daffy about him. Did you glimpses that look in her eyes when she went to him?"

"Um-umph. Say—youngster! If you ever looked at me like that!"

"We-ll—I might, if you ever took over one of my murders. Oh, Mac!" I cried remorsefully, "How awful of us to jolly! My heart just aches for her. I can't see how she's ever going to get out of this mess, Mac—you know whom she's trying to shield!"

"Yes, Judy, we know and Barnes knows and I'm thinkin' Sheriff Wilson knows. And did you notice how Peter broke in at the psychological moment?"

"Eddy couldn't have done it," I said stubbornly.

"No, but his sister thinks he did and I think Peter saw him that night. Eddy's mixed up in it somehow and you know yourself Judy—you've been somewhat suspicious of Eddy ever since the garage episode."

I was silent for a long minute. "I've thought and thought about that," I said at last. "and I've come to the conclusion that—Oh, there's Sheriff Wilson! Do ask him to come here!"

The sheriff didn't look either worried or unduly perturbed. His handsome, still fresh face beamed at us. "Still frettin' about your pretty mistress—I can see that."

I shook my head. "We all know now she didn't do it."

He held up his hands. "I told you in the beginning, she wouldn't have gone back down there and screamed. Funny she didn't think of seemed to think how incongruous that is."

"What did you think of Alcott's statement, Sheriff?" asked Mac.

"True—a good share of it. Been kinda puzzled about the placing of that gun in Harold-like In Caldwell's right hand. Ye-up—that's little piece of my puzzle fits into place very nicely. Got to find some more pieces though—a lot more."

"Parker still thinks Mrs. Caldwell guilty, doesn't he?" questioned Mac.

THINK of it—an extra half-hour of sleep! You can stay in bed longer and still have breakfast on time if you let Kellogg's do your cooking. Kellogg's Corn Flakes are cooked and toasted, ready to eat with milk or cream. Crisp and refreshing as morning sunshine!

At all grocers, oven-fresh in the patented waxtite inner bag. Made by Kellogg in London, Ontario.

MADE BETTER = PACKED BETTER = TASTE BETTER

The sheriff chuckled. "He ain't near so sure as he was before her self-confession. Had confession kinda spilled the beans. No, Parker ain't quite so cocky as he was."

"I guess my eyes have sticks in them, sheriff. I'm a bit blinded."

I did so wish I had never told him about Eddy being out that night, for if Norma Caldwell wanted to shield her brother I intended to help her all I could. Thank goodness—I had known enough to keep my mouth shut about the Alcott garage.

IN MEMORIAM

WICKENS—In loving memory of a dear husband and loving father, Thomas Wm. Wickens, who passed away May 4th, 1937. also my little daughter Audrey Ruth Wickens, who lost her life by falling in a well Oct. 29th., 1935.

Only a step "round the turn round the bend"
On into happiness world without end.
They go, our beloved, just through the gate,
There is the sunlight, to smile, and to wait.
Doing the things that they loved to do.
Seeking new treasures, and beauties anew,
Finding old friends and their welcoming smile,
Working, and playing, and resting awhile.
Sadly missed by Wife and Family, also Mummy, Sisters and Brothers.

Hitler to Bid for Adriatic Outlet

Returning Il Duce's visit to Berlin, Chancellor Hitler, with an entourage of high German state authorities and military advisers, are en route to Rome. Political observers are of the opinion that when Hitler arrives in Rome he will consult with Mussolini regarding a German outlet to the Adriatic sea. Trieste, which Italy recently permitted Austria to use, might suit Hitler's purpose but there is considerable doubt that Italy would be willing to give the seaport to the Nazis. Plume is another likely outlet, but though it Italy has a valuable trade connection with Hungary, Italy cities on the ABOVE map.

SEEKING ANSWER TO QUESTION OF FISH MIGRATION

Salmon Bear Price Tags in Scars on Bodies Left by Removal of Fins

HALIFAX (CP)—Thousands of salmon, spawned in the Restigouche River and tagged, now are fingerlings in the St. John River in New Brunswick are getting ready to return to home waters and the question that fisheries department officials are hoping to answer is whether they will start up the Restigouche or will they seek the river from which they started to swim seawards.

Three years ago 400,000 Restigouche fingerlings were released in the St. John as part of a fisheries department plan to determine characteristics of the migration of salmon. Each one of the little fish bore a price tag of one dollar when it was placed in the river. Two fins were snipped off each fingerling and anyone returning the scar tissue, left by removal of the fins, to the department of fisheries together with information as to how and where he landed the fish and its weight will receive one dollar.

Fisheries officials laugh when asked if there is any chance of some clubhouse fisherman slipping off the fins of a fish he has caught to earn the dollar. Nature has its own way of preventing this kind of trickery because the scars left by removal of the fins in a fingerling can be easily distinguished from scars made on a grown fish.

Ordinary methods of tagging fish could not be used on the fingerlings, hence the removal of the fins. German silver tags usually placed on grown fish would act as sinkers on the fingerlings.

No scar tissue has been returned as yet and fisheries department officials are only now getting ready to set up posters announcing the reward. Most of the salmon are not expected to return from the sea until four years after they have been released.

If no fish return, experts of the department will know they will have to seek a new method of tagging the fingerlings. Removal of the fins may hamper the fish in leaving away from their natural enemies. Few of the marked salmon are expected to appear in Nova Scotian waters as the posters will be placed in New Brunswick.

Country Club Ready For Active Season

Course Improvements And Newly Decorated Lounge Will Appeal to Members

There is much activity about the Club now that the fine, warm spring weather has arrived. The fairways and greens have wintered exceptionally well and the professional, Mr. "Bill" Little has the course cut and in splendid shape. So good that "Sandy" Burrows made the nine holes in forty-three over the week-end—not bad "Sandy" for the "opener."

The new third green will soon be ready for playing and with the "dog's leg" now built in on this fairway much better golf will be developed by all that enjoy this invigorating and healthful pastime. The property has been extended some forty yards to the north taking in the old C.N.R. right of way, giving plenty of room behind the new green. A new rain and wind shelter is being erected at the north end of the course which will be most appreciated by its members.

The Club House itself will be the scene of much activity this year. The lounge has been newly decorated and made most attractive. The acquisition of a new electric Rockola will assure those members who wish to enjoy the Club for after theatre parties, tantalizing dance music on all occasions.

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Gay, formerly of the Summitt Golf Club, Toronto, and Riverside Golf Club, Windsor, have been engaged as steward and stewardess for the Club this season. Mr. Gay has some very highly recommended as a splendid chef and experienced cobbleneur of fine delicacies.

Both open club and private parties may be arranged throughout the season for luncheons, teas, dinners and late evening suppers.

The opening dance of the Club for the members and their friends will be held Friday next, May sixth. Already several private dinners have been arranged for parties so there should be a fine crowd on hand for this gala opening.

The president, Mr. Robert Martin, and the Directors, are making a strenuous effort to afford the membership every treat possible even bers and their friends the very utmost of the beautifully located club house and fine course for the current season.

Mr. Ed. Bernstein, Director of Membership, and Mr. Ernest Whelpton, head of the tennis section, are most gratified in the number of new applications for membership. There are all the omens of a happy and enjoyable season at the Club.

The world's worst weather is claimed for the Antarctic — the home of the blizzard.

Poems That Live

ABOU BEN ADHEM

About Ben Adhem (may his tribe increase!)
Awoke one night from a deep dream of peace,
And saw within the moonlight in his room,
Making it rich and like a lily in bloom,
An angel writing in a book of gold
Exceeding peace had made Ben Adhem bold,
And to the presence in the room he said,
"What writest thou?" The vision raised its head,
And, with a look made of all sweet accord,
Answered, "The names of those who love the Lord."
"And is mine one?" said Abou. "Nay, not so,"
Replied the angel. Abou spoke more low,
But cheerily still; and said, "I pray thee, then,
Write me as one that loves his fellow-men."
The angel wrote and vanished. The next night
It came again with a great wakening light,
And showed the names whom love of God had blessed—
And, lo! Ben Adhem's name led all the rest!

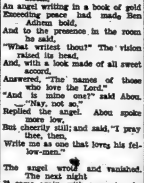
AT HOME 20 WEEKS WITH RHEUMATISM

Wife Feared Husband Would Never Work Again

When her husband had been at home 20 weeks with rheumatism in his back, this woman began to think he would never work again. At last, she said to him: "Let's try Kruschen," and the change that took place was, in her own words, "like a miracle." Here is her letter:



"My husband is subject to rheumatism and suffered terribly with his back. Some time ago, I had him in the house 20 weeks with it. I really didn't think he would ever work again. We tried all the different kinds of salts you could mention, but none of them did him any good. Then I said, 'Let's try Kruschen.' Since then, we have proved Kruschen Salts to be worth its weight in gold. My husband is back at his job, thanks to Kruschen, The change it made is like a miracle."—(Mrs.) B.

Two of the salts in Kruschen are the most effectual solvents of uric acid crystals known to science. They swiftly dull the sharp edges of the painful crystals and convert them into harmless solution, which is then expelled through the natural channels.

* AT THE BELLE

"You're Only Young Once"

Lewis Stone gets top billing in movies once more on his own protect. Rated as one of the best actors in motion pictures, with more than twenty-five years of stage and screen experience behind him, Stone insists he is a character actor.

Although his name appears constantly at the head of a cast, and it does again in "You're Only Young Once," coming to the Belle Theatre Thursday, he is happiest as he plays roles that require strong and unusual characterization.

Stone believes that this is the day of the character actor and points to such stellar stars as Spencer Tracy, Paul Muni, Gladys George, Wallace Beery and Edward Arnold who, although stars, are character players of the highest order.

"This couldn't happen in the silent days," declared the veteran actor. "When movies were in their infancy, the stories usually dealt with adolescent love. Character actors were incidental to the story.

"When sound entered motion pictures, it proved the salvation for many of the forgotten character actor. Sparkling dialogue issuing from the mouths of babes did not sound right. Thus the older players were given higher standing on the screen."

Stone also believes the screen gives the actor a greater chance for naturalness than the stage.

"An actor before an audience feels a personal contact. He is playing to the last row in the balcony as well as to the first row in the orchestra. Knowing this, a player often tightens up and fails to give the natural, impersonal performance he had resolved to make."

Stone has many ups and downs before the screen found its voice. Veteran of two wars, his acting career was often interrupted by a more imperative demand. He admits that in the early days, pictures were dumsy. Trained on the stage, he was often impleraent of mistakes which could have been avoided.

"But I've changed my mind about that too," he adds. "There has been such a tremendous improvement in modern pictures that I can scarcely believe it to be the same industry."

WALL ST. CLOSE

New York, May 4.—(AP)—A spirit in gold stocks enlivened the security market today and encouraged late buying in other groups after a straggling retreat.

Mining shares generally came into favor and the final tone and issues among industrial leaders were reduced or eliminated.

Transfers were about 400,000 shares.

TORONTO STOCKS CLOSE

Toronto, May 4.—(CP)—A strong market developed in the Gold shares this afternoon on the Toronto Exchange and other groups were drawn into up in sympathy, particularly the Base Metals. The Mining group posted net gains of 1 to 2-4 points with the action fairly heavy in Dome, Base Shore, Hollinger and International Nickel. Reports that the big nations might re-adjust their exchange agreement, giving Gold an improved position was evidently the basis for the buying which tapered off towards the close. Volume around 750,000 shares was the heaviest in a week.

Prospect of a readjustment of the monetary level involving not only Britain, France and the United States was also interpreted as a bullish development for the Gold stocks.

Western Oils ruled narrowly higher, including Royalite and Calgary-Edmonton and in the Industrial section Int. Nickel, Utilities, Beverages and miscellaneous issues declined better.

McIntyre changed hands at 40 1-4, up 1 1-8 from the last close and Dome was 1 1-4 at 36. Noranda slid back near the close. Hollinger and Lake Shore and Buffalo-Ankerite posted small gains. Medium-price and junior golds failed to hold all their advances but the gains of 5 to 15 cents were showing at the close for Kirkland Lake, Pamour, Wright-Hargreaves, Canadian Malartic, Central Patricia, Hard Rock, Kerr-Addison and Perron.

Noranda moved up to the 60 mark.

Board Room Gossip

As supplied to Bigger and Crawford By Financial Service

Sentiment in the Street continues gloomy, the only ray of sunshine from a Canadian viewpoint, being the improved money market conditions in the West, thus giving hope of a satisfactory wheat yield. Although it is entirely too early to predict the size of this year's wheat crop, it may be profitably pointed out that should Canada be fortunate enough in harvesting a good crop, conditions in the Dominion as a whole would benefit very materially.

Some months ago, the recession in the markets was attributed to nervousness over the possibility of an immediate European war. Today this factor is practically non-existent, and the real reason for the sluggishness of securities is the poor earnings of the majority of companies. To date, first quarterly earning reports of American corporations show a drop of 60 per cent in income as compared with the first quarter of 1937, and the same, although to a lesser extent, holds true of Canadian companies.

If holders of stocks cannot be easily forced into selling, then a condition may arise somewhat analogous to a frozen real estate market. Here, as everyone knows, the processes of liquidation consume years and only very gradually is the new and lower level of values established. Though the sacrifices when made are usually drastic, the realty owner or the foreclosing mortgagee may stubbornly hang on for years. In attempting to visualize the amount of correction necessary to bring security values into a more logical relationship to current and prospective earning power, the degree of resistance that may prevail against liquidation will have to be borne in mind. To put it bluntly, it is quite possible that stocks will not drastically reach the low levels which every rule of anaysis would justify.

During the past one hundred and fifty years, there have been sixty-two periods of depression—on the average, a depression every five years. The depths of these depressions have varied in length from 6 months to 6 years, and a number of investors find it difficult to appreciate the fact that such periods are inevitable under the present economic system. They must be taken in their stride. There is a widely quoted adage—"When business is bad, buy stocks; when business is bad, buy." This applies to the average investor who has the high-grade type of investment, as the latter can be bought by the average investor when funds are available. (McLeod, Young, Weir & Co. Ltd.)

The Standard Oil of New Jersey Receives in the Neighborhood of $17,500,000. Annually

Imperial Oil In Dividends

On Monday last the directors of the Standard Oil Co. of New Jersey declared an extra dividend of 50 cents a share on common stock, plus the regular semi-annual dividend of 50 cents, which means a distribution of $1.00 a share to shareholders on June 15th next.

It is now generally realized that 44.81 per cent of this enormous sum is destined for Standard's holdings of Imperial Oil Limited, which in turn secures it nearly all from Standard Oil Co. (New Jersey).

This is how it is accomplished. Of the $176,086,000 shares of "Pete" stock outstanding, Imperial Oil owns 60.69 percent or over 6,000,000 shares. Hence, on $1.00 a share that has been paid annually by International Petroleum on its stock since the beginning of 1926 Imperial Oil earned an income of $21,500,000 yearly. Net profit Imperial for 1937 was just under $30,000,000 and this it will be seen over 80 percent was derived from the dividends received on its holdings of "Pete". The common stock of International Petroleum is nearly 70 percent owned by Standard Oil of New Jersey. The latter, therefore, gets indirectly from Imperial Oil $1.25 a share annually, receives a total income of approximately $23,500,000 on its holdings of Imperial.

The above data will give the reader a clear picture of how Imperial Oil controlled policy of large oil company is to the parent company in New York.

Devaluate Franc At New Level

Paris, May 4.—(AP) —Premier Edouard Daladier announced devaluation and stabilization of the French franc in full accord with the governments of the United States and Great Britain.

The premier said the governments had decided to fix a new level for the franc but did not announce at what figure. He said this new level was necessary because the franc had to have a level which could be maintained."

The Premier expressed appreciation of the "cordial and loyal cooperation of the British and American governments."

He said the "change" in the franc rate value would be announced tomorrow morning. He added that the finance might be held slightly lower than the present value but in any case would not drop below 11.

Former Kingston Man Dies at Memphis

Memphis, Tenn., May 4 (CP)— Deputy Sheriff Oliver Perry today found Dr. Rose Anderson, 62-year-old Memphis obstetrician and son of Mr. Anderson, Kingston, Ont., wholesaler, died by his own hand.

The body of the Queen's University graduate, who practices at Peabody Hospital and the Royal Victoria Hospital, Montreal, was found near a highway yesterday, six days after his disappearance from home. He had been slain by a single bullet fired from an automatic pistol found near the body. Coroner Joe Stratton said the doctor killed himself because of financial difficulties. He added that no inquest would be held.

Dr. Anderson's father was expected here tonight to make arrangements for his son's funeral and burial.

C.P.R. PRESIDENT OPTIMISTIC

Montreal, May 4 (CP)—Sir Edward Beatty told shareholders of the Canadian Pacific Railway Company at their annual meeting today there was no reason to fear the company would not again earn a reasonable return on its assets of $1,321,000,000.

Despite droughts, floods, and disease, the United States has had a prosperous year, he said.

John St. Church Scene of Fire-Scarred Noble Edifice

Rev. E. C. Currie Recalls Pleasant Association While Here in 1913-17

MANY ARE MISSING

A distinguished looking clerical gentleman stood at the corner of Victoria Avenue and John Street early today. He gazed at the ruining of the once splendid edifice that was John Street Presbyterian Church, a look of sadness in his clear grey eyes.

Presently noted the tall, erect figure, standing rigidly as a keen sentinel over the fire scarred ruins of the former church. There was a suspicious moisture in his eyes as he slowly turned away.

And memories of a former ministry and its happy associations flooded the mind of the Rev. E. C. Currie, minister of John Street Presbyterian Church from 1913-1917 and now in charge of St. Andrew's Church at Vancouver, Ontario, as he slowly walked from the scene of his former ministrations.

"It was with a keen sense of loss that I have viewed the remains of John Street Church," Mr. Currie said. "It was my privilege to minister there from 1913 to 1917 and many pleasant associations were connected with those years. Many friends were dying days for the ministry.

"The Great War was on, and we had our quota of enlistments, recruitments, the 80th and the 135th," continued Mr. Currie. "To be sure the congregation was made up largely of our families whose fathers and mothers had come from Scotland and it fell to the lot of the ministry to be found himself in the very midst of comforting the families bereft of fathers, husbands and sons; also to do the very sad last of comforting to these families. In the gardens of memory lie after another was "Killed in Action."

"John Street Church had many men in the forces, and were among men of action and who contributed much to the life and progress of the city and church," Mr. Currie said.

"We recall the names of such men as R. J. Graham, D. D. Sinclair, Peter Bain, R. Turnbull and others, now passed away. Also W. G. Mahon, John Mannerly, Bone and others who, have served the church in its long life, still."

Stone leaving John Street Church the Rev. Mr. Currie has ministered at Knox Church, St. Paul's Church, Hawkesbury; St. Andrew's Church, Ottawa, and St. Paul's Church, Sault Ste. Marie.

"The wage earning class would be unwilling to ... unless it were able to avail themselves of such a scheme as this. "Also the ... of health insurance have value making it all inclusive, to embrace those with incomes above the limit suggested in the scheme, seems unnecessary."

Mayor Wilson said the plan called for contributions by the state, the employer and the employee.

Dr. MacKenzie Discusses Plan

Dr. MacKenzie discussed the form of the proposed health ... method that is applied for administering the scheme may be such as leaves a free choice of doctor to the patient or to the profession or both, as in a system of private practice free choice and competition may be affected, or it may make all practitioners members of a ... service thereby ... into contracts with them at a fixed salary basis.

talks today, but ... Rome diplomats suggested two pertinent points:

1. Premier Mussolini might sound out his guest on the much-talked-of five-power pact among Italy, Germany, Great Britain, France and Poland.

2. Hitler likely will use the occasion to renew his assurances Germany is content to let former Pan (gslaway between Austria and Italy) be his frontier, notwithstanding the presence of large numbers of German residents in the Italian Tyrol, which Italy won from old Austria at the end of the Great War.

What Hitler intends to do about Czechoslovakia and its German population doubtless was up for discussion, and there was speculation also as to what the two leaders would decide about Spain.

Vatican City, May 4—(AP)—Pope Pius was quoted by L'Osservatore Romano, the Vatican newspaper as saying at Castel Gandolfo today that it was "a sad thing" that "the Cross and Christianity are linked to the cross of Christ" was hoisted in Rome's Olympic Stadium.

Yesterday was Holy Cross Day. It coincided with the arrival in Rome of Adolf Hitler, in whose honor the city was decorated with the Swastika and Fascist emblems.

The Vatican Organ said the Pope also said: "We are surprised, to be faithful to Christian life and prayer, "since and things are happening, very much ... is near."

And among these and things," he continued, "is this: That it is not considered exceedingly out of place and unbecoming to hold the Olympic Holy Cross Day the insignia of another cross that is not the cross of Christ.

Traffic on Highways

Col. Biggar said the number of motor vehicles was not a true picture of the volume of motor traffic because the total commercial vehicles included trucks and busses of all sizes and there was no segregation.

Road mileage operated rose from 35,363 in 1923 to 38,117 for the Canadian National and Canadian Pacific Railways, exclusive of lines in the United States. The C.N.R. today had 21,894 miles of road in this country and the C.P.R. 17,223.

Freight tonnage carried in 1923 was 47,267,000 for the C.N.R. and 32,939,000 for the C.P.R. In both systems a high-peak was attained in 1928, the 1937 combined total of 80,206,000 tons rose in that year to 89,205,000 tons. However freight tonnage on both roads dropped steeply until last year the Canadian lines of the C.N.R. carried 36,121,000 tons—a decline of 23 per cent from the 1923 figure. The decline of the C.P.R. was to 29,843,000 tons, or a decrease of nine per cent.

Passenger Traffic Drops

Passenger traffic showed a more drastic decline from 1923. In 1923 the C.N.R. Canadian lines in 1923 to 11,300,000 in 1937, or a drop of 42 per cent. The C.P.R. decline was 42 per cent; from 16,234,000 in 1923 to 7,221,000 last year.

Col. Biggar said that although freight traffic had risen to a peak in 1928 the same was not true of passenger traffic. Every year the type of passengers by both roads had steadily declined.

A curious fact shown on the chart indicating passenger miles. Said Col. Biggar, was that in figures for miles on the C.P.R. dropped 41 per cent from 1930 to 1933 and the C. N. R. passenger miles dropped 51 per cent.

First Class Occurs

The first clash of the sitting occurred when Col. Biggar (Dr. T. Reid (Con. Winnipeg South Centre) objected he had not received a copy of the report in time to know exactly what the discussion was about.

"With all due respect to the Senator from Brockville (Senator A. C. Hardy) I am a member of this committee," he said.

"I object to any such reference," said Senator Hardy.

"Well you can take it," retorted Senator Biggar. He stopped even from speaking in another committee but you can't stop me here."

Senator Arthur Hardy produced a chart showing the average freight haul now the most significant of the lot because it shows the railways have pretty well held their long-haul traffic.

C.N.R. Increases Greater

Another chart on the average passenger journey showed that the average length of passenger journeys on the C.P.R. increased 10 per cent from 1931 to 1936 and the average length on the C.N.R. increased 46 per cent.

The chart showed that Dominion cash assistance to the C.N.R. had risen from $72,688,000 in 1923 to $332,688,000 in 1937. The latter was distributed among deficits, construction and interest accounts.

Payrolls and Revenues

Lines on a chart showing the total payroll roughly corresponded with the course of lines on the chart showing gross revenue. Col. Biggar said. On both railways payrolls reached a peak in 1929 at about $175,000,000 for the C.N.R. and $150,000,000 for the C.P.R. They declined to under $100,000,000 for the C.N.R. and $65,000,000 on the C.P.R. in 1933 and began to recover to 1936 when they stood at $120,000,000 for the C.N.R. and $75,000,000 for the C.P.R.

It was shown that wheat hauled from the Prairies by all Canadian Railways dropped from 16,340,450 tons in 1928 to 4,190,000 tons last year. At the same time lumber hauled through the Welland Canal rose from 1,234,184 tons in 1928 to 2,441,000 tons. A similar increase was indicated in Canadian Traffic through the Panama Canal. In 1923 this was 1,033,278 tons and last year, 4,333,837.

Passenger Traffic of 1938

Col. Biggar said he had obtained statements from the railways. For the first three months of 1938, O.N.R. revenues were down $3,750,000 compared with the corresponding period last year and expenses were up $2,200,000 giving a "net worsenss" of $6,048,000.

For the same period Canadian Pacific Railway revenues were down $1,501,000 and expenses were up $994,000 making a net recession of $2,295,000.

He was unable to explain why expenses were up when revenues were down unless it was due to increases in wage rates.

ance, inspired by faithful leader for the continuance of the Presbyterian Church. It shall continue only if we admit the binding obligations assumed from Kirk sessions of small congregations to the "solidarium" in some quarters is a menace to progress. Another thing we would commend the moderator on his visits was the diligence and solemnity of ministers' service.

Only one of the most important ceremonies in the life of a minister and congregation, they are usually fraught with deep emotion mingled with the dignity fittingly set forth in the ritual of the Presbyterian Church. "We live in a restless age, restlessness is the opportunity but it often unfruitful." This history of our church reveals that the days of long tenures of service by ministers of various bodies who served faithfully for years, have been affected by this present restlessness. Frequent changes are now recommended to give added efficiency. But the greatest progress was made before the rapid changing policy was adopted.

Would Increase Stipend.

"Another problem in the life of our church is finance," continued the Moderator. With the increased cost of maintaining a motor car, etc., I am of the opinion that the increase in the minimum stipend would increase the efficiency in ministers. It has been said of the dead calf of truth that a twenty per cent stipend increase would result in one hundred per cent increase in efficiency. The financial life of our ministry are a fine group of skilful consecrated servants of God, who are entitled to the fullest and responsibility of leadership.

He concluded his forceful address Dr. Munro stated that our nation has been blessed in the past twelve years by the Presbyterian church. May God preserve the Presbyterian Church in Canada.

Reports of the Sunday school and Young People's societies presented by Rev. Mr. Grier, convener, were received and adopted on the morning session.

The Sacrament of the Lord's Supper was conducted at twelve o'clock by the Moderator assisted by Rev. W. J. Walker.

SCOTT'S SCRAP BOOK

By R. J. SCOTT

Little Benny's Note Book

Us fellows was standing around the letter box talking and arguing as Sherry Judge came up saying to Puds Simkins, Hay Puds, some lady is ringing your doorbell and not getting any answer.

Because nobody's home, that's why, Puds said, and Sherry said, There's something funny about her, she kind of rinkles up her nose every little while like a rabbit.

What for? Clinton Magee said, and Sherry said, How do I know, it must be a habit.

Sounding like something intriguing to see, and us fellows walked up to Puds house and the lady was still standing on the steps waiting and we all watched and sure enough she rinkled up her nose just like a rabbit, saying, Do any of you boys live here?

Yes mam, I do, Puds said, and the lady said, O you do, well I'm calling to see Mr. Simkins, is that your mother?

Yes mam, Puds said. And he was just starting to hrey on saying she wasn't home, and I quick whispered to him, Hay, go on in and pretend you're finding out if your mother is home or not, so we can watch her a little longer.

I'll go and see if she's in, Puds said.

Which he did and the lady kept on rinkling up her nose just often enough to keep it intriting and not often enough to make it monotonis and pritty soon I saw somebody peeking through the corner of the front window being Puds not wanting to miss the show himself and after a while he came out again saying, She's not in.

My, it look you quite a while, but thank you, the lady said, and Puds said, u're welcome, and the lady made one more nose like a rabbit and walked away.

NEWS OF THE WORLD AS TOLD IN PICTURES

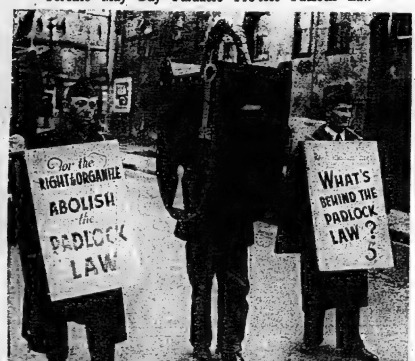
Dread Silicosis Proved to be Preventable

In tests conducted by the American Optical Company, Southbridge, Mass., respirators have proved 100 per cent. protection against alcosis, deadly occupational disease, is now possible for those exposed to dusty work. Gas-masked and begoggled a laboratory worker of the company is shown, LEFT, about to start a 30-minute bicycle ride around a specially-constructed chamber, which was flooded with carbon black. The "human guinea pig" emerged from the chamber, TOP, covered with carbon black after his 30-minute ride. This study in black and white, BOTTOM, shows just how the mask and goggles protect the worker's mouth, nostrils and eyes from dust particles.

"Speeding" Down the Home Stretch

Thundering down the home stretch in the greatest race of the century five turtles, each representing a country and each guided and cheered by a society woman, staged a thrilling finish to a hard-fought race in Philadelphia. "Jockey" Mrs. Wallace Backus and her hard-shelled steed won the contest in the world's slowest time for the distance.

Blossom Festival to Exchange Queens



Arrangements have been made by the Annapolis Valley Blossom Festival, to be held May 28-30, to exchange queens with the Winchester, Virginia, apple blossom festival of the Shenandoah Valley. Pretty Adelaide Moffet, Queen of the Shenandoah Valley's annual apple blossom festival was recently crowned by Admiral Richard Byrd, who is shown as he bestowed the coronet on Miss Moffet, Queen of Shenandoah XV.

To Valina and General Miguel Aranda have fallen most of the laurels in this most intensive drive of the Spanish civil war.

Toronto May Day Paraders Protest Padlock Law

When the annual May Day parade in Toronto got under way—a day earlier than usual this year—one of its most prominent features was a number of the steel workers' section of the labor organizations which took part, disguised as a huge padlock and flanked on each side by fellow members carrying signs protesting the padlock law, now being enforced in Quebec. The numerous parades staged by labor unions and organizations converged on Queen's Park, where a demonstration was held.

It was displayed conspicuously, a red circle on a white background, with a square blue star in the centre. The color, La Follette explained, is the cross of the ballot box. The circle, he said, symbolizes the uniting of the American people.

Solved Redfern Mystery

Theodore J. Waldeck, New York sportsman and explorer, who rrached civilization at Georgetown, after leading an expedition into the hinterland jungles of British Guiana seeking a clue to the fate of Paul Redfern, U. S. flier, who vanished 10 years ago during a flight over South America. Waldeck reported that he had found proof that Redfern died in a crash of his monoplane in the jungle, but refused to give details until he has communicated with relatives of the lost airman.

Proposed Air Bases in Pacific

This map shows three proposed strategic air bases in the Pacific that would give the U. S. navy command of the air over this vast ocean. The proposal, calling for an expenditure of $5,500,000 and marking the first step by the U.S. to disturb the Status quo established by the Washington treaty for the Pacific defence of signatory nations, was transmitted to congress by Secretary of the Navy Claude A. Swanson. The sites of the ocean air bases would be at Midway island and Kaneohe bay, Hawaii, in the mid-Pacific, and at Kodiac in the Aleutian islands off the mainland of Alaska.

Profits on Gold Will Largely Wipe Out Debt to Bank of France

Paris, May 5—(AP)—The government announced today the franc had been stabilized at 35.80 francs to the dollar and 179 to the pound.

The official announcement called the action "de factor stabilization." This was believed to mean the franc would be allowed to fluctuate within this level but would be held by the equalization fund from falling below it in conformity with Premier Edouard Daladier's pledge last night to the nation.

Before the announcement the franc had dropped to 36.30 to the dollar and 178.98 to the pound in bank trading, after opening at 35.70 and 178.5.

Franc worth 2.79

Afternoon quotations were maintained at approximately the stabilization level, which makes the franc worth 2.79 cents.

The Premier announced the devaluation—third since the Great War—last night after admitting the danger of conflict in Europe was increasing and that the step was necessary to put France in a propaganedness footing.

Why the Weather?

By Major A. H. Thiessen

Major A. H. Thiessen of the Science Service Meteorologist.

The free air! This term has come into use in the present century when the properties of the upper air began to be vigorously studied. The "free air" has come to mean that realm of the atmosphere beyond the range of surface instruments. Observations of the upper air free air were first made by manned balloons as early as 1784. Later this method was supplanted by free instrument-balloons, either carrying instruments for measuring temperature, pressure, and humidity, or without instruments for using the wind speed and direction at various altitudes. Kites carrying instruments were also used, but the use of kites is considered largely by the weather.

THE WEATHER

Toronto, May 5— (CP)—Synopsis —A deep depression, with centre 29.16 inches, is moving north-north-eastward over Minnesota and another moderate depression is centred near the Labrador coast with high pressure spreading northwest Quebec and the upper Mackenzie valley. The weather has been fair in most districts of Eastern Canada though rain has fallen in southern Ontario. It has been fair and cooler in Manitoba with light showers in Saskatchewan and light to moderate showers and snowflurries in Alberta.

Lake Superior: Strong east and southeast winds, rain or snow today and most part west on Friday; unsettled today and Friday with showers; cooler Friday night.

Manitoba: Fresh to strong north, east winds, cloudy and cool today and Friday with showers.

Saskatchewan: Cloudy and cool today and Friday with some scattered showers or snowflurries.

Alberta: Mostly cloudy and cool today and Friday; scattered showers or snowflurries.

Liner Burns While Seamen Strike on Another Over Uniforms

Le Havre, France, May 5—(AP)—A seamen's strike because the sailors disliked their uniforms held the French liner Champlain in port today, while sight of the ruins of the Lafayette or the same fleet, which was devastated by fire.

It had been announced last night that the Champlain strike for better working conditions was settled and the liner had sailed for New York, but the vessel was at her dock this morning. The passage was cancelled, leaving 1,000 passengers to find other accommodations.

The double setback struck the line suddenly during the day. Officials members of the Champlain's crew refusing to take their posts because they disliked the shade of blue of their jackets and wanted stars on the sleeves.

A third unit of the French line fleet, the Ile De France, arrived during the night from New York and docked between the Champlain and Lafayette, but later was taken by tugs into the harbor far from the burning Lafayette.

Fire continued to blaze today from the Lafayette, France's largest ine, sending with explosions sending flames skyward.

Charred lifeboats fell into the water beneath the single red hot funnel. Fire fighters turned a hard down hoses on the vessel, in dry dock, but confined their efforts to preventing spread of the fire.

The liner's costly fittings were saturated with oil from explosions that fueled feeding the flames which swept the ship.

The fire started in the stoke-holds shortly, spread first to the large dining saloon, and then enveloped the broad glass-enclosed promenade deck.

After rescuing a skeleton crew of 30, trapped on the forward deck, fire fighters from all surrounding districts worked to keep the flames from spreading from the Lafayette's drydock to the rest of the port.

WM. WILKINSTEIN KILLED INSTANTLY WORKING ON FARM

Thrown From Roller When Colt Became Frightened And Team Ran Away

NO INQUEST

Picton, May 5 (Special)—William Wilkinstein, 64-year-old farmer residing on the High Shore Road two miles northeast of Picton, Township of Sophiasburg, died almost instantly of a badly fractured skull, when thrown from a roller on the farm, the accident occurred about 2.30 E.S.T. Wednesday afternoon. The end iron of the whiffletree struck him, frightening the colt that was one of the team drawing the roller. The team bolted with the colt. In crossing a dead furrow the tongue of the roller broke, throwing Mr. Wilkinstein in front of the roller and killing him instantly.

Chief Coroner Dr. D. S. Light-hall was called and decided an inquest was unnecessary. The deceased had resided in this locality for the past twenty years on the farm with his son-in-law Mr. E. J. Jessup. Recently he had purchased a small adjoining property and was preparing to move with his son's family. His wife, one daughter, Mrs. Jessup and three grand-children.

PREMATURE BIRTH OF SEPTUPLETS SEEN IN HAVANA

woman near Bayamo had given birth prematurely to seven children, of none had survived.

He said he had visited the woman but had not seen the children, because the midwife had disposed of them before his arrival. The birth, he said occurred Monday, after only seven months pregnancy.

The woman's name was given as Rafaela Canero, thirty years old. She was recovering.

Bayamo is in extreme southeastern Cuba, 33 miles inland from Manzanillo.

Earlier Colonel Fulgencio Batista, Chief of the Army, on receipt of the report that several babies were born, sent an army physician to the Bayamo district to investigate.

Once a travelling salesman, Cornell is a native of Hespeler and Bermuda.

MOTHER ACCUSES HER SON OF FOUR UNSOLVED CRIMES

SON IS IN PRISON

Body of One Dismembered And Buried in Several Places, Claimed

Walla Walla, Wash., May 5—(AP) —A 73-year-old mother accused her son of murdering several persons, prison officials said today, as they arranged to bring the pair together for the first time in 10 years.

It was June, Deputy Sheriff Lou Schermer of King County said, investigators extracted from Mrs. Mary Measor Smith a story of how her son, Earl DeCasto Mayer, husband to death James Eugene Bastedo in Seattle 19 years ago dismembered his body and hid it in scattered pickaid spots.

Unexpectedly, Schermer said, Mrs. Smith wrote State Patrolman Joe McCauley, who escorted her by posing as a clergyman, that Mayer previously killed two other men and a woman in Montana and Idaho.

The letters named the victims as Mrs. Bessie La Grande of Butte, Mont., who vanished in 1923; Ole Larsen of Anaconda, Mont., who disappeared in 1921, and a man named Randall whose body was buried in stone quarry in Idaho.

MUSSOLINI SHOWS ITALIAN SEAPOWER TO ADOLF HITLER

Vast Panorama Intended to Show Italy's Capacity For War

PLAN 'AERIAL' SHOW

Naples, May 5—(AP)— Premier Mussolini spread Italian seapower in a vast panorama before Chancellor Hitler today in the first of two spectacles intended to show Italy's capacity for war.

More than 200 fighting craft and squadrons of warplanes were mobilized for the war-like manoeuvres, with trim little combat launches speeding over the bay, submarines and big guns roaring in simulated attack and defence.

In the centre of the fleet that escorted the Duce and Fuehrer's ship attended by Satellite craft, was the 22,000-ton battleship Cavour, carrying Hitler, Premier Mussolini and Italy's Vittorio Emanuele and their staffs.

Suddenly, submarines broke the surface on all sides of the fleet in a mock attack and a thunderous thundered salvo, at the "enemy" fleet. In the confusion searchlights torpedo boats shrouded themselves in smoke screens, darted from line to line and then back back to cover escape counter-attack.

The fleet later moved beyond the Isle of Capri, then circled Isola Island, which lies between Ischia and Procida Islands toward Capri before returning to the final assembly and review by the two dictators.

The weather clouded before the parade was half over.

A great armada of 90 submarines — almost Italy's entire strength in this class — played around the fleet for purposes, and then went through several maneuvers. In one demonstration all 90 submerged simultaneously to the surface from the other ships.

As a climax, Fascist aviators plan, in dramatic aerial "attack" upon the 22-000-ton battleship Cavour carrying Mussolini and Hitler as observers.

Quinte Bay Beaches Assoc. Is Granted Incorporation

The charter has been received from the Office of the Provincial Secretary of the Province of Ontario, The Hon. Harry C. Nixon, incorporating the Quinte Bay Beaches Association with Reginald Robert Mosscrieff, David Loughlin Fleming, Mark James Vanner, George LeRoy Finch and Harris Hamilton Lewis as directors. The head office is in Belleville, Ontario. Mr. Frank C. Armstrong is solicitor for the applicants with the man of its legal committee.

The purpose for which the charter was granted is as follows: "Subject to any necessary governmental or other consent, or approval, to improve the waterfront of the said City of Belleville on the Bay of Quinte and also the shores and banks of the River Moira, within the said city of Belleville by making the same more attractive in appearance and service to the public and to the City of Belleville, for the benefit of health and pleasure; and to acquire such interests in and rights to such lands and waters as may be required for the purposes aforesaid."

The Quinte Bay Beaches Association is an incorporated body without share capital. The charter provides that the interest of a member in the corporation shall not be transferable and that membership shall cease upon the death of any such member or when such member may cease to be a member of the corporation in accordance with the bylaws of the association.

The charter also provides that the incorporation shall be carried on without the purpose of gain for its members and any profits shall be used in promotion of its objects.

It is the intention of the directors to hold an organization meeting shortly when definite arrangements will be sought with the city and Belleville Power Commission for the water front.

The development of the beaches project will, it is expected, proceed rapidly with the granting of the charter, constituting the association.

PRIORITY IN TAX ONLY RELIEF WAY

Hon. Eric Cross Says Otherwise Province Has No Opportunity

By CARL REINKE
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Toronto, May 5—(CP)— Ontario municipalities are unlikely to be relieved of any more of their load carried by the provincial government unless the Dominion agrees to recognize the principle of priority in the order to collect personal income tax. It was indicated to the Rowell Commission today.

Hon. Eric Cross, Ontario Minister of Welfare and Municipal Affairs, said the government had relieved the municipalities of $13,000,000 by taking over complete responsibility for general services last year, but it was difficult to go further and old-age crits could be passed on to the municipalities unless any agreement is reached with the Dominion with respect to the prior right of the province to collect income tax."

Direct Taxation

The province believed all social services should be financed out of direct taxation, he said. "Until this field had not been invaded by the Dominion the province would be in a position still further to alleviate the present load which the municipalities are required to carry."

DIVERSIFICATION

Tariff Policy Should Not Be Isolated From Other Gov't. Policy

By CARL REINKE
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Toronto, May 5—(CP)— Under any trade policy, Canadian industry would have been concentrated in the lower lakes-St. Lawrence area, where population was densest, and cheap and transportation facilities cheapest, the Ontario government contended before the Rowell Commission.

Professor Ireland "an unwarranted assumption" the frequent assertion that the tariff had concentrated industrial development in Ontario and Quebec, although it recognized there was general agreement that trade policy "accelerated economic diversification and stimulated the growth of such types of secondary industries."

Inevitable Industrial Areas

"Southern Ontario and Quebec are the inevitable Industrial areas of Canada," said Prof. K. W. Taylor, McMaster University, for the government. "It is even probable that the Canadian tariff policy has actually tended to disperse industry in Canada."

Hindus Oppose Custom Dowry Before Daughters Are Married

By C. E. POWELL
Canadian Press Correspondent

Calcutta, May 5—(CP)— Hindu parents are agitating vigorously against the custom which ordains they must hand over a large dowry before their daughters are married.

By centuries-old Hindu law a man must obtain husbands for his daughters while they are still young. Among many orthodox people it is regarded as disgraceful, and may even lead to ostracism by caste, if a daughter is not married quickly after a certain age.

By custom Hindus can marry only within a restricted circle, usually the sub-caste, and the supply of eligible bachelors is further limited by the unemployment and poverty of the middle classes. As a result it is a general complaint among middle-class Hindus of upper and castepoints that they have to pay dearly to secure the much-needed husbands for their daughters. In Bengal girls have been known to commit suicide rather than put a stop on their parents' financial resources.

Why do not parents and daughters rebel? Because custom is king among orthodox Hindus, and a husband must be found for a man's daughter.

Marriages are prearranged by parents and relatives. The bridegroom usually does not see the bride until after the wedding. Her looks and other merits are vouched for by his mother and sisters who visit her behind the purdah.

Twenty-Five Millions in Gold Shipped From France to Canada

London, May 5—(CP Cable)—Two equal shipments of gold with a total value of £5,000,000 ($25,000,000) have been arranged from France for Canada, the News Chronicle says.

The shipments are to be made by the British authorities and represent gold which was earmarked in Paris for the account of the British exchange equalization fund.

The News Chronicle adds these two possible explanations of the transaction. It may represent sales of gold bullion to the Bank of Canada by the British authorities or may think it desirable to accumulate, for their account, a reserve of gold in Canada.

COURAGE SUPREME OF ALL VIRTUES

Rev. Dr. Kerr Links Niemoeller With Luther For an Unflinching Heart

"That man has no place in the world of service who has lost faith in himself in other men and in God," the Rev. Dr. Hugh T. Kerr, Pittsburg minister, told members of the Toronto Presbyterian Laymen in his closing address before that body meeting in St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church.

We are a faint-hearted people, that is why the chicken cult of courage is needed today," Dr. Kerr said in a brilliant address on "Courage."

Faith is the only victory, declared the Pittsburg minister, and in the realm of the intangible and the unseen. That is why courage is the supreme of all virtues.

"Coward, liar and thief are the contemptible trio of fear, and of these 'coward' is the most cutting. and I put among those excluded from Heaven. The liar is last."

Physical and Moral Courage

Pointing out that physical courage is as old as the world, Dr. Kerr stated that it belonged to the savage as well as the man of high culture. General Chiang Kai-Shek stated the other day that the Chinese soldiers were no braver than any other troops, but they were braver

The consignee in Ireland decided to send some of the apples to his son living in Gibraltar, so it was an easy matter to translate them on their new destination. Mr. Dempsey has since received word from his self-same apples were stated to be "the nicest and sweetest" he had ever eaten.

The fruit was shipped in boxes similar to egg crates, with individual apples being separated from each other.

GIVINGS DOWN

in this branch of the work. This camp under the supervision of the Synod provides a week of study and leadership training which aids to develop future workers.

Rev. J. A. MacInnis, B.D., presented a report on the Social Service Committee and introduced Mr. C. Pitts of Ottawa, chairman of the Committee of Administration, who presented the facts of the financial state of the budget. The giving of the Toronto and Kingston Synod, which is the leading Synod of the Church, did not represent the ability of the people," he stated. "The present lack of deficit which sadly cripples the efforts of the Board of Administration could be greatly relieved if the Kirk Sessions within the various Presbyteries strived to stir up a new spirit of enthusiasm among the communicants."

In presenting her report of the W.M.S. Mrs. Hits stated there was abundant evidence that people are greatly concerned. The work in this department was progressing most favorably. There was a total of 1365 organizations under direction of the W.M.S. and many of the 316 junior auxiliaries showed a willingness to do more than their share by seeking an increased allocation. Five new supplies were made possible by reserve funds accumulated and were among the Indians and French of the Home Mission Department was going forward satisfactorily.

Miss Bessie McMurchy of India. Miss Bessie McMurchy of the India Mission gave a splendid address on the progress of the work in India, stressing the unique position where progress had been apparent. Lives were being brought into contact with Christ through the efforts of the medical service and the work of the people in that land are asking for the teaching of Christ.

The report on missions was presented by Rev. W. T. McCree, M.A., who also introduced the above personages who spoke to the attending ministers.

Rev. Principal Thomas Eakin, D.D.

Knox College

The school committees seem to attain a judicial attitude toward the church college," stated Dr. Eakin in his address. "But the college is not called upon to make a report to any governing body but the General Assembly. The Presbyterian Church has passed through a period of reformation.

"We have become the 'Alexander the Great' of reform refounding to the extent of lamenting because there is nothing left to reform. Modernism is not an inspiration picture to fill within his mind and proceeds to paint it in accordance only to find out it becomes absurd in actual use. Yet we must continue to age-point committees. I think when some of us Presbyterians get that sort of thing we attempt to do will be to appoint a committee to it was thought recently, that as a measure of economy the church offices could be established in the Knox College building but investigation proved the alteration expenditure would cost approximately fifty thousand dollars and a committee reported against. Suggestions come into being because some one starts to reach out into spheres of which they know very little.

"For 94 years the governing body of Knox Theological College has consisted of a Senate and Board separate entirely in function. The Senate makes recommendations to the Board and the Board to the General Assembly, but at present we find many members active on both these bodies. There are those who would like to reform in the direction of teaching a form of weird sociology, muddled economics. We might then start out scholars with a diploma in one hand and a soapbox in the other. I join the reformers in suggesting a five year plan and that for the next five years those appointed to the various committees will devote their time and service to the business on which they were appointed and pray to be free from reformers," he stated in conclusion.

Name Committees

The final subject of the agenda was the naming of the committees to examine the Presbytery records. Following adjournment the ministers were taken on a sightseeing tour around the bay of Quinte and tea was served by the ladies.

Wednesday Evening Sederunt

The second evening sederunt of Presbytery was opened with a prayer ended by an organ-prelude with J. M. Hodgins, musical director of St. Andrew's church, presiding at the console and a full choir in attendance to lead in the singing. The court was formally constituted by Rev. Dr. R. G. Stewart, Moderator, and a comprehensive report of the Committee on Evangelism was presented by Rev. J. Shortt, D.D. Barrie. The convener reviewed the history of Presbyterianism in Canada and revivals brought into being by such men as D. L. Moody and others.

The report of the Historical Committee was presented. These reports were followed by brief addresses by Rev. W. MacKay of Kirkland Lake, who outlined the progress of work in that field. "We are in the early church the field was the world and it was not long before the message preceded the Roman eagle', said the speaker. "With the passing of time the world grew in proportion and new lands were discovered and the Church of Christ was slow and the Church of Christ was slow to enter these new fields. So to the present day the Presbyterian Church in Canada, a child of the Presbyterian Church of Scotland, has a heritage worthy of consideration. She has played a great part in the moulding of Canadian life. In the cosmopolitan towns of the dominion, greatly increasing in population by virtue of mineral finds there Christianity gets a real challenge. Many of these towns are ripe and because of the mixed nationalities of their people could easily become breeding ground for Fascism, Communism, and other such radical movements. The press reports that the men of Kirkland Lake are hard-hearted and women of low standard are untrue."

"There are many fine high minded people keenly interested in the promotion of the finer things of life," continued the speaker. "Such statements are detrimental to any community." In a detailed report of the achievements in organizing a Presbyterian Church there, Mr. MacKay reminded that in eight months the congregation had raised a total sum of $1,805. Forms on communicant roll numbered 130 and membership in the Sunday School 140. They had started to buy a church site as a cost of five thousand dollars which would be paid in June of this year. So once again the fact is portrayed that the traditions of the Presbyterian church and its heritage are desired in the isolated centers of

KING AND QUEEN AT GLASGOW

In work and industry is life. The Empire Exhibition which Their Majesties King George and Queen Elizabeth opened at Glasgow, Scotland, on Tuesday is the proof of the vastness of the activity of the British Dominions.

True to Scots thoroughness, this exhibition was 99.9 per cent ready when the gates opened, setting in this way a fine example for future exhibitions. No doubt the canny Scot had much to do with this thoroughness for he is known as among the best businessmen in the world. They know the value of every visitor and want to see that every opportunity was provided for a full attendance from opening to closing day. It is said there were seven hundred committees and sub-committees numbering a membership of six thousand going into this thoroughness.

This show will illustrate for months the Empire. The Scot knows that doing anything is worth doing well. So the perfection of planning.

Here is a picture in miniature of the Empire, catching the real spirit of the people who are the world's best colonizers and hence businessmen.

While the pomp of soldiery is exalted in other lands and might of numbers is held up as the greatest force in the world, Britain while taking a very "practical" stand on the world issues, still goes on with her industry, knowing full well that industrial life (which includes farming) means everything to the nation and in the nation to every citizen.

Thirty Dominions and Colonies are participating in this $50,000,000 exhibition which is carried on under a non-profit arrangement by the backers of the exhibition.

His Majesty the King referred in words of praise for the cooperation which has been demonstrated by all the organizing bodies and the workmen.

He also pointed to the Scottish conviction that new enterprise is the best insurance against depression. In this spirit the exhibition had been built. His Majesty suffered a kindly wish that as Scots had left home for other lands to enrich them with their citizenship, these lands would be represented by many who would come to admire the structure which indicates empire solidity and industry and spirit and also the faith of the people of Scotland.

A nation of shopkeepers, a dictator named Napoleon once said of the people of Albion in a fateful conference, and the shopkeepers and businessmen defeated him. Today in a world of alarms the British do not forget the lifeblood of trade and commerce as a great factor in the welfare of every citizen of the Empire, physically, mentally and morally.

WEALTH OF CITIES

Figures startling in their magnitude have been assembled by a French scientist who says that the six largest cities of the world are worth $97,000,000,000. New York according to this leads with the valuation of 30 million million dollars. He places London in second place with 26 million millions of dollars value. Paris comes third with 11 million millions. Berlin fourth at 8 million millions, Vienna at six and a half million millions, fifth, and Rome with all its antiquities but three and a half million millions of dollars.

The mind cannot conceive such wealth, but it can realize how such cities and the nations in which they are, ponder over the possibility of air raids in event of war. There were great losses during the Great War when so many countries were ravaged, but the losses of that four year period would not compare with the losses of a future war of the nations, bent on breaking down the resistance behind the fronts and wearing out the people who furnish the sinews of war. It is no wonder Mussolini some time ago told Romans and dwellers of other large cities in Italy that they might well think over adjusting the plan of the country as otherwise would no doubt be attacked from the sky for very clear reasons.

COST OF WARSHIPS

The United States men-of-war are going to cost from $3,000 to $5,300 a ton, costs of warships having risen since pre-war days by between four and five hundred per cent. A battleship will cost now $71,000,000 or more, a destroyer $8,000,000. In Britain the increase has been about two and a quarter times, more in keeping with the rise in costs of other things. Warship building has become staggering to even the greatest powers, let alone the little ones which could ill afford a great battleship.

In armament a year is a very long year of material is very rapid. It is said Germany is replacing her four-year or five-year airplanes with new machines and that it is expected to spend even three-year-old planes in Germany before long.

How long can this peacetime festival of armaments continue the race? But somehow nations find the means to do the building and scrapping and rebuilding.

But such lessons are not for business men, who could not afford such methods fortunately not only those who want to build armaments but also those who do not want to build but have to do so for the sake of security.

CONCERNING MOTHER

The world might do without so many things,
But not the deep and sweet remembrings
Of Mother—
As we look back it seems she always knew
No matter what occurred, just what to do,
Come joy or bother—
And as we think of Her, the way she is today,
Dearer than any other,
The loving words we feel inclined to say
Seem futile things, because she surely knows
How our love grows—and grows!

EVERY DAY SHOULD BE "MOTHER'S DAY"

(Contributed)

"This year "Mother's Day" is Sunday, May 8th. It is a good day to start a new appreciation of mothers, but all the other days thereafter should be days in which to understand and cherish all mothers. One little kindness today, and one tomorrow, are worth more to her now than at the end of life a ton of granite on which you have etched the word "Mother."

Our annual "Mother's Day" is nothing new, for since olden times some instinct of the heart has always been expressing itself in some sort of Mother's Day observance. Not so very long ago, and even now in parts of England where the older customs hold, "Mothering Sunday" as it was called, was kept by all the lads and lasses away at service, who on that day came home with Mayflowers in their hands to sit awhile with Mother in the parish church and at the family table. The custom held until the widening world set greater distances between, and new ways elbowed out the old. And now the custom is growing up again.

As testimony to family solidarity, the observance of Mother's Day has valte. So many ways there are to separate the family—so few ways to keep it together. Brother has the boys' club, sister the sorority, father has the men's club and mother the league of women—excellent things in themselves, no doubt, but no match for the old fashioned family circle. Long evenings round the lighted lamp fostered qualities and insights of great worth to this country. It is no change for the better that reduces a home to just "sleeping quarters" and scatters our free activities abroad. That is one thing, perhaps, that Mother's Day says to its younger generations.

STARLING CARRYING A LIVE HALF-GROWN FROG was observed on Bridge Street recently. The frog proved a trifle heavy for the bird and, flying low, the incident was seen by a pedestrian. The bird became frightened and dropped the frog on the pavement, possibly returning later for its prize.

CIRCUS WAR IS INDICATED BY LARGE POSTERS ON BILLBOARDS proclaiming that these boards have been rented by the Ringling organization and fifty dollars fine will be paid for information as to anyone covering up the Ringling paper. Reminiscent of ancient days when two circuses in the same territory fought for billboard and barn space. As soon as one circus posted its bills the other circus sent a gang along to cover the first one's dates and convert the hoarding to its own use. Then another gang of billposters came along representing the first circus and covered the bills of the rival. This continued right up to the date of the show's appearance, and sometimes two gangs clashed in real warfare resulting in broken heads and many bruises. With three circuses visiting Ontario this summer looks as though there may be another billposter war.

LOOKING BACKWARD

GLEANINGS FROM OUR FILES OF BY-GONE YEARS

20 YEARS AGO

May 15th, 1918.

Mr. Thomas Montgomery, Reeve of Rawdon Township, and Warden of Hastings County, was a visitor in town today.

The Senior Ontario Baseball Club of this city has been organized for the season. Following are the officers: President, Col. R. D. O'Flynn; First Vice President, R. L. Hyman; Second Vice President, E. G. Blaycock; Sec.-Treas., William Thomson; Executive Committee, C. Jeffery, Dr. Robertson, Col. L. W. Marsh, A. P. Allen and D. Watkins; Managing Committee, W. Ferguson, W. Thomson and R. E. Colling.

Following are the officers of the Junior Ontario Baseball Club: Hon. President, Col. R. D. O'Flynn; President, William Thomson; First Vice President, Ed. Blaycock; Second Vice President, William Ormond; Management Committee, Walter Gervan, E. Geyer and W. Canning; Sec.-Treas., R. E. Colling.

Mr. William Carney, barrister, was in Napanee today on business.

Mr. Arthur DaCosha, who has been attending Queens college here left yesterday for Montreal. He will be kindly remembered by friends as a fine musician and a prince of good fellows.

The Rev. Amos Campbell and Mrs. Campbell have returned to their home here after spending the last six months with their son in Jamestown, N. Y., and Rochester, N. Y.

Mr. Fred Palen of this city has retired from service with the Grand Trunk Railway under the new pension scheme now in effect by the company. For thirty years he has been in the employ of the Grand Trunk Railway as a stationary engineer and pump man. A host of friends in this city will wish the genial old Englishman many more pleasant years of living retired in Belleville.

40 YEARS AGO

May 5th, 1898.

Mr. Willis Halliwell is spending his holidays in Stirling.

Mr. L. Mekelston is moving into his new store in Stirling.

Mr. and Mrs. never looked better and fruit trees give promise of a heavy yield.

A meeting of the Cricket Club will be held this evening at Hotel Quinte.

All the street sprinkling machines to do now is to collect his numerous bills and get the rust.

On her down trip this week the steamer Alexandria carried 28 horses which were consigned to England. They were purchased in Picton.

Mr. Paul Lakeside left for St. Louis today.

Mr. B. F. Dickens left today for Vancouver, B. C., where he will take up residence.

Mr. S. Nesbitt of Brighton, was in town today.

50 YEARS AGO

May 5th, 1888.

Mr. William Johnson is in Toronto attending a committee meeting in connection with the Methodist Church.

The ballast train is leaving gravel along the Pinnacle Street track. It is the intention of the Grand Trunk Company to put this road bed in first class condition.

The baseball situation looks like fair sounds this morning. The club is to pay $25 and make necessary improvements.

Mr. S. Potter is filling a long felt want by opening a shop here for the sale of flowers, plants and vegetables.

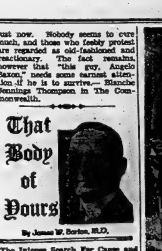
Mr. J. C. Christie and wife have left for Davy's Island to get the place in shape for the season.

Mr. R. M. Roy of Peterboro, formerly of Belleville, was a visitor in town today.

Millions of Miles by Rail

It once required three locomotives to carry The International Limited between Montreal and Toronto. Engines were changed at Brockville and Belleville. The giant Hudsons which have been in service for the past seven years run all the way from Montreal to Turnnio, H. C. Rochester, General Car Accountant, Canadian National Railways, told a Montreal audience recently. He used to be the proud owner of an engine for about 50,000 miles and then give it a general overhauling. As a result of improved methods, Mr. Rochester pointed out, the mileage between shoppings was extended to 60,000 and then to 70,000 miles. But the 5700's are running an average of 250,000 miles between general overhauls.

In the past seven years, the five types have covered a total of 140 times around the world.



Designed to handle a train of eight cars on the six-hour schedule between Montreal and Toronto with reasonable maximum of 10 busy days, their trainload has been gradually extended from 10 to 12 and 13 and now to 14 cars. Fourteen cars weigh 1,000 tons. Boosters on the trailing wheels assist in starting from stations.—Can.-Nat. Rys. Magazine.

Good Speech Lags Behind

It is a little surprising that, considering the really extraordinary mechanical achievements in recording sight and sound, so little progress has been made in the speech arts. Slovenly enunciation, incorrect pronunciation, and shallow, insincere characterization are, too common, the last named being more fairly imputed to the radio perhaps, than to the screen. Being more restricted, radio drama has developed types as well as mannerisms, those of the old-fashioned melodrama. Anyone over fifty must speak in a weak, quivering voice, all rural characters must talk their heads off, the heroine must use a throaty tremolo, and the children must all have a lisp. Nonsense!

o–o

In the course of one movie program, an Annapolis man talks enthusiastically of "athaletics," and a news commentator, describing a woman blacksmith, calls her a "familiy." (The people out of ten seem not to know that the smithy is the shop.) Radio announcers say "accidentally" and "incidentally so frequently that those is a question without an answer just now. Nobody seems to care much, and those who feebly protest are regarded as old-fashioned and reactionary. The fact remains, however that "this guy, Angelo Eaton," needs some earnest attention if he is to survive.— Blanche Jennings Thompson in The Commonwealth.

The Intense Search For Cause and Cure of Cancer

For those who have loved ones suffering with, or who have died of, cancer, it brings no comfort to know that while the cause of cancer is unknown, it can be cured in its earlier stages by the use of radium, X-rays, and surgery. What they cannot understand is why the cause of a disease that has afflicted man from the beginning of history has not been discovered. In these days when medical sciences are now being conquered. They cannot be blamed then if they wonder whether the search and work is being done with the hundreds of thousands of dollars annually spent on seeking the cause of cancer.

It will thus be a matter of satisfaction to read of the work being done by just one cancer research organization.— The British Empire Cancer Campaign. Lord Horder reports that last year's work showed that schemes of research were being conducted over a wide area, attention was drawn to the work of Dr. Alexander Haddow at the Royal Cancer Hospital from which it appeared that the application of tiny doses of certain cancer-producing chemicals would cause a definite cancer, and sometimes complete disappearance of tumors present in animals. This giving of small doses of a chemical within it large dose caused increase in growth and symptoms is not uncommon in medicine.

In the northern part of England Prof. W. L. Curtis and Dr. Frank Dickens also found the above facts to be true. These two scientific workers were also seeking to learn the effects of ultra short wireless waves. They have shown that the curative effects of these waves in the experimental treatment of cancer was brought about by the heat they manufactured within the tissues. The heat was of a special character as it could be controlled at will, the temperature to be raised to any desired level and kept for any length of time. By this method a high degree of success has been secured in the treatment of animal cancer.

"Every line of research that gave promise of success in the treatment of treatment—X-ray radium and surgery—received full and careful consideration," the report states.

When we remember that in the United States, Canada and Europe, in fact throughout the world, these careful and thorough investigations are going on we can feel hopeful the search for the cause of cancer and cure is being vigorously pushed.

FREE LANCE FIGHTERS

Appeals continue to be made to the Canadian Government on behalf of Canadians who have enlisted in the Spanish war and now find themselves prisoners of the enemy.

We do not want to appear hard-hearted about the predicament of any Canadian. But it strikes us that fellows who go looking for a scrap about what they asked for.

Several months ago the Canadian Government, quite properly, took a strong stand against the interference of Canadians subjects in a conflict that had nothing to do with this country.

Strenuous efforts were made to keep Canadians from going abroad to participate in the struggle. Accordingly, strict warnings were issued against doing so.

Then it seems pretty poor sportsmanship for these fellows, finding themselves in difficulties, should come whining to a Government which has warned and warned they have flouted.

If any of our people want to become soldiers of fortune let them be soldiers of fortune, but they cannot be good Canadians at the same time.

This would seem to be the proper moments for our Government to tell these people they have got themselves into a mess they will have to get themselves out.

Surely, however, Canadians are not expected to go to war to defend the friendship of a few misguided hot-heads. — Vancouver Sun.

DICTATORSHIP!

A picture sent out recently from Italy to be published here and printed in this country tells far more than is in the picture itself.

It is a snapshot taken while Signor Mussolini was in the act of giving to posthumously awarded medal to the widow of an Italian aviator killed in Africa.

Mussolini stands facing the camera. His chin is thrust out, his official frown is heavy on his brow, and his mouth is drawn down in the typical caricature of grief.

The widow, with Heaven knows what sorrow in her heart, also stands before Il Duce in deep mourning, her head is enveloped in a black veil, and her shoulders are bent in an attitude of hopelessness.

Just what can be done about it

PROTESTS HIS "KIDNAPPING"

Following his forcible eviction from Jersey City by police when he was attempting to make a May Day speech, Norman Thomas, Socialist leader of the United States, has protested his "kidnapping" to federal authorities. Three U. S. Congressmen are planning to go to Jersey City to bring a showdown on the ban on public speaking in that city. Mr. Thomas is shown here with his wife and sparkle at their Long Island home.

DOPE WOLVES IN SHEEP'S CLOTHING

Coming down the gangplank of the Italian steamer, Marco Polo, are pictured two suspects, second and from LEFT and extreme RIGHT) sifted as a friar and a nun, who were caught by authorities at Alexandria, Egypt, attempting to bring 44lbs. Canada and Europe, in fact throughout the world, these careful and thorough investigations is going on we can feel hopeful the search for the cause of cancer and cure is being vigorously pushed.

AFTER SIGNING OF BRITISH-EIRE PACT

London photographers snapped pictures of Eamon de Valera, prime minister of Ireland, as he emerged from No 10 Downing St., after the signing of the treaty of friendship between England and Eire. The pact signing marked the end of six-year trade war and the beginning of a period of amity after centuries of bitterness. While details of the accord were not made public, it was understood that Ireland would become Britain's chief war-time "larder" and at the same time agreeing to take more British manufactured goods.

The dead man is at least quiet in his grave, but she has been dragged out, with glee, to be made a mock heroic show and be part of a hoax which purports to be offered a meaningless bauble in lieu of a husband butchering for the furtherance of a blood thirsty ambition.

The poor woman does not even dare refuse the gift extended to her by the hand of the man responsible for her husband's destruction.

The picture is a tragic epitome of what dictatorship means to a people and does to a people.

The life, liberty and opportunity for happiness of no man remains his own.

Now even those he leaves behind after paying the final price of slavery are protected from heartless exploitation.

No wonder Patrick Henry said with passion, "As for me, give me liberty or give me death."—Detroit Free Press.

In the last twenty-five years, cancer has advanced from seventh to second place in causes of death.

DANGER IN THE MIST

By

Martha King Davis

The sheriff was smiling at me genially. You know, sometimes we choose to be blind and that's not always the best policy. Always best to be open above board. That makes me think—I've got to tackle Barnes, the close-mouthed old sinner. He's got to come across."

He disappeared, whistling, around the corner.

"That's Jack Judy," said Mac. "He's got his finger on the right key now, Barnes."

"You don't think—Barnes—?"

"No, Judy, like Barnes knows who shot Rhett Caldwell."

CHAPTER 11.

The Will

"Oh, you Barnes knew! And paid for that knowledge."

Poor old Barnes—trotting about in his pink pajamas, getting me a drink to quiet my nerves; poor old man—growing more bent and senseless as the weight of his knowledge pressed down upon him.

If he had only spoken out—told all that he knew right away at first! But he was the soul of loyalty and a promise was a promise.

Another thing of quite some importance happening that afternoon, for a lawyer from Boston came down bringing with him Rhett Caldwell's last will and testament!

And it was Sheriff Wilson who told us the contents of that will. Sheriff Wilson—a bit confused and surprised—hunting about in his mind, trying to fit this piece into his cleverly carved puzzle.

It would be a large estate—the lawyer had said—in spite of present deflated values. There were many public bequests, but the part in which we were interested related to the present household.

Two thousand dollars each to Barnes and Elias; fifty thousand to Miss Lydia; small bequests to other relatives, but—ten thousand to Grace Linnell!

"Grace Linnell!" Mac and I exclaimed in concert.

"Ye-up," nodded the sheriff. "Got to look into that. The residue—all real estate, etc., he left to his wife."

"More motive in the eyes of Miss Lydia," I said bitterly.

"So our friend Parker thinks, but I'm not worrying my head about that. Got to find out why that Linnel girl comes in for such a good-sized hunk. Say—you don't know what time Barnes will be back, do you? Elias says he's gone to town to see his sister."

"No, I don't. Sometimes he stays to supper and doesn't return until eight or so."

"Humph—too bad. I probably won't be able to see him tonight. He went off muttering to himself. As I looked at Mac, "That sure is queer about Grace Linnell, isn't it? Mr. Caldwell never seemed especially fond of her. So I—thought he rather disliked her."

"She didn't have any alibi that night," mused Mac thoughtfully. "Miss Lydia said she went in and waked her. Might have been out all during that time for all we know."

It was a new angle, and—I'll confess—I was rather glad of a new angle to work over.

I told Mac of Grace Linnell's exclamation at luncheon. "She seemed awfully worried and alarmed over the prospect of having her past exposed."

"Umm—she looks a bit pass-ty!"

"I'll bet she's got some shady old spots, and I for one, shan't weep if she's mixed up in this good and plenty. I think she's a snake in the grass. I know she hates Mrs. Caldwell and I never could see why. I suspect it might be jealousy over Dixon Murdock."

"Good Lord, girl!" laughed Mac. "Leave the dame her eye brows! You sure do like the lady a lot, don't you?"

And then—for no reason at all—I burst into tears.

Poor Mac—he just didn't know what to do. Of course, he thought it was his fault, but I shook my head. "I—I don't know why I'm crying—it's so—so—ily!"

"Look here, child—this thing is getting on your nerves. What say —we run in and see the last show tonight? They say it's a good movie."

"Oh, Mac—let's! I'm growing into a regular old crepe-hanging spook! I fear everything and everybody. I'm going to forget all about the whole tribe of Caldwell."

Oh dear—if we only had not gone! If we had only stayed home that evening!

But it's useless to regret now. If it hadn't happened then—it probably would have later. It was written in the schemes.

Mrs. Caldwell had dinner sent to her room that evening. I took in the tray and placed it on a side table. She was sitting at a small desk busily writing. She looked up and smiled at me with a murmured word of thanks, and I thought her eyes were a bit red and troubled.

Mr. Langford, the lawyer, was an overnight guest, and he tried facetiously to entertain the two at dinner, but it was plain to see that Miss Lydia was not listening and Grace Linnell, looking rather excited, hardly spoke and ate scarcely a mouthful.

It was a great relief to get away from the place, and Mac and I certainly enjoyed the show into town. It was a glorious night with a moon drifting high out of the white-fleecing clouds, and shimmering in silver waves across the harbor.

I smiled to myself. It did not seem possible that I could be Judith Marsden, riding along in a bumpy station wagon and happy as a lark just to be beside a certain young chauffeur.

I'd spent the summer before traveling abroad. There had been moonlight nights on the Mediterranean—beautiful gowns—men, charming and faultless in evening clothes. There had been a special young man in Paris—I thought I'd been happy, but now I'd not known the meaning of the word! Little silvers ran over.

Mac looked down. "Cold, Judy?" His—hers. I always have cold chills when I'm happy."

"Do you mean that? Are you really happy, Judy?"

"Cross my heart, mister."

"Ooh-suppose I hadn't landed this job with the Caldwells this summer?"

"Well—that would have been just too bad," I teased. "I expect there might have been another good-looking chauffeur."

"Say—woman—do you want to get dumped?"

"No, I want to live to tell my children about the time I played —" Good heavens! I'd "most said —about the time I played second maid."

"Played — with fire, Judy?" drawled Mac.

Um—umph—and—gee, burned. Look out there! Mind your driving mister. The lights of Broadway are approaching."

It was a good show but on the way out there was a tense chapter. For, who should bear down upon me but Mary Ann Hadley—a dear, gracious, classic!

I suddenly remembering that the Hadleys had a summer home somewhere in this vicinity.

"Judy! Judy darling!" she shrilled. "Whatever are you doing here?"

I felt Mac's amazed look upon us.

There, was just one thing to do and I did it. I drew back and said distantly—"I beg your pardon."

Mary Ann's eyes fairly stuck out of her head. "Why—why—"

"I think you are mistaken," I said, and I gave her an awful look and catching hold of Mac's arm, walked away.

"Say!" he puzzled. "That girl dig know you. She called you Judy."

"Oh, yes," I answered nonchalantly. "She knew me and she played me dirt once. She's not going to get a chance to do it again. She had her eye on you. Well, she didn't get it knocked down."

"Oh lord—you girls!" he laughed.

My heart resumed beating. It was a narrow escape. I'd have to find the whereabouts of the Hadley place and get in touch with Mary Ann. I couldn't risk another meeting like that.

I hustled Mac out to the car. Perhaps there were other precious friends summering in town. Better the atmosphere of the Point—safer, anyhow.

I was afraid Mac might ask me questions on the way but so I kept the conversation to the picture we had just seen. "Of course she wasn't big, was she?"

"Well—he sure ought to have known his own wife," drawled Mac. "Poor sap if he didn't."

Did the artist think she was the real wife? Luckily, there was plenty of argument to safely tide over the Mary Ann episode.

Mac left me on the back porch about eleven-thirty.

The last one in was supposed to lock the back door, but as no one ever knew if he were last, it was seldom fastened. There was a light in the kitchen. I pulled it off and started for the stairs in the darkness, when I noticed a faint glimmer from under the door to the butler's pantry.

Some one must have left the light on—or, was some one in there?

With a little thrill of nervous apprehension—I went to investigate. The swinging door pushed hard against something. What in the world—?

At last I got it open.

The something was a man's foot!

CHAPTER 12.

The Second Murder

And—stretched out, face downward as he had fallen—lay Barnes.

All the strength went out of me. I clung for a moment—petrified! Then I called—"Barnes! Barnes! Oh—what is the matter?" and took a step into the room. There was blood stain on his white shirt!

I ran to the back stairs and called to Elias—I ran to the back door and screamed for Mac.

Just reached the garage, and when He told me after, that he had he heard me, he had never known a sac fear as swept over him. "They've got her!" he thought. "They've got her!"

He and Elias arrived in the kitchen at nearly the same moment.

Poor Elias! She had been sound asleep. There she stood now, in her quite familiar white nightgown and cotton-flannel kimono. She was trembling so convulsively, she could not speak.

Mac did not shake me this time. He cried—"Judy, darling—are you alright?" and would have caught me in his arms.

But I pushed him toward the door to the pantry. "In there, Mac. It's Barnes—on the floor! —I think he's been murdered!"

Our alarm had aroused the household. They collected in the kitchen, Mr. Langford—the lawyer —shirt and trousers hastily donned; his gray hair rumpled and a wild, distracted look in his eyes; was querulously demanding to know what all the rumpus was about. But no one paid any attention to him. Miss Lydia—with white face and shaking voice, asked Mac to call the doctor. All the household seemed determined to have gone from her.

Grace Linnell absorbed just inside the door—her negligee drawn closely about her. "My——" she muttered under her breath, "we'll be murdered yet!"

But my eyes were fastened on Norma Caldwell. I noticed that, as on that first occasion, she was fully dressed. Her lips were drawn tightly together, and her wide eyes had in them again, that look of desperate fear.

Miss Lydia said—"Has Detective Parker been called?"

Mac shook his head. "I just got in touch with the sheriff and Dr. Sully."

Beef Heart "Steak" Dishes Are Economical and Good

By MRS. MARY MORTON
Menu Hint
Beef Heart "Steak"
Boiled Potatoes
Green Beans, Fresh or Canned
Lettuce, Green Onion, Radish Salad
Shortcake : Coffee or Tea

This meat dish is economical and a change from the usual, so try it. The shortcake may be made of any fresh fruit or canned. Drain the fruit well if you use the canned, of course. I am giving you recipe because it may help you out some day as it did me. I made pancakes for breakfast one morning recently and there was some batter left over. My recipe for pancakes is one egg, well beaten; one cup sour milk and cream, mixed; one cup flour sifted with one-half teaspoon baking soda, one teaspoon baking powder, one-half teaspoon salt and one teaspoon sugar. I beat all the ingredients together with the egg beater, adding one teaspoon of melted butter at the last. To the left over batter, which was kept cool in the refrigerator, I added one tablespoon melted butter, one quarter teaspoon baking soda, one teaspoon baking powder and flour enough to make a soft dough. I rolled this, then split and buttered it, serving fresh and sweetened strawberries between the halves and on top. It made a very good shortcake dough.

BEEF HEART "STEAK" — Cut out cartilage and trim off fat from one large beef heart. Put fat in frying pan and let it get hot. Cut meat into half-inch slices. Pound flour in slices for dredging and brown in fat with a sliced onion. Add hot water and simmer until done, twenty to forty-five minutes. It makes a delicious gravy and the meat resembles round steak.

FACTS AND FANCIES
Type of Nurse to Engage

If illness should come to your family—or an accident occur—you naturally call your doctor at once. He advises you to get a nurse. But do you know what type of nurse to engage? One of the current types of nursing services available in your community? Is the cost of a nurse? To help guide you in case of such an emergency Betsy Ross, registered nurse, gives this information in Good Housekeeping.

In all cases of serious illness your doctor will recommend a graduate registered nurse, says Miss Francis. Among the different types are surgical nurses, who are specially trained to care for obstetric cases; Registered nurses who are particularly interested in maternity work; Nurses who have had special training in communicable disease work; Nurses who have taken post graduate work in mental illness and institutions. Nurses are extremely fond of infants and young children.

You can engage registered nurses on an eight, twelve or a twenty-four-hour duty basis. When a patient is desperately ill and requires constant care and attention, three eight-hour—or two twelve-hour—duty nurses will be needed. The price of this service in some communities may be as low as $8 a day for each nurse, in others as high as $10 a day. If the patient is ill in a hospital there will be an additional charge for the nurse's meals. Also nurses caring for children with contagious diseases or mental cases often charge a dollar or two extra a day. The cost of a registered nurse on a twenty-four-hour duty basis for a patient ill at home ranges from $6 to $12 a day.

Miss France points out that there are many times when a registered nursing service will prove satisfactory. This applies to cases where the patient has to be given some professional care daily or less often but does not require professional service continuously. To meet this need you can engage a graduate registered nurse to come to your home by appointment as any time of the day, where prices from $2 the first hour and less for the following.

Spiced Nuts

Sprinkle nuts with salt in the proportion of two teaspoons of salt to one pound of shelled nuts. If peanuts or walnuts, blanch them before salting. Drain nuts thoroughly and put layer in a frying basket. Plunge into fat heated to 390 degrees Fahrenheit (or until cube of bread brown in about a minute). Cook until nuts are golden brown. Remove from frying kettle and drain; put a few at a time into a small pan containing one tablespoon sugar, one tablespoon cinnamon, a dash of cayenne and one-fourth teaspoon salt. Shake nut meats in the mixture, cooking well. Remove from pan to drain and cool. Continue until all nuts have been spiced.

Learn to Be Good Wives

Toledo, Again, there is a school where girls between the ages of 16 and 18 are taught how to be good wives.

They receive lessons and lectures from 8 a. m. to 4 p. m., on household management, dietetics, weaving, sewing, cooking, dress making and embroidery. In addition they receive instruction on the care of babies, the art of being charming, the correct manner of entertaining guests, given this information in Good Housekeeping.

Those who complete the course doctor will recommend a graduate nurse, says Miss France.

PRIZES AWARDED SEWING CLASSES

Fifty Young Enthusiasts Progress at Dundas St. Mission

Fifty small sewing enthusiasts were enrolled in the Sewing Classes held since January 1st in Dundas Street Mission. Here they learned the principles of plain sewing and by their diligent application, under encouraging teachers, had become quite skilled needlewomen at the conclusion of the course.

Yesterday prize winners received awards and a display of work was held in the afternoon. From the neat stitches of the six year old beginners to the fine embroidery of the advanced students, the work showed care and progress. There were aprons in faction cotton nicely embroidered, colorful print aprons, bloomers, sewing bags, patches and handkerchiefs that had been completed during the weekly sewing hour held each Wednesday.

There was a treat of ice cream yesterday for the Sewing School members who had a jolly party after four o'clock.

The prize winners were:
Beginners: June Coore, Barbara Rushlow, Clara Page, Verne Warren, Dorothy Cerow, Lorna Agnew, Ruth Hall; Betty Lewis 2; Leona Bunnett, 10; Margaret Taylor, 10; Marion Brown, 11.

Bags: Madaline Claus, 10; Mary Mowery, 9; Fay Rushlow, 10; Kathleen Nolan, 10; Betty Calberry, 11.

Bloomers: Violet Anderson, 10.

Aprons: Doris Brown, 15 years; Annie Phillips, 13; Florence Daly, 13.

The teachers who volunteered their services to conduct the girls during the session were: Mrs. Levi Graham, Mrs. Orland Hall, Mrs. E. White and C. White, Mrs. F. Daly, Mrs. W. Styles and Miss Reeves.

Reading To Older Children

Psychologist Says Custom Promotes Comradeship

By GARRY C. MYERS, PH. D.
Head Department Parent Education, Cleveland College, Western Reserve University.

OFTEN, IN this column, I have urged parents to read to their children, beginning before the child is two years old and continuing more or less indefinitely. Many parents write me to say they have followed my advice; others that they have read to their children on their own initiative . . . Even in those good families in which there is considerable reading to one another, I think that it is the finest kind of practice. It is very refreshing to hear from parents who have found things they do with their children.

A great many boys and girls in the fifth, and also in the sixth, junior high, senior high, even in college, fail in the subject of reading, science, or history. But they really fly fall in reading or in any part of the subject as such. The texts they have are too hard for them. These students may have been taught incarcerally they try.

Parents of these children may do most for them by inducing them to practice reading to them that every day from some easy reading material. Yet these children may not register progress at once, right away. How may we help such a student with his work?

Let us have him bring home his books. Then let us have him read all his assignments aloud to him, helping now and then to interpret hard parts, and to turn each paragraph into a sentence, or two of his own language.

Heavy Home Assignments

Even the reader of average ability may have so heavy a program of home assignments as to be overwhelmed. We can help him by reading some of the assignments to him. It's the suggestion, by the procedure that we care and wish to help him in his hard struggle. We may do most to make him master courage and keep up effort. And when we cultivate such friendships we have won a companionship with our son or daughter that is very delightful.

Also we can be very careful not to express disapproval over his low grades or rebuke him for his failures. We shall try to help him gain success, however small, and celebrate with him his victory. If a brother or sister gets on better at school than he does, we shall avoid making comparisons, even by breathing, looks or gestures. Moreover, we shall try to lead the other brother or sister not to gloat over his or her successes, but to be very considerate of the slower student's progress.

It takes a deal of wisdom, skill and self-control to be a sympathetic, helpful parent to a child who is slow at school. Let us try hard to put ourselves in his place and feel a little as he feels about the problems facing him.

What Tetra Ethyl Gas Did to Workman's Body

Man Loses Hair After Several Days' Work With Spray of the Liquid

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

WE HAVE HAD several communications asking whether there is any harm in tetra ethyl lead gasoline, especially as to whether it causes lead poisoning.

When it was introduced into commercial use, there was a great deal of fear that it might cause some trouble, but this has proved to be unfounded and careful investigation have revealed no cases of serious industrial poisoning from its use. However, it does appear that in some cases it may have an injurious influence on the skin, especially the hair.

A man aged 47 who had been working at an automobile mechanic for fifteen years, did a job which occupied him several days, in which he had to get under an automobile using an atomizing gasoline through a spray gun for removing grease. He naturally got a good deal on his person. Three days after this, all the hair on the left eyebrow, and a good deal of the hair on the right eyebrow, and most of the hair of the scalp came out. Within two months, he had lost all the hair on his body. No other evidence of intoxication or lead poisoning or disease of any kind was found.

Experiments on Animals

In making experiments on animals it was found that tetra ethyl lead will cause hair to disappear in areas where it is repeatedly applied. It starts a great back in about three weeks, and is fully regrown within seven weeks. This is contrary to the experience of the worker cited above, in which the hair never returned.

When tetra ethyl lead is repeatedly applied to the skin for such a period as a half-hour to an hour, it causes no subjective sensations, but within two or three days some desquamation of the skin in that area appears, leaving white glistening patches.

Reports of the kind we have given above are not numerous, but the idea seems plain that those who are using this substance should wear gloves and protect the hair of their heads from contact.

There is no danger to the driver of the automobile, from fumes that come in contact with the gasoline. There is no danger from fumes.

A Reader Who Goes Barefoot

The following letter from a reader seems to me interesting and valuable:

"I was glad of your insertion in yesterday's paper to the effect that wearing sneakers, and going barefoot are conducive to pedal health: you confirm one of my pet theories. However, several years' experience in Vermont have also convinced me that there is serious danger in an ABRUPT change from stiff, heavy shoes to flexible soles, or none. It is not true that feet weakened by constant confinement in heavy-soled shoes are liable to arch injuries if these soles are suddenly and completely abandoned." I have thought that a word of warning along this line might be in order now or soon, when so many will be making spring changes.

"You may be interested to know that I still go barefoot at all seasons as much as the circumstances of my calling and the limitations of the weather permit, and have never been troubled with any kind of foot trouble except 'athlete's foot,' which I contracted and bothered me since I found out a few years ago what it was. I am 44 years old."

Salary Not Big Enough To Marry

Should Young Folk Get Engaged Under Circumstances?

By VIRGINIA LEE

A GIRL writes me that she and her boy friend, who have known each other for six years, want to become engaged, as they are very much in love with each other. However the boy is not making a good salary, and does not see any hope of better prospects at present, so he tells the girl that he would be better off single.

"He is very firmly set on my not getting any other husband," she writes. "Would you advise me as to whether or not we should get engaged or wait?"

So many boys and girls are in the same fix you are, my dear. It seems to me if you love each other and have confidence in each other's ability to be engaged, or at least to go together, working and hoping for better days, you can encourage each other, and as two people can do a lot better than one, you can put your two heads together and try to figure out ways and means of bettering yourselves.

I know young couples who have done this and have helped each other considerably in bettering themselves.

If you feel that you cannot be happy unless you are married, you will soon be over and you can marry.

JOSEPHINE: I am afraid there is nothing you can do. The boy friend with you a while, evidently decided you did not satisfy him as a companion for all time, and broke off the friendship. That is his privilege. If his card to be left over "never to see her again"? He feels "terribly" when he sees her out with this other boy he writes, and he sees her quite frequently, as she divides her time between them.

I would hardly think such a little flirt was worth waiting for, to tell you the truth, my boy. She keeps you in a constant state of unhappiness. I doubt very much if she is worth your agony of mind. Few girls would be. I would think you could find a girl nearer home, and considerable self-fishness, too.

Why don't you find another girl and go with her and see if you can't forget this first one? It would be more sensible, I think, provided it could be done.

Helping Failing Children

Don't Get Emotional Psychologist Tells Parents

By GARRY C. MYERS, PH. D.

Head, Department Parent Education, Cleveland College Western Reserve University

MANY A BOY or girl at school or college is so near the line of passing that a little extra effort now would make him safe.

Now we parents, feel so strongly about the child who is near to failing that we often are disposed to do him more harm than good. If we get emotional about the matter, play on the child's heartstrings, and burden him with exhortations; if we reveal to him that we primarily are selfish in our interest lest our pride should be wounded by his failure, we may actually prove responsible for his failure. But if, on the contrary, we are able to discipline ourselves so as to do just the right thing to help him work more hopefully, eagerly and effectively, we may contribute to his victory. Much will depend on how we make him feel about the matter.

If after carefully studying the child's problem we find he faces hopeless failure, we shall wisely prepare ourselves to meet the consequence any help him to do so.

Whether we have reason to expect failure in the child or not, if at the close of school he has failed to make the grade, we shall try to act sensibly—as many parents don't. Therefore, we shall not rebuke him nor shame him. He already is discouraged and disgusted with himself. We shall help him to look hopefully ahead.

Summer School or Tutor

After going over the matter with the school we may resolve to have him take summer school or to have a tutor for him. In case a tutor is employed, let us hope that she or he will help the child find rock bottom in the subject or subjects in which he has had difficulty, and build therefrom. If, for example, he is in fifth grade and failed in arithmetic he probably will read well only from materials of first or second grade difficulty. Then he should be set to reading from nothing harder, but from books and magazines which will appeal to him. No sense in setting him to read from a fifth grade book.

Enjoying success in reading so easy materials he may gradually come forward. Yet it may be too much to expect him to move several grades forward in reading in so short a while. Be happy if he registers noticeable progress. Then with the help of a teacher who will understand him, you can assist him in a similar fashion next fall. It will work almost like magic if you can induce him to read aloud to a much younger child, his baby brother or sister.

Your sole purpose will be to set the stage so he can achieve and enjoy success and as a result, regain self-respect and self-confidence. In some instances, the best procedure would be to make no more mention of school or studies until next fall.

Bride, Attendants Step Out in Filmy Gowns

Even Traditional Wedding Finery May Be Made to Fit a Modest Budget

Cotton lace and rayon net wedding gown, left; flower girl in peach silk marquisette over rayon taffeta; bridesmaids in powder blue silk marquisette over rayon taffeta slips, blue rayon velvet girdles.—Photo Courtesy Good Housekeeping.

THERE SURELY never was a time when so much was done for brides as now. Shops are ready to advise them as to the wedding outfit even down to the smallest details. They don't have to worry their pretty heads over a thing.

The bride can go qualnt in a Winterlaider gown; she can be flowerlike in soft colors; but the white or ivory bridal dress is still top-notch for spring and summer brides of 1938.

Our bride can wear the traditional satin if she feels that is her choice, and she has been looking forward to it all her life and can't take anything else. But she can also be married in net, lace, or organdie. Some of the sweetest gowns we've seen have been of net, with old-fashioned bonnets crowning the bride's charming head, veils hanging from the bonnets.

Plenty of Variety

If, however, your bride has gone in for having her hair dressed high on her head, she may find it will not with the veil attached to the bandeau. And her top curls may be decorated with posies, real or artificial. Plenty of variety in bridal wear, as in that of the rest of womankind, you see.

For the bride on a budget we show all the beauty of a traditional wedding gown on medieval lines in cotton and rayon lace and rayon net. Attached to the lace jacket is a train of net; remove this, and there is an evening gown, the skirt layers of net, the bodice white rayon satin.

Peach and blue is the color scheme for this wedding party. The little flower girl is exquisite in peach silk marquisette over rayon taffeta. The bridesmaids are in powder blue silk marquisette over rayon taffeta slips, blue rayon velvet girdles, forming the girdles.

Hats for bridesmaids are wide leghorns or horsehair straws, as usual. They are worn back on the head, however, as is the vogue; and they often have long veils or silk ribbon streamers. Flower tosques look very this season, also, for bridal attendants.

REDNERSVILLE W. I.

The April meeting of the Rednersville Women's Institute was held Thursday at the Library room, this meeting being the re-election of officers.

As the president was absent, Mrs Earl Onderdonk took charge of the meeting, opening with the ode followed by all repeating the Lord's prayer. Fifteen members were present. The secretary then gave her report of the past work, followed by the social convener's report.

This being the re-election of officers, Mrs Roy Williamson was called upon to take charge of this part. The officers elected as following:

President—Mrs. Mabel Onderdonk

1st. Vice Pres. — Miss Audra Brickman

Social Vice Pres. — Mrs. Roy Brickman

Assistant Social Vice Pres.—Miss Ruth Williamson, Mrs. Ward and Miss K. Giles

Secretary Treasurer—Mrs. Kenneth Green

Assistant Sec. Treas.—Mrs. Allan Weese

District Director—Mrs. Clifford Peck

Auditors—Mrs. Ralph Redner and Miss Margaret Pole.

This brought the meeting to a close with repeating the Mizpah Benediction.

PROBLEM OF KISSING WORRIES YOUNG GIRL

By VIRGINIA LEE

"DEAR VIRGINIA LEE I have been reading your column for a long time and I have been wondering if you can help me make a decision. I cannot decide whether or not a girl should let a man kiss her or not the first time he takes her out, that is providing she has known him before and he knows her.

"Of course if he is a comparative stranger the situation is different. I live in a small town and have difficulty in making friends with men. Recently a rather experienced kid who works in the same office with me, asked me to go out with another couple. We occupied the back seat and I proably made the mistake of 'coddling' when I didn't intend to let him kiss me. He was very angry and I know he has told all his friends about me, thereby spoiling my chances. I can't seem to find out from other girls whether or not I did the right thing. Last year, in a larger town, I made the mistake of 'necking' too long and too much, and the young man later hated me just as much as this one apparently does for hurting his pride. Do you have any hard and fast rules for someone who has difficulty in knowing what to say and do when around men?

"Your case just goes to show the futility of trying to please everyone, my dear. I believe in a girl living her own principles about this necking business and sticking to them. In that case she at least pleases herself. Why a girl should be expected to give her lips to a boy with whom she has been spending the evening, I am sure I don't know. She needn't be a prude but kissing is something one saves for those of whom one is fond, and I do not see how a girl can help making herself cheap when she kisses every boy with whom she goes out. Boys do tell each other about the girls they date and I am sure the nicer boys do not want to keep company with such girls. How do you think the boy will feel some day marry will feel if he knows you neck and kiss all the boys? Maybe modern boys expect that sort of thing, but I don't think so. Seems to me they would hate to think the girl they love has been kissed and hugged by many different men.

No Hard and Fast Rules

As to conversation, there are no "hard and fast" rules. Different men like to talk about different things. If you are going out with a man you do not know very well, talk about generalities at first—the weather, shows, sports, books, music, people you both know—until you find out what interests him most. Try to start him talking and then be a good listener, but don't make him feel that he has to do all the talking. When you know you are going to have difficulty in talking to your companion, make a mental list of things to talk about so that you will seem at ease.

V. F. says they are three girls in her home and their parents object to them going out on a night when all three together, and if they are not allowed out they must be in by ten o'clock. The three are 16, 17, and 18 years old respectively. They feel very much enslaved and cannot see why their parents are so strict.

Three attractive young girls are quite a responsibility for a couple of parents, dear girls. You'll realize that more when you are bringing up your own daughters.

As you grow older you will be allowed more liberty, so why not show your parents that you appreciate their care of you and not make it harder for them by being rebellious?

SONG

She's somewhere in the sunlight strong,
Her tears are in the falling rain,
She calls me in the wind's soft song,
And with the flowers she comes again.

You bird is but her messenger,
The breeze her sigh, the sea her river;
Yes! sun and moon are sent by her,
And every wistful waking star.

Cut into squares and serve on lettuce.

FACTS AND FANCIES

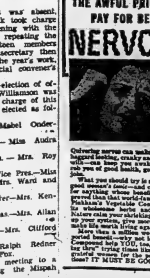
Iron in Bread

By James A. Tobey, Dr. P. H.

ALTHOUGH the full-grown human body has only a very small amount of iron, about one-tenth of an ounce, this mineral is essential to life and health. Most of the iron in the body is concentrated in the blood, where it largely forms the hemoglobin of the red cells the carriers of oxygen. When the iron supply gets too low, anemia usually results.

A proper supply of iron in the body can be maintained only if the individual consumes foods that provide at least eight milligrams of iron a day. For best all-around nourishment, 12 milligrams, or about 1-2500th of an ounce, are desirable.

Common foods vary in the amounts of iron that they contain, but more important still, they vary in their iron values. Thus, some foods may have fairly large amounts of iron, but only a small portion of it can be utilized by the body.



Bread is not generally considered as rich in iron, and yet the iron in bread is almost completely absorbed by the body. Thus, if six slices of white bread are eaten daily, the body will obtain from this one food a little over one milligram of the eight milligrams of iron needed. Whole wheat bread contains on the average about twice as much iron as white bread, while rye bread is intermediate between the two.

The chief function of bread in the diet is to furnish an excellent source of necessary food energy, together with valuable tissue building proteins, but its contribution of iron into the diet, while small is far from negligible.

TODAY'S GARDEN-GRAPH

By DEAN HALLIDAY

Released by Central Press Association

WHEN YOU fortunate enough to receive an Easter plant of tulips, hyacinths or daffodils? If so, do not discard the plant after it has finished blooming. While such a plant should not be forced for bloom again indoors it will do very well if planted out in the garden. Continue to water the plant after is has finished blooming, until the leaves start to change color; then gradually withhold water until the leaves are yellow. Then, as shown in the accompanying Garden-Graph, lay the pot on its side until the soil dries out and becomes powdery.

When this stage is reached the bulbs can be planted out in the garden, or they can be cleaned and stored in a cool place until fall, when they can be planted outdoors along with other bulbs.

Readers who can remember their grandmothers' gardens will be glad to know that interest in the old-fashioned roses is reviving. They are being shown once more in flower exhibits and are lovely in the garden, when planted in combination with such old favorites as lavender. The moss rose, the cabbage cinnamon and the dog rose are all old stand-bys.

Leprosy Is Being Wiped Out

Segregation Policy Has Made It Rare Disease

By LOGAN CLENDENNING, M. D.

I HAVE JUST been talking to a young man who accompanied nine lepers to the U. S. government sanitarium for lepers near New Orleans. I think it is probably not generally known that the government maintains such an institution. These lepers were all collected in California and about half of them had escaped from the institution. Most of them were Mexicans, as a large proportion of lepers in the United States are.

The idea of leprosy to most people is that of an ancient biblical disease which has long since disappeared from the earth. As a matter of fact, we have a good many lepers in the United States all the time. Of course, the idea of leprosy is one that brings horror because it is supposed to be very contagious by contact.

I never will forget the first case I ever saw, which was in Boston. The patient had been a cook in a household for several months, and when that household discovered that she had leprosy they were the worst frightened people I have ever seen. And yet none of them contracted leprosy and, as a matter of fact, in temperate climates it is hardly contagious at all.

I understand there are always about 25 or 30 cases in New York and they are more or less at large, and yet there is no well-substantiated record of a person's contracting the disease in New York or its vicinity. In tropical climates, however, apparently leprosy is more contagious. Around the Gulf of Mexico and in Florida, Louisiana and Texas, the disease spreads although feebly.

Almost Wiped Out

In former years in Hawaii there were over a thousand lepers and about a third of them had become infected in the family circle. By rigorous segregation in an institution of the patients, the disease has been nearly entirely wiped out in the islands.

These methods of segregation have made leprosy a rare disease compared to what it was in the Middle Ages. Indeed leprosy may be said to be important in history as the cause of the five hospital movement. The first hospitals established in Europe were lazarettos or leper houses. Certain lepers, wandered the countryside, living in miserable huts, far away from other habitation and warning of their approach by ringing a bell the Lazarus bell.

When the movement to segregate them in hospitals began, it grew very rapidly, so that there were 220 of them in England, and over 2,000 in the Hotel Dieu, the place of God's hospitality, in France.

How to Gain Rhythmic Grace

Shirley Temple

Early learned bodily grace .

By JULIET SHELBY

Central Press Writer on Beauty

CROWN PRINCESS JULIANA of Holland will undoubtedly start having her baby daughter Beatrix trained in the courtliness that becomes a queen as soon as she is old enough. It is necessary that even a very young princess know how to walk correctly, courtsey and use her arms, head and hands with grace and charm.

Even though we are none of us princesses it would have been a great thing for us if we could have had the early training that the little Dutch princess will have. This sort of training will keep one from being awkward, fumbling and ill at ease. All actresses have to learn these rules of bodily control, and attractive and beautiful women are masters of them.

If you have a young child teach it to walk like an Indian, with her feet parallel. And encourage her to go skating as soon as she is old enough. This is wonderful for body control and grace. Rhythmic and folk dancing are also excellent. Shirley Temple learned all these rules as a very small child, and they will make her graceful throughout her life.

There are a few rules, however, that are corrective of awkwardness for both young and old, and it's never too late to begin. Before starting to walk get the right stance by facing the wall and putting your toes, abdomen and the tip of your nose against it. With your arms raised to shoulder height, bend the elbows so that they will also be flat against the wall. When you start walking, your ear, shoulder, hip and instep all should be in a straight line. Always lead with your thigh, bringing your heel down first, not very hard (clumping is never attractive) then roll your weight onto the ball of your foot. Follow the rules for children and keep your feet in a straight line. Imagine that you are balancing something on your head.

Take Reading Lessons

To sit down correctly remember to put one foot a little nearer to your chair than the other one. Throw your weight onto that foot and sit straight down with your hands relaxed. The best position for your hands when seated is either in your lap or with one arm relaxed on the arm of your chair. When you are rising from the chair, push up with your back foot and your weight will go on to your forward foot. This will give you perfect balance, and it will not give the awkward effect of hoisting yourself out of the chair.

Another good tip is to take dancing lessons. Just regular modern ballroom dancing will do wonders for your physical poise. You will get a rhythmic swing to your whole carriage, and as you become a better and better dancer you will lose all that sense of being all hands and feet that is so devastating to your self-assurance. You will soon find that with a graceful posture and dancing feet you will be hard to stop.

EVEN THOUGH YOU'RE NOT A PAPERMAKER

YOU do not need to be an expert to select the best bathroom paper. Examine a roll of NORTHERN Tissue. Note that it is completely wrapped. Then examine the paper itself—soft, white, absorbent and pure. Northern is such high quality paper because it is made entirely from pure cellulose, and because of its exclusive "linenizing" process. Yet this fine bathroom paper costs no more than you are now paying.

Smartly Tailored Slacks Are Preferred for Sports

Florence Rice

By Copical Press

SLACKS almost drifted out of the picture a season or two ago. But they came back with "vim and vigor" during the last two winter resort seasons, and are now more popular than ever.

Florence Rice, whose father is a famous sports writer, and commentator, and who is herself fast making an enviable name for herself in pictures, has adopted a slacks costume for her daily game of badminton.

Florence's trousers are fairly wide but well tailored; her jacket is an eton with long sleeves and a single link button fastening. Contrasting colored shirt with wide collar and revers makes a stunning blouse to wear under this jacket.

Style Whimsies

Washable summer jacket costumes—wash suits—will be seen everywhere this summer.

Cottons for active hours—meaning play and sports—and silks for lounging— house coats, and negligees—seem to be the order of milady's day.

Small gold scrolls with lov. sonnets engraved upon them are the latest Paris lapel ornaments. They are the work of Renee Schnerb, are the work of Renee Schnerb, who is also showing a gold bust of a French soldier (poilu) in 1914 uniform, enameled blue and red. Colored enameled flowers copied exactly from nature are featured by Madame Gease for the same purpose.

7000 GUNS NEEDED

It sets forth that the Inglis Company will manufacture Bren light machine guns in Canada under the terms of a contract which has been dealt with by the inter-departmental committee on the control of profits on government contracts. The contract will result in very considerable benefits to Canadian industry and labor. Owing to the large armament program in England, it was not possible otherwise to obtain an early supply of machine guns.

Department to Own Guns

The Department of National Defence will purchase and retain ownership of all special machines and tools required. A number of these lines formerly utilized in the production of Ross rifles and now in possession of the Department will be used in manufacturing operations not requiring the utmost precision, the terms of the contract provide for field department control of expenditures and production costs.

"The need of modern machine gun support was recognized some time ago, and the ex-Austins tests carried out under the auspices of the war office were carefully followed by the experts of the Department. The opinion is that the Bren gun is the superior weapon amongst the many light machine guns tested.

"The establishment in Canada of a plant for the manufacture of these guns is of great strategic importance."

Confirmation by Company

Toronto, May 3.—(CP)—Officials of The John Inglis Company confirmed today an order had been received for manufacture of the Bren gun, a light machine-gun with which the British army is being equipped.

Beyond confirming the announcement by the National Defence Department at Ottawa, company officials would not go.

Light In Weight.

The Bren light machine gun was invented in Czechoslovakia and came to the notice of the British military authorities some years ago. Its weight gives it an initial advantage over the Lewis gun which, during and since the war, has been the infantry arm for weapons of this character. The Bren gun weighs 21½ pounds, when carrying one fully-loaded magazine.

Its rate of fire—from 500 to 600 rounds a minute—is slightly greater than that of the Lewis gun, while it is without the heavy air-cooling barrel which the latter possessed. The Bren barrel differs in few respects from that of the ordinary short muzzle Lee Enfield rifle, beyond the tubular muzzle extension whose function it is to conceal the flash.

Few Stoppages in Fire.

Extensive tests over a period of years by the British war office established that stoppages, chiefly the low proportion of stoppages in fire and the rapidity with which such stoppages could be cleared.

The Bren may be fired from a bipod for ground work, or from a sliding tripod for anti-aircraft work. The magazines are almost semi-circular, as contrasted with the flat pannets of the Lewis gun, and are inserted much after the fashion of cartridge clips of ordinary small arms. The cartridges are the service .303 calibre.

The war office has adopted the Bren gun for infantry unit, but not so far, for aircraft.

COURAGE SUPREME

for a longer period of time.

"That is not the quality of courage possessed by Christ, yet He was possessed of a dominant physical courage. His very fearlessness came from a calm heart," the speaker said.

The unflinching courage of Christ was revealed in many of His followers such as Luther and Niemoeller, men who defied their enemies and said, "Here I am, take me". It revealed itself in His very indifference to conventional morality, for He ignored the conventionality of the church. He shocked them on the Sabbath and social questions. He ate and drank with sinners until He was called a drinker. He was not that, but He was shunned, an outcast, and left alone.

Courage of Christ

His was a higher courage, continued Dr. Kerr, that born in the unseen, the imperceptible, a spiritual courage that transcends self-respect and sometimes self-control.

Urging his listeners to take more confidence in themselves and their work, Dr. Kerr asked them "not to be fearful".

Fear is only faith in the wrong thing. There is more fear in the world today than ever before, fear of church, of country; of our children, of ourselves, and our fear of life is greater than that of death."

As this synod closes," the speaker concluded, "may this be our prayer. That the greatest of all victories, an unfear what failures, be ours. Make us like Jesus, so that when our people see our courage, they will take knowledge that we have indeed been with Him".

ECONOMIC STATE

ture for France in his brief radio announcement last night of his government's decision.

"The truth is," he declared in measured tones which failed to conceal his emotions, "that our economic life is in a very bad condition; that legitimate profit is tending to disappear; that partial unemployment is increasing in every branch of industry; that our trade balance is imporerishing us; that our production figures are a humiliation for all Frenchmen.

In addition to unfailing means of employment in the arms industry, revaluation was designed to Fair the following results:

Results Foreseen

1. Increase the government credit by permitting the government to wipe out through its gold profits a large portion of its debt to the bank of France. The government's debt to the bank now total 40,300,000,000 francs.

2. Start the wheels of industry turning by reducing the price of French good in foreign markets and building up export trade.

3. Loosen credit by making investments safe through a currency low enough in value to be stable.

4. Attract new money to France from tourists whose purchasing power will be increased.

$1,054,057 SAVED

from the railways. This was chiefly wheat traffic.

$1,054,057 in Savings

Col. Biggar then proceeded to review a memorandum on co-operation between the Canadian National and Canadian Pacific Railways submitted yesterday by the joint co-operative committee of "56" the two companies.

Of the total savings effected or to be effected by co-operative agreements two thirds or $1,054,057 were effected by arrangements other than line abandonments. These included joint switching, joint use of facilities, consolidation of staffs and pooling of trains.

Out of 63 reports made by the joint co-operative committee 15 related to line abandonments and involved agreements to abandon a total of 615 miles of line at an average saving of $615 per mile. Twelve reports dealt with other measures of co-operation involving the estimated saving of $1,054,057.

Abandonment of Lines

The Canadian National had 15 applications involving abandonment of 329 miles of line and an estimated annual saving of $296,000 or $843 a mile. The board refused 10 other applications for abandonment of 309 miles of track at an estimated saving of $196,000 or $635 per mile. Five other applications were pending which involved abandonment of 84 miles at an estimated annual saving of $50,000 or $595 per mile.

The C.P.R. had not supplied full data of money savings on such abandonments. Four applications from that company had been approved and involved abandonment of 63 miles of track. One had been approved in part by the board in permission to abandon 13 out of a proposed 29 miles. One application for abandonment of 23 miles has been refused.

Estimate $44,000,000 Total

Senator Beaubien said officials of the railways had estimated $44,000,000 could be saved by co-operation. The committee should find out why it had not been done. If it was because economies on a larger scale would "are been injurious to the public the committee should know about it.

DEAN OUT MONTH ,

Hurler For Cubs Has a Sore Arm And Needs Rest

(Associated Press Sports Writer)

Behind the scenes in St. Louis it seems more than likely that Sam Breadon and Branch Rickey are snickering up their sleeves today.

The two o'em probably are taking a quick look at St. Louis Cardinals' bank book, then glancing toward Chicago and Paul Wrigley's worried brow. And if they can keep from snickering at the set-up, then they have real self control, indeed.

For the bank books shows an entry of $185,000 which came to the Cards from the Cubs for Dizzy Dean, who, for all his pitching class, was a large headache for the Gas House Gang bosses.

Now that pictures piece of pitching bric-a-brac, the Dean right arm, is showing signs of wear at the end of the 3-ray yesterday showed Diz will have to take a month off to get it fixed up.

There isn't the slightest indication that Breadon and Rickey know anything about that condition when they wrapped Old Diz up and sent him to Windy City. But the fact remains that from the time the Cards shipped Dean to the Cubs, one-and-only hasn't been much more impressive than "losing pitcher" Monday's Dean, the Cubs' preserve at all.

He went six innings his first time out, and tired; he looked good in his second start; he lasted three frames the next time, and he's worn out at the end of seven only last Tuesday.

Bubbloff Produces

Bill Terry's terrific Giants won yesterday 3-2 over Cincinnati Reds. Old Meal Ticket Carl Hubbell won, and although given little help by his mates, except for Jimmy Ripple's three singles, King Carl produced as usual.

At the same time the Cubs took a beating at the hands of the Phillies 6-4 which left the Giants 3 1-2 games in front and put the Cubs definitely on the spot for the Wrigley Field invasion of the Terry Terrier next Saturday.

Another Montrichet also produced back in the Cubs. This one was Lou Bubbloff Dickey, whose two-run eighth inning homer gave the Yankees a 5-4 win over the Louisville Colonels and boosted the world champions into second place.

Feller Hurls Well

Bob Feller pitched a honey of a ball game for ten innings before giving way to a pinch hitter but his relief, Red Ruffing, couldn't hold it and the Indians dropped a 13-inning 1-0 duel to Washington's Senators.

Lloyd Waner with a homer, two triples and three runs batted in propped Pirates to a 9-5 decision over the Dodgers. The Reds and Cardinals went to a 3-3 deadlock in a game cut to five innings by rain, after Dusky Medwick belted a homer.

Fred Fotfroberger pitched a stellar hitter for a 4-1 win by Detroit's Tigers over Boston Red Sox and Bill Dietrich turned in a five-hit-ter in hurting the White Sox to a 6-1 decision over the Athletics.

KENTUCKY DERBY WIDE OPEN, RACE

Expected Eleven Three Year Olds Will Start in Classic

Louisville, KY., May 5—(AP)—Kentucky's annual re-curring tornado, better known as the derby struck this horse-minded community by full force today and gave no indication of expending its energy until the King of the three-year olds is crowned at Churchill Downs Saturday next.

It has been gradually gathering momentum the last few days as early arrivals from every section of the United States have turned in the merits of each horse.

Out of all the arguments came only one clear fact—this is the most wide open derby since Broker's Tip surged in 1933.

Heading the list is Maxwell Howard's combination of Stagehand and Sabot, trained by Earl Sande.

Next in line are Fighting Fox, Wood Memorial winner from William Woodward's Belair stod, and Warren Wright's Bull Lea, chief hope of the hard boots.

B. C. I. Opens Inter-Form Softball

Inter-form softball season inaugurated at the Belleville Collegiate yesterday with a twin bill being played between form teams of the school. The league was organized by Physical Instructor Cecil Laughton as a sports to be enjoyed throughout the spring weeks.

In the initial game Form IBI defeated Form 8S by a 10 to 7 score, while in another league game Form 9S defeated the crew of the "Yankees" to the tune of 6 to 5.

In the first game Hall and Hill, the Red Sox battery literally mowed the Form 8S crew down, striking out five and scattered Tuesso being the only Yankee to walk to first base. In the matter of consistency, Tuesso and Illsey scored the three runs for the "Yankees".

Hall, Bennett and Mott wielded potent bats for the 9S outfit, Bennett's single drove in the majority of the visitors runs. The lineups:

Red Sox: Burley, Juby, Hill; Hall, Mancini, Pritchard, Bennett, Sicker; Mott.

Yankees: Thompson, Tuesso, Illsey; Reid, Hall, Reid, Avery, Thorne; Harrison and Bradford. Tom Reid and Jack Thompson composed the Yankee battery.

Plenty of free hitting marked the other game when Form 9H won over Form 8K by a 10 to 7 score, both clubs scoring freely as the game progressed. Ingram and Loake were the pitchers for the losers while McBride labored on the hill-top for the vanquished. Jamieson and McGuire led the batsmen on the attack with heavy beats as Shillebury and Jamieson connected for two safeties apiece in the losers.

The line-ups:

9H: Salisbury, Simmons, McBride, Peets, Parliament, Reed, Mitchell, Sills, Noakes and Cherry.

Form 8H: Lucas, Langabeer, Ingram, Jamieson, McCormick, Lynch, McGuire, Kotesh and Jones, Inspire: Lambkins.

Score by innings:

Form 9H. ..... 102 003 4—10
Form 8K. ..... 003 200 2— 7
Red Sox ..... 023 000 1—6
Yankees ..... 100 010 1—3

TWO MAIN BOUTS AT HUME ARENA QUITE EXCITING

Scotty McDougall Takes Chief Lynx in First Match

STIEN GETS DRAW

Al Dunlop Uses Illegal Tactics But Stien Goes Berserk

Owing to the non-appearance of Count Zarnoff, the highly advertised Russian wrestler of nobility, local wrestling promoters staged two main bouts for the approval of some 600 wrestling fans at the Hume Arena last night. The feature bouts resulted in plenty of action, but little orthodox wrestling as Chief Lynx, the Rama Reserve Indian, proved no match for the veteran Scotty McDougall, who won the main bout in consecutive falls by applying his favorite scissors toe hold with deadly effect.

The "Indstin" reverted to most every unorthodox method known to modern wrestling in an attempt to win.

The semi-final bout, which was included as a main attraction, actually stole the show when Stanley Stien, the Jewish favourite of the patrons, grappled to a draw, over the 45 minutes route, with the popular "Bronco" Al Dunlop, the Cleveland "rubberman", in a bout that saw the clever flow freely between the Jewish foreign sobstance, advertise tape wound around his right hand, repeatedly across his nose and lips, the latter causing the ring referee considerable trouble but eventually succeeded in re-taliation and ability to win at least a draw with the unorthodox Dunlop.

Some Hold For Both Falls

In the main bout Chief Lynx, alias Buffalo Joe, sporting several pounds of adhesive tape on his face and body, where he was apparently severely cut, was severely received in a former bout, the Indian assumed a willingness and was received to kneeling the favourite, Scotty McDougall, at that very spot. McDougall, a veteran of at least two decades of wrestling was not to be outdone and immediately tailated at the most opportune time to win the first fall in exactly 30 minutes after many reversed with a step-over toe hold, that caused the Indian to concede the fall. McDougall assumed much the same hold and found success before he gained his favourite hold and again secured Lynx for second the second and winning fall after gaining the advantage in exactly nine minutes of grappling.

Much to the satisfaction of the majority of the patrons present, Benny Stien, the Jewish wrestling favourite and a favourite with the fair sex, eked out a draw with Al Dunlop. Dunlop, the only attempting well man-handled and ultimately secured the King Bleeper profusely about the neck and mouth. Employing most unorthodox tactics, Al Dunlop successfully so many illegal tactics that Referee Harper and the patrons as he gouged used foreign substance, and resorted to rabbit punches behind Referee Jackie Forbes' back as the patrons shouted disapproval. A valuable portion of Dunlop's attacks however Dunlop lowered his head, ran Stien headlong into the groin and fell on the prostrate and writhing body for a few seconds to the delight of the patrons. Using his boxing ability however Stien came back to ward off Dunlop and ultimately win the second fall following a series of flying tackles culminated by a body press.

Fight After Bell

Dunlop appeared in the ring with adhesive tape wound around his right hand with the intention and drew the wrath of the fans when he was found. Using the foreign substance as a weapon, Dunlop ripped and tore until the referee ordered the bandage removed. Profusely from the nose and mouth, but the gang only secured a draw. Stien at one time with pugilistic endearment, floored Dunlop, but after the bout, but the gang only secured an injured Stien was stepped into Dunlop in a recognized fighting attitude and Dunlop was floored after the round, forced the Cleveland heavy into a series of flying tackles and Dunlop into submission in a hectic finish to the main bout.

In the preliminary bout of the night Mike Dominic, of Italy, carried the win over Norman Farrel, of Syracuse. Farral being counted out after seven minutes of fighting. Farral opened strong, but could not stand the torrid attacks of Dominic in the clinches and took the easy way out. The bouts were refereed by Jackie Forbes. Tuesday's card will known wrestling referee.

Yachting and Athletic Club Names Sailing Committee

Members Will Assist in Having Power Boat Section

SUPPORT SOUGHT

Marked by a contagious enthusiasm which augurs well for the success of the club during the coming season, a meeting of the Belleville Yachting and Athletic Club, which was well attended by the club members, last evening attracted large numbers of boat owners on the city and district.

The principal meeting of the season, called ostensibly for the purpose of arranging sailing dates and other plans for the season's sailing and aquatic sports, the gathering named the first of the many committees of the club which will be charged with the success of the various water events this summer.

The new committee which will be known as the Sailing Committee is composed of Reg. Rennie, chairman (in the event of his non-acceptance of this office by the ranking vice-commodore of the club, Mr. Hinchey, with a committee composed of Presidents Cecil Chapman, C. C. Locke, "Duke" Smith; Harry Semark and Reg. Hay.

Russell Dunlop will be asked to accept the duties of secretary of the Club for the season and also act as official starter for the sailing and other boat events upon which the attention of the Club will be centred this year.

In his welcome to the visitors and members, President Chapman pointed out that the season considerable interest had been aroused in sailing circles in the city and district, and that the power boat fraternity would be called upon to assist in the formation of a power boat section.

He appealed for the support of all classes of citizens in assisting the Club in all lines of work of boat promotion, and reaffirmed the efforts of every member of the club to attempt to give the people of Belleville just what they want for their enjoyment of the water.

Will Continue Fight

"The Club has been responsible for considerable good during the short time of its existence, and we have carried the fight for general improvement of the water front. Through our efforts, Victoria Park monthly, will be set by the newly appointed Parks Commission which was urged by the Club President. A considerable number of new boats for the sailing fleet are on order, and has been added to the city's fleet this season, and others are under way. Many have been enrolled, it was stated.

Commendation for the excellent financial report submitted by Ray Sills was tendered by officials of the Club.

"It's one of the best we have heard some time," said Power Director Alderman Harry Rollins. "Now we will have to continue the work with increasing vigor."

"This club has perhaps done more to foster and encourage sport of all kinds in Belleville than any other organization we can't let that down now. It deserves better support of the citizens, and should get better support than it has received in the past. Let us work in unity and the success of this club is assured," added Alderman Rollins.

How an alert, alive yachting club can attract business to any district was excellently described by Lloyd Hicks, formerly of Picton, now one of Belleville's newest residents and an enthusiastic member of the new boating fraternity, who has become distinguished through his association with fast craft.

52 Cruisers Made Visit

"During the summer season the Town of Picton alone was visited by no less than fifty-two cruisers all carrying touring parties anxious to spend their money. How many smaller craft there were is not known. But it is known that over a single telephone—and a very small one—grocery and goods to the amount of $2,000 were ordered and delivered to the 52 that came to the boats. How many other dollars were spent by the tourists in the town is not exactly known, but this gives some indication of what an active club can do in the way of bringing business," stated Mr. Hicks in his entirely informal talk.

Any yacht club can make money, it is handled right. The Picton Club did, and proved this when the regatta was held. Even though arrangements were not quite complete, it made a good profit and paid off its debts.

Committees of the Belleville Club which is to be organized at once will become active early in the season. Notice to members of the power boat committee, which will be launched following a general meeting of all power boat owners of the city and district, soon to be called, it was decided before adjournment was made.

ARGOS WINNERS OF CAGE TITLE

Defeat Squibs 28-20 in Keen, Hectic Contest

Surprising their most ardent fans the "Argos" won the city basketball championship by triumphing over the Squibs in the final Y. M. C. A. house league in the city championship at the "Y" last evening, when the Argos won by a 28 to 20 score, but only after a hectic struggle.

Play was rather even throughout the match as the victorious Argos led at a 12 to 10 score at the half-way mark. Paced by Art Black and Ross Lough the Argos moved into a belated rally to assure victory, however. The pastime was closely contested with few personal fouls committed.

For the losers Captain Jack Dickens and Bill Stephens were the more prolific point garners, while Art Black with his six points and R. Lough with eight were the chief cagesters for the Argos champion Argos, while Clare and Andrews added to the aggregate score of the title holders. Referee was inaugurated by Physical Y.M.C.A. Instructor Fred Hicken.

CALLING 'EM

Between the Lines

with Ken J. Colling

Thanks to the faithfulness of a few of the old guard, those who in years past kept the baseball flag of Belleville unfurled in the breezes of summer pastime will again be prevalent at the Exhibition Park. Last evening several local business men met called around Burt Fanning's office and the result was the formation of a club for the team.

With the R. C. A. F. "Flyers" in the Bay of Quinte fold, Interclub baseball was dropped in favor of the Exhibition game. "There is plenty of material for a good team around Belleville and District and we hope to have a goodly turnout for the first practice. All members are open," announced Mr. Fanning. With baseball mania the demand for the past year has been interwoven should be replaced in the affirmative to revive the game. The question as to whether the boys will support the club is left in the individual's hands, however.

It looks as though "Red" Townsend's Aajmaa Juniors are the ones to beat for the city softball title. Unofficially the softball season was opened at the Collegiate grounds last evening when the Aajmaa kids handed the National Steamship entry softballers a 15 to 5 reverse in an abbreviated exhibition tussle. Both squads used as many pitchers as possible in an effort to give all their players a short workout.

Although the local wrestling fraternity was disappointed when Count Zarnoff failed to put in an appearance last night, the matches staged were of a very live action in the semi-final and final bouts. Probably speaking for the whole Chief Lynx had no business in the same ring with Scotty McDougall, the only carried his long enough to give the veteran opponent a fall for their money. Then the power the affidavit make Al Dunlop and Stanley Stien go through and get down to wrestling, the latter the fans are going to see better wrestling. Last night Dunlop gave a display of fouling going over and should have been disqualified for his unsportsmanlike conduct. We're still of the opinion there is room for a wrestler of Jack Corcoran was matchmaker.

HODGE PODGE.... Looks as though Sam Breadon, pulled David Harum on the Cubs after all, Dean's arm being as good as ever, and owner Wrigley had hoped.... Who knows, we may again see Babe Ruth in baseball after all.... Fighting Fox is a full brother to Dallas Fox, 1936 Derby winner.... The Giants seem to be weathering that western trip better than expected.... Shades of Jackie Forbes thinking raised hops would draw in baseball fans.... No doubt if Lady Godiva would stage a ripple in this town, there is a swell day for the Tuesday opener, at least here.

Vicious Bull Attacks Consecon Farmer

Rushing to the aid of his father-in-law, John Palmer, Consecon farmer, who had been attacked by a vicious bull, Harold Adams with the aid of a pitchfork and the family dog succeeded in driving off the infuriated animal before Palmer received serious injuries.

Starting to cross the yard where the bull and some cows were standing, Palmer stopped abruptly as the animal started to bellow and paw the ground. As it walked to him, he put out his hand in an attempt to pet it. This apparently angered the animal for it lowered its head and charged the aged man, knocking him down and mauling him.

Answering his call for help, Adams who was working in a nearby henhouse, rushed to his aid with a pitchfork. The family dog raced to his assistance and helped in driving off the animal.

Palmer suffered bruises about the hips and legs.

the falling-off in attendance at evening services, at which special missional efforts will be held. Brief Gospel addresses were suggested in the recommendations accepted by synod.

"Protestantism is suffering from the minimizing of practice in its beliefs," Dr. Shortt told the synod, deploring the lack of attendance at services in the church on Sunday evenings.

"The full gospel is made up of believing and doing, not believing only," he said.

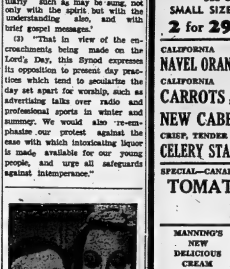
only be belief but action for Faith and Life is built upon that basis and is lasting from it."

"The weakness of the structure is the fact that the last evangelical methods are left where the evangelism should begin," the speaker declared.



Recommendations Presented

The recommendations as brought in by Chairman Dr. J. S. Shortt in his report on Evangelism and Life and Work of the Church, and accepted by Synod, follow:

(1) "That Presbyteries arrange for conferences in the fall in which the emphasis will be placed upon Evangelism as the basis of the Christian character, and that time be given for general participation and discussion."

(2) "With a view to off-setting the falling-off in attendance at evening services, that wherever deemed feasible, this worship hour be made one of an especially evangelistic nature with a large use of evangelistic hymns, particularly such as may be sung, not only with the spirit but with the understanding also, and with brief gospel messages.'

(3) That in view of the encroachments being made on the Lord's Day, this Synod expresses its opposition to present day practices which tend to proclaim the day set apart for worship, such as advertising talks over radio and professional sports in winter and summer. We would also re-emphasize our protest against the ease with which intoxicating liquor is made available for our young people and urge all safeguards against intemperance."

SCOTT'S SCRAP BOOK

By R. J. SCOTT

Little Benny's Note Book

This morning it looked so much like rain it was almost raining already, and yoo said, Well, I guess I better take my umbrella this morning, much as I hate to encumber myself, but it's proberly better to be loaded down with an umbrella than with pneumonia germs.

Well, I dont know, Willyum, the chances are there's a possibility of it's not raining after all, ma said, and yoo said, That's a strange statement, coming from you, you're the one who's always trying to saddle me with an umbrella even when the sky is as blue as a Bonitch violets, and so do you, horse blanket to blame, yoo said. You know my iron cullad rule that nobody is ever to borrow my umbrella under any circumstances, but yee gods, for all the good it does there mite as well be a sieve on the darn thing reading Help Yourself. Well here I go out into the elemints without an umbrella and without rubbers and I've got a good mind to go without a hat, be sides.

Only he didn't, and it didn't rain after all, and when pop came home ma told him she told him so, making him mad all over again.

TORONTO STOCKS CLOSE

Toronto, May 5 (CP)—The Toronto market had periods of strength today but was moderately heavy at the opening and again at the close. Mid-day set gains in the industrials and the mines were scattered or reduced in the last hour. Trading volume lightened with revival of trend uncertainty and many of a half million shares changed hands in the session.

Utilities and the refinery oils had a few more gains than losses and the food, steel and beverage groups held firm. Canada Bread common added a half point. Silvers were slow and steady. Scattered action appeared in the western oil group.

Losses of fractions up to a point or more were posted for the senior golds, including Lake Shore, McIntyre and Hone and Brakone. Buffalo Ankerite, Pamour, Canadian Malartic, Hydey, Kirkland Lake, Kerr-Addison and Powell-Rouyn all finished a few cents down. Wright-Hargreaves displayed some strength, firming at 7.45.

Penny golds taking minor losses were Red Lake Gold Shore, Kirkland-Townsite, Jellicoe, New Golden Rose and Giffels Lake.

International Nickel turned weak and Waite-Amulet, Perod Orville and Aldermac dropped early gains.

Steelers closed a point up and Noranda held steady around 66.

Brazilian, Walkers Common and International Petroleum were up and Ford A and Pamy Farmer were down.

WALL STREET CLOSE

New York, May 5—(AP) —A run-up in utilities provided rallying power for the stock market today after it had stumbled in early proceedings.

Dealings were fast on the comeback but soon slowed as light profit selling made its appearance. Gains, running to two points or so were reduced substantially near the final hour. Transfers were about 700,000 shares.

Board Room Gossip

As supplied to Bigger and Crawford
By Financial Service

A study of the various opinions expressed by market prognosticators both here and in New York indicates that they are not much more in their forecasts of the immediate trend than other words, they are not willing to hazard a definite opinion, although the majority advise against disposing of equities at prevailing prices.

In the last forty years, the stock market's advanced 22 times in May and declined 17 times, indicating that the odds favor a rising trend this month. Whether this will materialize or not is hard to say, but the liquidated state of the market warrants the opinion that there is comparatively small risk in the acquisition of stocks at current prices. The recovery from the lows has been negative and stocks have a long way to go before they approach even 50 per cent of their 1937 points.

Only two of the wells drilled to completion in the Turner Valley in 1937 were new production. These were Dalhousie No. 3 and Home-Millarville No 1. Dalhousie No. 3, which was located near the centre of the west flank, reached the limestone at 6,170 feet and drilled to 6,911 feet. Home-Millarville, at the north end of the Valley, was abandoned 1,000 feet after passing through the Home sands which alone but failing to reach the limestone, presumably because of a crooked hole. At the beginning of 1938, 14 wells were drilling in the Turner Valley and the wildcat had made footage in 1937 were shut down.

DEATH SENTENCE COMMUTED

Montreal, May 3 (CP)—Charles W. Herd, eccentric commercial artist convicted of killing year-old woman in suburban Verdun, last night obtained a commutation of his death sentence.

Herd was to have hanged Friday for the hammer-slaying of Mrs. Elizabeth Armstrong, mother of seven children.

GROWING LACK OF DISCIPLINE IN CHURCH CHARGED

Synod Told Ministers Should Spread Gospel as Well as Preach

BUDGET REPORT

Rev. McCrae, chairman of Missions Committee of the Kingston-Toronto Synod presented his report. "Rev. Maurice Feldman of Scott Institute, Toronto, addressed the Synod on behalf of the work among the Jewish People. Progress in this branch of the work is due to assimilation. The Jewish people are not separated from Canadian citizens, but rather work hand in hand, particularly with regard to Y.P.S. in the church, periodical visits serve to stimulate mutual interest," he declared. Rev. Steenbeck of the Fraserdale Church among the Hungarian people in Timmins also spoke of progress that was made through the agency of interest displayed in Canadian organization of the church. He appealed for the support of the ministers in the promotion of the work." "Here too is evidence of assimilation," he declared revealing, that he himself had a Scottish sister-in-law.

Rev. McGinnis D.D.

The next item of business was the presentation of the report of the Budget Committee by Rev. McGinnis of Orillia, chairman, along with the presentation of the recommendations constructive to the work.

In citing the seriousness of the budget problem Rev. McGinnis pointed out, that presbyteries within the Synod failed to have available money released for church work. There seems to be plenty of money for all other purposes but the church.

The speaker then presented a list of recommendations constructive to aid in increasing budget contributions. He suggested group meetings of local Boards of Management and Kirk Sessions to acquaint the communicants with the need and purpose of the budget. During the ensuing discussion period dealing with this report on the budget, the Rev. Samuel Lawrence, stated there was a growing lack of discipline within the church. It has been wrongly stated, declared this veteran churchman, in strong Scottish accent and amid laughter, "that Scotchmen are tight." In fact they are the most generous people in the world. The convener for the adoption of this report, stated that the Budget Committee of which he was a prominent member, "was a committee of dry bones." The committee of ministers is not only to preach, but to further the Kingdom of God in the dry bones must be made to knit.

After a lengthy discussion the matter of the overture received from Lindsay Presbytery for a fifty per cent reduction in the budget allocation was laid over to a later date when the matter would be more completely dealt with.

MUSKRAT SEASON TO BE 'FLOATING'

Dates Will be Announced Shortly Before Season Opens

Several new amendments were announced in the Ontario Game and Fisheries Department, Chief Inspector Herb McCabe today, two of which are applicable to local trappers and hunters.

The department announced that in the future the muskrat season would be what is commonly referred to as a "floating season" and the exact dates being announced until shortly before the season opens. "The muskrat season in the future will be governed by the prevailing weather conditions during the winter," declared Mr. McCabe. "The department will give the public ample warning as to when the open season for trapping muskrats will become effective," stated Inspector McCabe this morning.

Regarding angling in nearby counties the following regulations are introduced.

"No one shall fish for, catch or kill any fish in the counties of Victoria, Peterborough, Northumberland, Durham, Prince Edward, Hastings, Lennox and Addington, Frontenac, Leeds and Grenville, Renfrew, Lanark, Carleton, Russell, Prescott, Stormont, Dundas, Glengarry, Stormont, Dundas, Glengarry, Prescott and Russell, in any manner whatsoever between the 15th day of April and the 15th day of June in any year

CANADIAN DEPARTMENT STORES

TO ASSIMILATE NON-ANGLO-SAXON

Synod of Toronto And Kingston Hears Appeal to 'Bridge Gap'

An appeal to the Toronto and Kingston Synod to assist in assimilation of non-Anglo-Saxon people in order that the "gap may be bridged between the church and the present two generations of immigrants" was voiced by the Rev. W. T. Ross, Toronto, in his report on missions today.

The present system should be revised to deal with the large influx of non-Anglo Saxon children, a question that needs serious study.

"There should be a liaison established between the Young People's Societies of the church, missionary and other organizations, in order that volunteers be recruited to be brought into the many districts to further this work," Mr. McRae stated.

Endorsing Mr. McRae's appeal the Rev. Maurice Zeldman, superintendent of Scott Institute, Toronto, stated the "Jews are not a separatist people. They mingle with and take part in the life of the nation have no two loyalties and come to stay and be good citizens.

The Scott Institute is a flourishing society among Jewish young people he said. "We do not expect to correct the 50,000 Jews in Toronto, but we are doing our best to preach the principles of Christ in order to help break down the walls of partition between Jew and Gentile."

He appealed to Synod to preach the gospel to the Jewish people, "you will find many who will attend" he said. "At the present time Jews need the sympathy of all, especially the church."

"If the Canadian churches will show an interest in this work there will be decided progress made in the Canadianization of other nationalities," the Rev. Charles Steinmetz, Presbyterian Hungarian minister of Toronto, told Synod in furthering the appeal.

"The Hungarians, too, are an assimilating race." Injecting a humorous vein, the speaker told Synod "Even I have a Scottish brother-in-law."

The church must lead the way in teaching the English language and habits, Mr. Steinmetz declared, explaining that the present progress in his church was due to the fraternizing and mingling with Young People's societies of other churches. "We feel the spirit of Canada, and the time is not far distant when all Hungarian churches in Canada will be using the English language.

He closed with an appeal to Synod for assistance in furthering this work.

SHOWS IMPROVEMENT

Suffering with pneumonia, Jack McCaw, 27 Wallbridge Street, was taken to the hospital on Monday. His condition is reported as improved today.

Hepburn is Surprised By Resolution Sent In by B. P. O. Assoc.

"Surprise and amazement" has been expressed by the Hon. Mitchell F. Hepburn over the resolution passed at a recent meeting in this city by the Belleville Property Owners Association, Mayor Jamieson Bone, president of the association has been informed through a letter received from the Ontario Prime Minister today.

The resolution moved by Mayor Bone and seconded by Mayor Alex McLeese of Oshawa, at the meeting, condemned the indifference of the government in the matter of unnecessary taxation," urged that an "emergency meeting of mayors of Ontario municipalities be called at once by the premier, so that the whole matter of municipal taxation might be taken up with a view toward permanent readjustment".

Copies of the resolution were forwarded from Belleville to Premier Hepburn.

In the communication received by Mayor Bone, addressed to Premier Hepburn from the "office of the Prime Minister and President of the Council, Queen's Park," Premier Hepburn wrote:

"I was somewhat surprised—yes, even amazed—to receive the resolution passed at a meeting of the Belleville Property Owners' Association.

"Since this government took office in 1934, we have shaped our course in the way of tax relief for the municipalities. I might point out that we have assumed the entire cost of the entire cost of indigent tubercular patients.

"No other government in my memory had dealt so generously with the municipalities. We fully appreciate the need for lower taxation is in order, as you point out, to encourage home building, but apparently our efforts have not been appreciated. Apart from this, we have assumed even greater costs with respect to relief.

"Yours very sincerely,
"M. F. HEPBURN."

Mayor Bone's statement in reference to the communication was brief, saying:

"I am preparing a reply at length to the premier. And I will point out that while it is true as the premier has said, some grants have been increased, such grants have been totally inadequate. If the premier does not mention taking away the income tax from the municipalities, nor the amount of some $15,000,000 collected last year as Succession Duties, nor the gas and automobile tax and so on.

"I am satisfied that neither this government nor ones previous have been the cause of the gravity of the situation within the municipalities," added Mayor Bone.

William Boyd returns to the screen as "Hopalong Cassidy" in "Russlers Valley" at the Capitol Friday and Saturday.

Mickey Rooney and Eleanor Lynn, in "You're Only Young Once" featuring Lewis Stone, now on the Bell screen.

THE WEATHER

Lower Lake Region: Fresh southwest winds; fair and moderately warm. Saturday, fresh southwest to northwest winds; partly cloudy and a little cooler.

Weird 'Chemical Regiment' Pass es Hitler in Totalitarian Parade

SOLDIERS WEAR THEIR GAS MASKS IN GRIM PARADE

If New War Comes it Will be War of Chemicals And Flames

WOMEN, GIRLS, WALK

Labor Conscripts Also Parade in Show of Italian. Might

Rome, May 6—(AP)—The first European war—if it comes—will be largely a struggle with chemicals, flames and artillery if Premier Mussolini's line-70 of armed forces on day in power of Chancellor Hitler is an indication.

Also, it will be the "totalitarian war" of which the late master strategist, General Erich Ludendorff, wrote, meaning that women and children would be drafted into service as well as men.

Mussolini showed Hitler a whole chemical regiment that would make shudder through the mass of spectators. The soldiers looked like beings from another planet in their gas masks.

Two Bear Parade

Among their equipment were tanks and tubes of compressed air emissions. There was, however, some reassurance for Italians in equipment for the first aid to gas casualties.

A further feature of the impressive two-hour parade was the prominence given to artillery. From machine guns to anti-aircraft

Liquid air! Air is so close and light that when it is calm one might almost doubt its existence, and probably never think of it as ever being in a liquid state. But air is very substantial, as may be noted when it suddenly slows up an opening parachute. Air is reduced to a liquid by a combination of pressure and cooling, 800 cubic feet of gaseous air making one of liquid air. Liquid air, then, is of course, composed of liquid nitrogen and oxygen, nitrogen boiling at 385 degrees below zero and oxygen at 361 degrees below. It is kept in a vacuum-jacketed vessel. Liquid air is very useful in chemical analysis.

Bone Answers Ontario Premier, Doubts If He Fully Appreciates

The surprise and amazement expressed by the Hon. Mitchell F. Hepburn in a communication to Major Jamieson Bone over a publication passed at a recent meeting of the Belleville Property Owners' Association in which the Ontario Premier is requested to call an emergency meeting of the Mayors of Ontario municipalities with a view toward the permanent readjustment of municipal taxation, has been answered by a letter sent the Premier by Major Bone this morning.

"I realize that your government has given municipalities due consideration, but I doubt if you or your cabinet realize the very serious situation that has developed. In my opinion the time for real action has arrived. Grants and relief from provincial sources are not solving the problem at all. The whole system of taxation must be set-up as unjust and unfair—it could hardly be worse—and this country cannot make any progress until it is changed.

"I would be very pleased if your Cabinet would meet a deputation from the Ontario Mayors' Association and go into the matter. It will positively have to be tackled and solved permanently, and the sooner the better. Briefs being now submitted to the Rowell Commission leave no doubt on that score. To me it is absolutely amazing that the Province of Ontario has received quiet for so long when for nearly twenty years we have been getting from bad to worse, until now a man young or old, can find no work, property is practical worthless, the building trades have died and will probably never live again, becomes more distressed financially, and the municipalities themselves cannot possibly survive. Do you intend to let matters drift further?" Mayor Bone wrote.

HOOVER WARNS ROOSEVELT FROM 'DANGEROUS ROAD'

Eleven-Point Attack is Levelled on Governmental Action

OFFERS SANER ROAD

Oklahoma City, May 6—(AP)—Herbert Hoover presented to the United States today an 11-point attack upon depression and called upon the Roosevelt administration to change what he termed "a dangerous road for democracy."

He delivered one of a series of major addresses in which night after a "grass roots" convention of Oklahoma Republicans, attended by more than 1,500 persons.

In the broadcast speech, Hoover again assailed new deal policies and warned: "We have been following that dangerous road for democracy in the last few years in Europe."

Declaring that "despite every ailist, this depression is the direct result of governmental actions," Hoover asserted that the road he proposes to travel further down this dangerous road.....

Five Point Speech

"And," he said firmly, "we are not going down that road without more fighting free speech."

BARN STRUCK BY LIGHTNING

Peterborough, Ont., May 6—(CP)—During an electric storm which swept this district last night the barn on the farm of Albert Johnston, 12th concession of Cavan, were destroyed by fire and with it a number of calves and some poultry. Loss is estimated at $4,000.

Several other buildings in the district were struck but no fires resulted. Only a half an inch of rain fell during the storm.

GUILTY WELFARE FRAUD

Windsor, Ont., May 6—(CP)—Pleading guilty to welfare fraud, Thomas Robinson, 30, was today sentenced today to 60 days in jail.

Welfare officials said he had been receiving relief for his family because he said they were destitute, when, in fact, he had worked three weeks on a construction job and earned $45 which he failed to report to the welfare department.

Tenth Month of War in Orient Finds Chinese on Offensive

By The Associated Press

The war in the Orient ends its 10th month today with the Chinese army resisting and even striking back at Japan's mechanized power.

For four months the Japanese have rapid spread of the Japanese occupation has been halted, especially on the main front in southern Shantung Province. In the north, however, the offensive, Japan has suffered one serious defeat. Another seems possible.

Some neutral observers are wondering whether the Japanese, at this side—one of the great tides of history, Japan's expansion—may be at its height.

Before it was stalled the Japanese army overran approximately 400,000 square miles of Chinese territory. The Japanese air force carried the war still further, along the whole extent of China's coast and for 1,000 miles inland.

Probably 500,000 Japanese soldiers have been sent to the continent, to be confronted by two or three times their numbers. A Japanese naval blockade on China's coasts has been declared.

Three Distinct Phases

The war has had three distinct phases since its genesis in an exchange of shots July 7, 1937, at Lukouchiao, 10 miles west of Peiping.

First was the comparatively easy Japanese occupation of nearly all north China. Next came the Shanghai-Nanking campaign with the fall of Nanking, the Chinese capital, Dec. 12. Finally, the operations on Shantung peninsula.

Chinese military losses have been heavy, but Japan's also have been. In the new capital, at roughly 1,000,000 killed and wounded. In January the Japanese army said 90,000 casualties had been only 20,000. Neutrals believed this far below the real numbers. Since then Japan has lost much more heavily in Shantung.

Both nations are weary of the war, but neither can stop. For China it is a fight for life. For Japan, although it began as an "incident" it has grown to involve her place in the Orient and her status as world power.

PENSION FUND OF TORONTO SYNOD GROWING YEARLY

Standing Committees Named and Place For Next Synod Selected

PASS RESOLUTIONS

A chance remark by Dr. J. S. Short, chairman of the committee on Evangelism and Church Life and Work, to the effect that the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church had laid tentative plans for the adoption of a new hymnal, led members of the Toronto-Kingston Synod at their final session yesterday afternoon, to table a recommendation that a committee be set up to increase Sunday evening service attendance by means of the use of special hymns of an evangelical character."

Unexpected opposition to the proposal that a new hymnal be used was voiced by the Rev. W. T. Mc-Grae, "The singing of our new so-called evangelical hymns proposed to be used, will be, you will find the same as the old," he told the synod members.

In view of the fact that the chairman of the committee, mentioned in the proposal, the Rev. General Assembly are making plans for the adoption of a new hymnal, the motion was withdrawn and tabled." The motion carried.

Other recommendations brought in previously by the Evangelical Committee and laid over for discussion at the session of Synod. These included:

That interdenominational conferences in the fall in which the emphasis will be on Christianization and its fruits in Christian character, and that time be given for prayer and meditation on the occasion."

That in view of the encroachments being made on the Lord's Day, this Synod expresses its opposition to present day practices which tend to secularize the day set apart for worship, such as excursions, talks over radio and professional sports on Sunday, and that Synod would also re-emphasize our protest against the case with which intoxicating liquor is made available for our young people, and urge all safeguards against intemperance."

DEVONSHIRE DIES AT COUNTRY SEAT; PUBLIC SERVANT

Governor General of Canada From November 6, 1916 to 1921

WEALTHY LANDOWNER

Passionately Fond of Shooting And Enjoyed Country Life

London, May 6—(CP)—The Duke of Devonshire, K.G., G.M., Governor General of Canada during the latter years of the Great War, died today after a long illness.

Death came at Chatsworth House in Derbyshire, his principal seat within the historic vale of which Mary, Queen of Scots, once was imprisoned, for six months in 1569 after his fellow nobles had been receiving daily medical attention.

One of the wealthiest landowners in England, the Duke was a close friend of the royal family and frequently entertained King George V at shooting parties on his Yorkshire moors and at Chatsworth House.

Devoted to Public Service

Much of the Duke's life was devoted to public service and he was called to vice-regal office in Canada in 1916 when the Dominion's great national effort was at its height. He remained at Rideau Hall until 1921 and was a witness to the final transition of Canada to complete nationhood following the peace.

PEN MANUFACTURER DIES

New York, May 6—(AP)—Frank D. Waterman, 69, industrialist and Republican candidate for Mayor of New York in 1925, died of pneumonia early today. Waterman, President of L. E. Waterman Company, pen and ink manufacturers, was well known for his civic and philanthropic activities for more than 25 years.

Violent Storm With Deluge Disrupts Bay Bridge Swing

Jagged shafts of blue lightning ripping, tearing, lipping through black rain-laden clouds in a weird forked effect; crashing thunder, so terrific that crescendoed into loud detonations as Nature's artillery was brought into action, bombardments experienced here and a deluge of rain that fell from the heavens in huge clouds marked last night's electrical storm as one of the most severe to visit this district for some time.

Surging from the southwest, black-thunder heads gave little warning to an unsuspecting world of the electrical show that spouted from the clouds a few minutes before 11 p.m. and continued for a half hour.

Vents Fury Over City

Sweeping across the sky in "lightning-like" rapidity the storm gave vent to its fury directly over the city for the space of a minute or so. A vivid flash of lightning ripped earthward shortly before eleven o'clock accompanied by a crash of thunder that sent belated pedestrians hurrying to the safety of store doors and porches. Then for the space of a few minutes the lightning wove a weird pattern of fantastic pictures against the inky darkness of the clouds. Street lights flickered as if in terror of the monster of the skies who was playing directly over them.

Then came the rain. A heavy deluge poured down from an ebony black heavens that was to last for hours in torrents as residents dashed for the safety of their homes and automobiles. Overhead Nature's artillery still roared out its accompaniment to the rain. Lightning now so vivid still wove its fantastic patterns against a sky that seemed to open wide. Crescendoing peals of thunder roared over the city, the ground of distant rolls that culminated in crashing reverberations.

New Trial Ordered For Acquitted Man

Toronto, May 6—(CP)—The Ontario Appeal Court today ordered a new trial for W. G. Shaw, recently acquitted at Goderich by Judge Thomas Costello of "omitting to do anything his duty to do or refraining from driving a motor car on the public highway."

Appeal against the acquittal was entered by the Attorney-General.

General evidence at the trial showed Shaw was subject to fainting spells. Two passengers in his car were killed when Shaw fainted on Provincial road the car got out of control.

The Hair's the Clue!

Toronto, May 6 (CP) — Police searched today for someone with short, dark hair they said maybe doesn't lie down just right.

During the night someone threw a piece of iron through the window of Lucille Nichols' Beauty Salon, grasped the raven hair of a window dummy and ran away with it.

The wig was worth $35, the management said.

Teachers May Explain Militia Must Not Recruit for Any Unit

Toronto, May 6—(CP)—Teachers who "explain" to Toronto students about the Canadian militia but they must not recruit actively for any unit, the Board of Education decided by a 12 to six vote early today after prolonged debate.

The decision followed a request from the Canadian Signal Corps that teachers be allowed to talk to interested students about enlisting. A sheaf of protests was read and deputations from various organizations discussed the question before the Board.

"We were told we were to fight for a land that would be fit for heroes to live in," said Harry Young, spokesman for a group of war veterans. "We came back to Canada to find ourselves on the border line of starvation and without work. We protest against our children being imbued with militaristic ideas.

"Instead of making recruits, take them up to Christie Street Hospital to see the limbless men, and then bring them back to see their fathers on the breadline," he added.

Mrs. C. B. Sissons, heading a delegation for the Women's League for Peace and Freedom, said it would be taking an "unjustifiable advantage" of schoolboys to have their teachers induce them to join the militia.

REWARD OFFERED BY CITY COUNCIL FOR INFORMATION

Damage to City Property May be Curbed by Action

ROUTINE BUSINESS

In order to protect lanterns and barricades placed by the Public Works Department, the City Council at their committee meeting on Thursday evening recommended that a reward of $10 be offered to any person furnishing information leading to the apprehension and conviction of any person damaging any city property or interfering with city lanterns placed on streets or sidewalks. Heavy fines are obtainable on places under repair and that such advertising of this resolution as the engineer may deem necessary be also authorized.

Alderman Morton Jennings as chairman of regional planning informed that all by-law amendments and regulations had been passed. Twelve by-laws had to be passed to remove from posts in parking lots, three "parking at owner's risk" signs, two "one way street" signs and parking of fifty new steel one-hour parking signs on Front street and Bridge street, ed by Isaac Stephenson at a cost of $72.00 per year. Other by-laws were authorized to install a light half way between Dundas and Bridge street on the river bank, one light in Kresge's garage, one light in Walter Hall's garage, one light in Zeller's garage and one light on pole at rear of Wills Building at an annual cost of $72.00 per year. Other routine matters of a similar nature was ordered done.

The parking space was secured by the Regional Planning Committee which included Jennings, St. Charles Power Company and the Belle Theatre and it was ordered to have a survey made of the parcel with cinders at a cost not to exceed $25 for cinders.

It was also recommended "that the advertising powers of the London Times suggested by their representative, Mr. Hall, be accepted by this council at a cost not to exceed $63.50 and that a committee consisting of the Chairman of Tourist and Publicity, the chairman of Parks Board and the Mayor be authorized to settle the wording of the advertising matter in conjunction with the Chamber of Commerce.

The city solicitor was directed to prepare an amendment to By-law No. 2259 to authorize the use for commercial purposes of the land in that front on streets within the areas zoned for business or for such parts, however, to be only those having a frontage on a street not within the restricted area, and to be parts that are not within the building or zoning in connection therewith the whole land area between those and any street within the restricted area and having no right of way to and from such street in the restricted area. The contract for collection of garbage was awarded at Monday night's session of the city council.

War Office Concentrates on Plans To Mobilize Women for Service

London, May 6—(AP)—The war office concentrated today on plans to mobilize women effectively for service in time of emergency.

Forming the basis will be non-combatant duties which women might perform, the War Ministry called a meeting of territorial army officials and heads of various women's auxiliary organizations.

Leslie Hore-Belisha, Secretary for War, said a women's army had no place for women. It was recalled 1-800,000 British women during the Great War worked in munitions factories, served as nurses, and enlisted in the women's auxiliary army corps and women's royal naval services performing non-combatant duties.

The war secretary said his purpose was to train women, "in various tasks so that on mobilization women could supply military requirements for various non-combatant duties."

The army and air councils already have recognized "emergency service," with organized training of women as officers for women's corps in war time.

The Duchess of Gloucester is president of the service. Army and air officials will address the meeting at day and evening classes.

A years training culminates in a camp where the women cadets take turns at duties as commanding officer, adjutant, orderly officer and drill instructor, and share "fatigues" and cook-house duties. Cadets must spend from eight to 15 days in camp and pay a 10-shilling ($2.50) subscription annually.

CHINESE RETAKE SOME TERRITORY FROM JAPANESE

Claim Made Half Territory Taken by Japanese Recaptured

PEIPING GATES CLOSED

Shanghai, May 6—(AP)—Chinese claimed the recapture of approximately half the territory taken in Shantung Province won by Japanese in a three-weeks offensive from which the conflict ended its 10th month today.

And while the two armies battled doggedly about Taocheng and Taierhchwang, there were significant developments on several other fronts.

Peiping's gates were closed and barred and that accident city of 1,500,000 people was in a state of siege troops soon after the conflict broke out, spent one of its most anxious days.

Japanese planes yesterday bombed objective but a few miles west of the city's walls, and there were reports that Chinese guerrillas and commandos were approaching the city. Police searched houses for irregulars. Martial law was clamped within the gates.

Peiping's Japanese garrison was greatly reduced by dispatching of reinforcements to Shantung.

A Chinese communique on the Yangtze River was claimed to have disrupted Yangtze serving Japanese railroad communications between Wuhan and Nanking. Yangtze is 18 miles down the river from Wuhan and 50 miles upriver from Nanking. In the same area a Japanese column advancing westward into Anhwei Province assailed Hofei, captured Shihkao after a 15-mile battle march along the shore of Lake Chao.

British War Office Confirms Order

London, May 6 (CP)—The War Office today confirmed that John Inglis Limited of Toronto will supply the British army with Canadian machine guns.

The war office spokesman declined to comment on the announcement at Ottawa yesterday that the British Government had arranged to manufacture the weapon for the Canadian army, confining his comment to confirmation of reports that the British supply will be augmented from Canada.

CONTROVERSY OF AUTHORITY COSTLY SUP'T SUBMITS

H. D. McNairn, Insurance Supt. Appears Before Commission

OVERLAPPING

Division of Authority is Called Caused of Controversy

Toronto, May 6—(CP)—Complete provincial jurisdiction of insurance was advocated before the Royal Commission today by the Ontario government. Supervision by the provinces would be most efficient and economical, it said, than under federal jurisdiction.

Insurance is essentially a matter of local and private rights," said H. D. McNairn, Ontario Insurance Superintendent. "The Provincial Insurance Department have demonstrated their ability to supervise the business of insurance in a competent, effective and satisfactory manner."

Satisfaction of Supervision

Any redistribution of insurance supervisory powers should aim not only at the elimination of any existing overlapping but more importantly "the final settlement of the controversy as to jurisdiction between the Dominion and the Province that has not only involved a great expense but has been a most disturbing influence in the business," he submitted.

As long as the subject of authority continued, there would be controversy since the prospects impossible to define the limits of any division of authority so as to be without question.

"Any submission so far made to your commission has overlapped

Obituary

MRS. WILLIAM WADDINGHAM (Lonsdale)

After a brief illness Mrs. William Waddingham passed away at the family residence at Lonsdale in Typecottages Township, on Thursday afternoon, May 5.

The late Mrs. Waddingham, who was in her sixty-ninth year, was born in Richmond Township in Lennox-Addington County. Prior to her marriage she was Miss Ada McBride, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. John McBride. For some years she resided in the township where she was born and for the past thirty-eight years she made her home at Lonsdale. She was well known in the district and took part in the highest esteem. Her passing has brought sincere feelings of regret to many friends. In religion Mrs. Waddingham was a member of the United Church at Roslyn Hill.

Surviving to mourn her loss are her husband, Mr. William Waddingham, Lonsdale; one son, Mr. Robert McFarlane, Shannonville; two sons, Mr. Ernest Waddingham and Mr. Arthur Waddingham, both of Belleville; one sister, Mrs. Arthur Powell resides in the United States.

The funeral arrangements is made elsewhere in this paper.

ALBERT STAPLEY

After partaking of his morning meal and then retiring to his room Thurlow Township, Albert Stapley, 76-year-old Thurlow resident was found dead in the Stapley Methodist Church early today by a neighbor, Mrs. Wm. Lunn. Mr. Stapley's death was announced by Chief Coroner Dr. J. Roy Hyde, who stated that during a heart attack before assistance was procurable.

Provincial Police were notified of the incident and Constable W. J. Smith investigated. As there was little doubt as to the cause of death, no inquest was deemed necessary. Mr. Stapley partook of his usual morning meal, leaving his home on business shortly after 7 a.m. this morning. At 9 o'clock Mr. Stapley was caught refuge on the steps of the Stoney Lonesome Church, when he was stricken with a fatal attack, and had sat there to rest.

The late Albert Stapley was born in Thurlow Township and had resided in that township practically all his life. He was a member of the Methodist Church and for the past twenty years he made his home with Mr. Lunn. In religion he was a member of the United Church. The highest esteem is held by all. Surviving him are two daughters, Mrs. William Bert Hamilton, Carlton and Mrs. Thomas Hamilton, Foxboro.

The funeral announcement is made elsewhere in this paper.

W. D. M. SHOREY

William Dorland McLean Shorey who died suddenly at his home here Toronto on April 29 and was buried from his late residence, 29 Sackville Street, to Pine Lawn Cemetery, on Monday, was well-known in Belleville where he was born and for a number of years. He had practised in the B.C. Bar for many years.

The late W. D. M. Shorey is survived by his wife and two children, Billie and Dorothy, and two brothers, E. Pd. Shorey of Hamilton and H. D. Shorey of Marlbank, Ont., and three sisters, Miss Clara Shorey of Belleville, Ont., Mrs. Frank Hanley of Newburgh, Ont.; and Mrs. C. Ira Johnson.

Old friends in Belleville will regret to learn of his death. He is remembered here by a large circle of friends for his kindly and affable good nature and his skill in his chosen profession.

Mr. J. H. Shorey of Cannifton attended the funeral in Toronto on Monday last.

GEORGE LECLAIR (Chicago)

Announcement has been received in Belleville of the death of George Leclair which occurred in Chicago on Tuesday, April 26. The late Mr. Leclair was well known in Belleville some years ago when he attended business college and also Albert College. He married Miss K. O'Neil of this city, who survives him. Old friends will sincerely regret to learn of his death. (Trenton papers please copy.)

LATE MALCOLM WRIGHT

The funeral of Malcolm Wright, well known and highly regarded Carrington resident for many years, took place Thursday afternoon, May 5th, from the residence of his sister-in-law, Mrs. T. O. Wright, Talbot Street, Picton. Many friends from Belleville and Picton were present at the service, which was conducted in the home by the Rev. W. J. Walker, minister of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church, Belleville.

Interment was made in Glenwood Cemetery, Picton; the committal service was conducted by the Rev. W. J. Walker.

The bearers were Mr. T.T. Wills, Mr. John Carr and Mr. S. J. Gilmour, all of Belleville; Mr. William McStevens, Mr. M. E. Knox and Mr. Miller Gilmour, all of Picton.

The legal profession in Belleville was represented by Mr. W. C. Mikel, K.C., Master in Chancery; Mr. D. D. Arnold, K. C., M. P. P.; Mr. A. R. Cameron, Mr. T. Y. Wills, Mr. A. B. Collins, K. C., and Mr. R. J. Dewar, Registrar of Deeds for Hastings County.

VIOLENT STORM

More timid residents of the city sought safety behind blind-covered windows. Guests at a party being held in the Armouries abruptly ceased card-playing activities when the first heavy crash was sent a blue flash through the room. Women rose and sought the comfort of rooms less exposed.

Damage Caused

Lightning caused damage to one of three transformers near the Belle-Bay factory on Pinnacle Street, putting electric motors out of action and causing suspension of activity for twelve hours. Further damage was caused to the mechanism of the Bay Bridge by the lightning, preventing swinging of the structure.

In other parts of the city, lights went out temporarily, but flashed on again in a minute. Fuses were blown in the Armouries.

E. V. ILLSEY QUITS CHAMBER POST

His Removal From City Felt as Loss by Chamber of Commerce

At the regular weekly luncheon of the Belleville Chamber of Commerce held at noon yesterday, Mr. E. V. Illsey former president and director of the Chamber, tendered his resignation owing to his departure shortly from the city. Mr. Illsey assumes duties similar to Seattle, Washington, where he will take charge of the Bank of Commerce in that city. He has been succeeded as director in the local Chamber by Jos. W. Imlah to fill the unexpired term.

An expression of deep loss felt by every member of the Chamber over the departure and resignation of Mr. Illsey was ably expressed by president Jack McIntosh who spoke of the long and continuous faithful service in the interests of his city given by the departing past president and director.

Happy Valedictorian

In reply, Mr. Illsey stated that his nine years' residence in Belleville had been most filled with good fellowship and friendly association. He regretted the severance of such relations made necessary through his transfer but assured the Chamber that though he be removed to a distant scene, his interest in the city, and in the success and welfare of his adopted city.

Arrangements for the farewell banquet being tendered to Mr. Illsey by the Chamber and a host of member business associates and friends of Belleville to be held in the Quinte Hotel on Tuesday evening next, have been about completed. A large attendance is expected to be present.

TWENTY-FIRST OBSERVES DAY

Overseas Battalion Members Attend Festivities in Kingston

Commemorating the twenty-third anniversary of the date on which the famous unit left for overseas, members of the twenty-first battalion, C. E. F. converged on Kingston today, where a fitting celebration of the day is being held.

Among those of the Belleville contingent who are attending the festivities are Messrs. Roy Rhodes, Fred Hart, Roy Madden, William Hanley, Percy Frad Johson and Garn Dobbs.

It is the proud boast of this battalion that it was the first unit of the Second Canadian Division to enter the German frontier. The late General Sir Arthur Currie chose it as the unit to lead the division across the Rhine into Germany.

this significant fact, yet all concede a final settlement." Mr. McHugh said.

Provinces Favored

"All provinces favor your commission on this subject with one exception have admitted that certain matters of insurance regulation will best be performed by the provinces.

"No submission has yet suggested that there are any functions of the Dominion Government that cannot be undertaken by the Provinces in an efficient and economical manner, nor has it been shown that where there is no overlapping the work could be done more economically or efficiently by a central department—indeed it would be more costly. Brig if the Dominion Department were established," he concluded.

If the Dominion Department were eliminated he estimated about $15,000,000 could be saved by dispensing with its Montreal, Ottawa and Toronto offices.

CONCERT TO HELP BEACHES PROJECT

This evening at the Collegiate Auditorium will be given the first concert in aid of the Quinte Bay Beaches project, since it has received its charter of incorporation.

Fittingly the all-star entertainers of the public and separate schools and Collegiate are to present a unique program and arrangements have been made for sound effects and special stage display.

Ald. Laurie Lewis is to occupy the chair and the Collegiate Band will be in attendance.

With the opening season the projected park at the beaches looms large and is attracting a great deal of attention. By this year it is expected to complete the formation of the beach. Therefore the committee and the entertainers are doing their most to raise funds for the purpose of getting as rapidly as possible the work on this waterfront.

Tonight's program appeal may be gleaned from the following contributions which are to be made;

Queen Victoria School—1st. — Playlet (12 Pupils), 2nd. Reading, St. Michael's Academy—1—Boys and Girls Band. 2— Acrobatic Stunts. 3—Fancy Dance.

Queen Mary School—1—Charlie McCarthy, 2—Playlet—"Alice Blue Gown."

Queen Alexandra School—1—Acrobatic Stunts.

King George School—1—Nursery Skit. 2—Dancers and Costume.

POLICE COURT

Robert Gannon, Corbyville, appeared before J. Magistrate E. J. Butler K.C. in today's local police court charged with breaking and entering the premises of the Belleville Collegiate with intent to commit the indictable offence of theft. Gannon was not asked to plead, his case being remanded for one week at the request of Crown Attorney B. C. Donnan K.C.

Gannon was arrested yesterday by Plainclothes Constable Fred Izard following investigations following the recent break-ins at the Belleville Collegiate and one other public school. The accused is detained at the police station.

A local motorist was assessed two dollars and costs after pleading guilty to parking his automobile on Campbell Street for an unreasonable length of time contrary to a city by-law. Adolphus Burgoyne, 58, Charles Street, entered a plea of not guilty, through his counsel Charles A. Payne K.C., when faced with the identical same charge as the former, parking his automobile for an unreasonable length of time. As the legality of gasoline pumps erected in front of the Hastings Motors on Pinnacle Street, was questioned by the Crown during the cross examination, the matter was adjourned for one week for judgment by His Worship.

Speedster Fined

A speedster enriched the city's coffers following a conviction registered under the H.T.A., of exceeding the speed limit. Four local men, who were apprehended by Victoria Park by P. C. Evans recently and charged with the same causing a disturbance by means of an alleged drunken brawl were fined guilty to charges of intoxication today. The quartette indicated each was unable to meet the assessed fine and would have to accept the jail sentence in default thereof.

"This matter of petty thieving in connection with the gathering of scrap iron has became much too prevalent, and local business men feel they have note been receiving adequate protection in the matter of punishment to the continued offenders" Crown Attorney B. C. Donnan K.C. held as Frank Simpson, 19 Bleecker Avenue and before Magistrate E. J. Butler K.C. in today's local police court for sentence, after having been convicted on three counts of stealing scrap iron in a previous court.

Simpson was sentenced to not less than three months nor more than six months in the Ontario Reformatory on each charge, the sentences to run concurrent however.

S. J. Howell, local barrister, appeared on the accused man's behalf asked for leniency. "This young man has had to do all of the work around his parent's farm near here. He is a good workman and has also good to his parents. He only gets into trouble when drinking," pleaded Mr. Howell.

Mr. Donnan was quite emphatic regarding punishment, however, as he stressed the fact that Simpson had committed one of the charges he confessed while on bail awaiting trial on an earlier charge.

DISAPPEARANCE

Mr. Betts was an enthusiastic fisherman and some of his friends here believe he might have gone to the Buckingham district to try his luck in some of the trout streams there.

Royal Canadian Mounted Police are looking for Quebec Provincial Police in the search for the missing member.

Farm Hand Saw Member

A. Brisson, a farm hand, told police he had been talking to a man answering to Mr. Betts description early Tuesday night near where the car was parked.

A Canadian Press reporter, who met Mr. Betts at breakfast in a local restaurant Tuesday morning, said he had not mentioned any intention to go on a fishing trip. He was wearing a light grey suit and when he left the restaurant headed in the direction of Parliament Hill.

Police Take Charge

Eugene Decosse, special investigator for the Quebec Attorney General's Department, has taken charge of the case. He will leave for Buckingham this morning to make a thorough investigation in that district.

Decosse was notified yesterday that the car was found and made several inquiries in the city here.

"He might have gone fishing and we think there might have been two men with him," Decosse said. "However, we are going up into the Buckingham district and look around the lakes. There are nearly 50 there where they fish."

R.C.M.P. authorities said there was a possibility Mr. Betts was still fishing in the vicinity of Mayo, Que., 15 miles north of Buckingham.

"The only thing queer about the whole case is the finding of the rented roadster near the river," a R.C.M.P. inspector said.

Served Overseas

The taxi company garagemen could not remember if Mr. Betts had any fishing equipment with him or not when he rented the car. They said the usual $5 deposit for the car and did not say how long he would be gone. The taxi company was not alarmed when the car was not returned for the cars are all insured and on some occasions are not returned for a week following the rental.

Mr. Betts is 42 years old and a lawyer. He has served overseas during the Great War and holds the rank of major. In the 1935 general election he won the London seat for the Conservatives. During the present session of parliament he has been an active member of the Conservative group and taken part in many debates.

"The Adventures of Tom Sawyer" featuring Tommy Kelly and May Robson, in technicolor, coming to the Belle Saturday.

play was the jaunty march-past of Alpine troops with their rucksacks and skis. Among them one could detect many a Teutonic face from South Tyrol. When the Alpini passed Hitler looked on gravely, pensively, while Mussolini, who usually explained each formation in his capable German, lapsed into silence.

Both relaxed into smiles soon afterward as the picturesque Bersaglieri trooped by on the quick march, their bugle and trumpet band playing as the musicians trotted along.

Hitler Among Roman Monuments

Hitler stood in the monuments of Imperial Rome of old to witness the review. It was in the Via Del Trionfi, through which Caesar's legions once marched. Within sight were the triumphal arch of Constantine and the colosseum.

All but a few of the 30,000 troops made snappy use of the "Passo Romano"—the Italian version of the German goosestep.

Besides 2,500 horses, 600 motor cars, and 220 motorcycles in the parade, 400 tanks, 300 heavy cannon and 400 light field guns rumbled and clattered by.

Rome, May 6—(AP)—Italy's land power was marshalled before eyes of Chancellor Adolf Hitler and the world today as the cream of the a gigantic military review along the avenue of triumph.

More than 30,000 men were assembled for a three-hour display of Fascist battle strength. Apparently 2,500 horses, 600 motor cars and 220 motorcycles were in the lineup.

Distinguishing the spectacle was the display of 400 tanks, 300 heavy cannon and 400 light field guns as well as colorful Libyan regiments of cavalry and infantry.

A special stand was built for Hitler to see the review, in company with King Vittorio Emmanuel and Queen Elena.

It was the second of four great war shows arranged in the honor of the man who rearmed Germany to scorn battle and a mammoth aerial circus were yet on the program. Yesterday the Fuehrer witnessed the manoeuvring with war-like precision, of Premier Mussolini's naval forces at Naples.

Spectacle Causes Conjecture

The spectacle caused conjecture whether Hitler would return to Berlin determined to build a war fleet of his own, though he has heretofore avoided naval rivalry with Great Britain by signing a treaty to limit German naval strength to 35 per cent of Great Britain's.

On the bridge of the cruiser Di Cavour, Hitler and Il Duce continued the exchange of views which might determine much of Europe's future. Observers said they were impressed by the intimate comradeship that prevailed between the two men.

It was believed Hitler again had assured Mussolini that his purpose of uniting all German in the Reich would not apply to Germans in Italy.

Diplomats recalled that both Italy and France in the recently initialled friendship conversations paralleling the Anglo-Italian agreement had said they supported Austrian independence. Military negotiations before Hitler's visit, and said there was no doubt Hitler had brought about a delay.

They looked for the course these negotiations henceforth would pursue to be an indication of the understandings reached during this visit of Hitler to Rome.

pieces, to heavy cannon. The Duce wanted everybody to know his German guests he was not lacking implements of war.

Besides Hitler and his entourage of high Nazis, Mussolini's guests included Prince Bernard Prince Aifonso of Spain and Amanullah of Afghanistan.

Boys And Girls in Military March

How seriously Mussolini's Black Shirts of future take the "totalitarian" may be judged by the fact his review included not only regular army units—infantry, cavalry, artillery and colonials—but also small boys' girls in black uniform. teen-age youngsters on horseback, military units of university students and various Fascist formations, including the Colonial Fascist Police.

Nor did he hesitate to incorporate Spade-carrying labor camp conscripts into the parade.

Aliens Who's Who

An interesting phase of the display was the jaunty march-past of Alpine troops with their rucksacks and skis. Among them one could detect many a Teutonic face from South Tyrol. DEVONSHIRE DIES

He set foot on Canadian soil at Halifax Nov. 11, 1916, exactly two years before the Armistice was entered keenly into the campaign of national service and, although he participated in 70 public functions in every part of the Dominion with that of any of his distinguished predecessors.

Loved Country Life

He was the ninth Duke having succeeded his uncle in 1908. He was a big, stolid man, a lover of country life; a man who could show his when men rode like gentlemen in coaches rather than "motor-driven cads" in "foul, stinking", motorcars. He was passionately fond of shooting and fishing, and his 180,000 acres were put to full use during the season.

The Duke as Lord Victor Cavendish, entered the House of Commons at the age of 23 and for many years was a Junior minister. He resigned his appointment at the outbreak of war, serving with energy in Civil Aid and the Militia, and was made a Knight of the Garter in 1916 and visited Canada, in 1922, entered the cabinet as Secretary of State for the Colonies. That was in the years before the Dominions office was created and His Grace therefore had charge of Dominions affairs. He held the post for two years.

Vacancy Created

His death creates a vacancy in the House of Commons. The new Duke, as the Marquess of Hartington, has been M.P. for West Derbyshire for 15 years and has served as Under-Secretary for the Dominions since 1936. The new Duke, as a member of the House of Lords, will be able to speak there although it is likely his new responsibilities will demand his attention.

The Duchess of Devonshire, a daughter of the Fifth Marquess of Lansdowne, one time Governor General of Canada, survives. She is a close friend of Queen Mary and served Her Majesty as mistress of the robes. Besides the new Duke, there are five daughters and a younger son. AIKENS W. M. S. HOLDS SERVICE

Mrs. S. Spafford Speaks on "The Growth of a Christian"

The 3rd of Sidney — The Aikens Women's Missionary Society Thank Offering Service was held on Sunday morning, with the president, Mrs. Thos. Irwin, conducting the service, assisted by Mrs. Edgar Ray, Mrs. E. R. Bonisteel in prayer.

Members of the Studies Band rendered verses of Scripture and presented "The Missionary Alphabet." Those taking part were, Doreen Groves, Marion Allan, Vivian Woods, Gordon Allan, Marion Hubble, Evelyn Ray, Marjorie Allan and Dorothy Ray.

A pageant "At the Feet of Jesus' Cross," was given with Ruth Spafford taking "Mary the Mother of Jesus"; Julia Jeffrey as "Salome" and Persis McMullen as "Mary Magdalene." They were assisted by Ronald Jones as Peter, Hazel Hamilton as Martha and Bob Engelish as John, with Harry Seeley taking the part of the Noble Centurian. Mrs. Leon McMullen sang, "When I Survey the Wondrous Cross," and an anthem from the choir added to the impressiveness of this beautiful pageant.

Mrs. Spafford's address on "The Growth of a Christian," was an inspiration and a challenge to all privileged in hearing this timely topic so well discussed. In her remarks, Mrs. Spafford reminded her listeners that growth in the spiritual world depends on the growth of the individual. Collective growth comes through the church. The early church prepared for Heaven, but the church of today attempts to bring a bit of Heaven on earth. Members believe as Jesus did, that one individual is of more importance than all our wealth and property. If the churches in the past had seen and believed that, Mrs. Spafford believes, there would be no communism today. The urge that as individuals, church members be not as they are—but as the Spirit of God can make them, and united Stanley Jones as saying we must have faith in the living Christ to have a Christ-like world. Mrs. Spafford closed her address with that we grow to fulfil Christ's vision of a world-wide kingdom.

Miss Marjorie Ray recited a special number at Sunday School and Mr. Bob English very capably conducted the Missionary program. The missionary block that was made by Mr. Wm. Wheeler, was introduced in the school and will be in use during the remainder of the year.

This neighborhood was shocked on Wednesday, to hear of the death of Mrs. Marie Bonisteel, Miss Bonisteel spent her early years in this neighborhood and was one of Aikens most popular girls. The deepest sympathy of the entire neighborhood is extended to the sorrowing mother, sisters and brothers.

The Social Hour was not very well attended on Tuesday evening at Aikens Church owing to sickness in the neighborhood and the busy season of the year. Mrs. Thirkell of West Huntingdon showed pictures of "Life Among Cannibals," and both pictures and lecture were highly praised by those in attendance. It was deeply regretted there were so few able to hear Rev. Tristram's very instructive and entertaining address.

Mr. Selburn Westover, who has been ill with pneumonia and a severe cold, is now able to be out again.

Mrs. Wm. Wheeler, who was suffering with sinus trouble, is much improved.

Mrs. Bart Hogle is now confined to her home with a cold.

Mrs. Jas. F. Wellman spent a few days this week with her daughter, Mrs. Edgar Ray and family.

AT THE BELLE

"Adventures of Tom Sawyer" the thrilling story of pioneer life in showmanship history has been written by David O. Selznick with the Technicolor production of "The Adventures of Tom Sawyer" coming to open Saturday at the Belle Theatre, matinee daily.

Here was a story property, Mark Twain's, beloved and most widely-known work, that was a definite challenge to the resourcefulness of the producer.

Selznick had to do more than simply make another picture out of the rich material which the book offered; he had to invest the production with the flavor of up-to-the-minute comprehensive showmanship.

His first ten-strike in bringing a modern touch to "Tom Sawyer" was the selection of talent hitherto unknown boy to play Tom.

Overnight Tom Sawyer became a vital, living personality, sharing the front page news with the Coronation and Royal Visit stories, the labor developments and the doings of Congress.

Three months Selznick pressed his search for an unknown for the delineation of the twelve outstanding production of the picture while the hunt continued.

Finally, after more than 25,000 boys from all walks of life in practically every state in the Union had been viewed, tested or interviewed, 12-year-old Tommy Kelly from the Bronx was selected as the unknown who would bring Mark Twain's unforgettable character of boyhood to the screen.

There was nothing of the "hunger" to Tommy. Son of a poor family, which had been on WPA relief two years, he was totally unknown, absolutely inexperienced, but he showed that divine spark of personality which suited him for the role.

To give the production another co- to - the-minute commercial touch, Selznick announced that he would make it in Technicolor, the same chromatic medium which had distinguished his previous box-office smash, "A Star Is Born" which is still making cash-register history on the screens of the world.

Selznick who had pioneered the first modern story in Technicolor, was the first to see the color possibilities in this Mark Twain classic. There is something about the quality of Mark Twain's stories of life along the Mississippi that suggests color to the imagination and in bringing color to "Tom Sawyer" Selznick will show us the Mississippi of our boyhood days.

The supporting cast for Tommy Kelly is an imposing one and includes May Robson, who gives one of her finest performances as Aunt Polly; Jackie Moran is the ragged Huckleberry Finn; Betty Thatcher, red hair, blue freckles and all is played by Ann Gillis; Walter Brennan is the town derelict, Muff Potter, Donald Meek as the severe schoolmaster and Victor Jory, Cora Sue Collins and David Holt are seen in important roles.

"Free Only Young Ones"

The adventures of a typical American family, with much of its comedy and no little of its drama are packed in "You're Only Young Once", now on the Belle screen. With the able Lewis Stone in the featured role, supported by an excellent cast which includes Eleanor Parker, Mickey Rooney and Fay Holden, the story is fast moving, mirthful and extremely well presented.

John Boles, Gladys Swarthout and John Barrymore in the refreshing musical - comedy drama, "Romance in the Dark" is the companion feature. A very interesting popular science in color completes the program. The forthcoming program will be presented again at the Belle tonight for the last time, the final complete show starting at 8.30 p. m.

DEMOCRACY AND DICTIONARY

Dean Inge, the "gloomy dean", sounded a more than gloomy note this week when he said that "democracy" might in the next edition of the dictionary appear as "democracy—obsolete form of government still practiced in North America. See dictator." He also said that the word "vespus" might appear in the dictionary soon as "1. A drink composed of wine, water and sugar. 2. See Victor Emmanuel."

But was the world so democratic at any time as so many appear to think it was? If it was not, then the decline from democracy has not been so great after all. It is hardly to be believed that Russia was ever democratic in nearly the same sense as Britain and the United States have been, or that Germany and Italy and Spain ever were. While the militarist seems to have power in Central and Eastern Europe there are new democracies there, clouded by the power of military might and magniloquent speeches heard from across borders, but still democracies.

The western world, such as the true democracies of Northern Europe, Norway, Sweden, Denmark, Holland and others, Britain, France, and North America and British Dominions iq Africa, New Zealand and Australia, know today more what democracy means than they realized a generation or even twenty years ago. They have nothing to regret—even though they know danger exists in the names of communism, naziism and other forms of government, which are repressive of personal liberty as the west knows it. Some see in the rise of these new forms of rule the result of the weakness of the nations after the world war.

The western world is hopeful that the democratic form will be assumed more and more as nations pull themselves out of the slough and quicksand of repression and definite efforts are being made towards appeasement which will lead to lessening of the tension which now exists.

All will hope that Dean Inge may live many years to see the same word "democracy" in the dictionaries with the meaning as given by Webster:—"government by the people: a rule of government in which the supreme power is retained by the people and exercised either directly, or indirectly through a system of representation and delegated authority periodically renewed, as in a constitutional representative government or republic"; or as an English dictionary defines it:—"the form of government in which the sovereign power is in the hands of the people and exercised by them directly or indirectly."

But if the democracies remain how long will it be for the dictatorial countries to come to the democratic viewpoint?

AWARD TO THE PRESS

Edmonton Journal and other Alberta newspapers have been picked out for honor by the Pulitzer Prize Committee for their fight for the liberty of the press. Clearly enough the award indicates what leading Americans think of the crusade for freedom which the press represents. It is the first time a special award was given and the first time the committee crossed the Canadian-American border to bestow an honor.

What democracy there was in some lands has had a difficult time of late years and in some lands the last vestiges of it have disappeared.

The Pulitzer prize board realizes that this was more than a fight for the freedom of the press but was for democracy itself, as the vice-president and managing director of the Edmonton Journal said.

Freedom of the press is a part of the unwritten constitution of British and her Dominions like freedom of speech and religious freedom. In the United States freedom of the press is incorporated in the Constitution.

BRITAIN NEVER SHALL BE WAVES!

There is a rumor that Britain is sinking—at the rate of one inch every five years. Neptune is an obstinate old fellow, as Canute found out, but it is unlikely that Britannia will be much alarmed at his new threat, no imagine that what she has long defended against the might of the world she must now yield to the main. She may give Neptune his inch, but he would be foolish to take it as a knell of her hopes for the future. Besides which, it is unthinkable that he really intends to waive the rules of the gentleman's agreement by which it is understood that she rules the waves.

Nevertheless, apart from any far-reaching and sinister design, he has, like the rest of his peers, his capricious fits; and if we may judge from the recent inundations on the Norfolk coast, Campbell was a singularly unwise counselor, when he remarked, "Britannia needs no bulwarks." The local Catchment Board is definitely post-Canute in its theories, and contemplate spending between quarter and half a million pounds on the defense of a twelve-mile stretch of their shore. —— Christian Science Monitor.

ONE ANSWER

I know we walk in mist, uncertainly;
And all our way is clogged with doubt;
We hate the past, a burden but to carry;
Fear days to come, at sea without a compass;
The present, a vanity to close our eyes against.
Oh, "Yes," to all of this! But is no courage left
In human hearts to fare our pilgrim way?
Are we the first to face the dark,
And was misfortune never known
Until the cup was given to our hands?
O, summon courage, beat the cowardice out;
And by the sheer hard steel-like will Convince the soul that we may still go on,
And find the joy that nothing has denied
To those who grasp life by the hand
And will not loosen grasp until death comes.

"NOT THE MELANCHOLY DAYS THEY USED TO BE" is a caption on the leading editorial in our bright and well edited contemporary The Brighton Ensign, published up the road a-ways. The editorial starts out thusly: "We don't hear so many tragic stories of the struggles of spring housecleaning and what the event means to men folks as we used to. It may be that, as fashions have changed along every other line as to what constitutes good stories. Or it may be that the subject got worn threadbare like plenty other things in spring and ceased to be able to raise a laugh." — and so on, ad fin, or what have you. That editor is just a big meany trying to take the cream off one of the surest fire bits of the spring and a welcome and perennial space filler which never fails to get a laugh. Brighton Ensign editor argues that with all the newfangled household appliances the drudge is taken out of drudgery as far as housework is concerned—together with hardwood floors and removable rugs and all that kind of thing. Mebbe so, but 'taint right to take away this cherished spring joke and make light of the white-man's burden thataway. Shame and shush to you.

JOYCE KILMER, BELOVED POET, WROTE "TREES" before he died as a sacrifice to the gory God Mars on Flanders Fields. "Trees" was the most popular poem and song of its day but was killed by ceaseless repetition on radio and gramaphone, night clubs and theatres — so much so that in some theatres notices were posted forbidding vocalists to sing "Trees". Now the burlesquer has attacked "Trees". Here's a specimen:

I think that I shall never see
Along the road an unscraped tree
With bark intact and painted white,
That no car ever hit at night.

For every tree that's near the road
Has caused some auto to be towed.
Side-swiping trees is done a lot
By drivers who are not so hot.

God gave them eyes so they could see,
Yet any fool can hit a tree.

NEVER SAY DIE—SAY DAMN, is the title of one of those Pep Poems which modern high pressure executives are prone to decorate their offices with, keeping company with DO IT NOW, THE MAN WITH THE SMILE IS THE MAN WORTH WHILE, and all that kind of thing. There is no denying that a good hearty damn once and a while sure takes away a lot of excess steam and clears the air, believe it or not, showing just how temperamental we humans can be.

ONE OF THE FINEST PROJECTS FOR CITY IMPROVEMENT ever launched in Belleville was that of the Esplanade — which would have provided a beautiful promenade along the Moira river and an outlet for congested traffic, removing many old barns and tin can and rubbish deposits. The project failed because the citizens did not fully understand it and were told that it meant heavy tax increase. The city council this year is endeavoring to provide parking lots along the proposed site of the Esplanade and as a result of the efforts of the Council a vast improvement will be made and parking lots provided for many cars which should solve the traffic congestion problem.

LOOKING BACKWARD

GLEANINGS FROM OUR FYLES OF BY-GONE YEARS

20 YEARS AGO

May 6th., 1918.

The remnant of a flag which is now flying over the city buildings is no improvement to that structure. The chairman of Market and City Property should procure a new one.

A unique service took place recently at Holloway Street Methodist Church. It was the presentation by the members of the Ladies' Aid Society, of a large Union Jack to be draped about the pulpit. Mrs. Charles Walters read an appropriate address and the presentation was made by Miss G. Herity, President of the Society; Mrs. Bacon and Mrs. Murdock. On behalf of the officials of the church, the Rev. J. H. Clarry, the pastor, accepted the flag which was immediately placed about the pulpit. The ladies also made a presentation of $60.00 to be applied to the Building fund of the church.

At the Belleville Cheese Board 504 boxes of white cheese were boarded. Of this number 110 boxes sold at 22 7-16 cents and 234 boxes at 22 8-8 cents.

30 YEARS AGO

May 6th., 1908.

Mr. James R. Stainton, of Deseronto, has been appointed Indian Agent at a salary of $700.00 per annum. The former agent was Mr. W. R. Aylesworth.

Under the command of Col. Thomas Stewart the 15th. Regiment had a march-out last evening. Previous to the parade the men were put through various oeuvres upon the market square and were watched with interest by many citizens. The Regimental band rendered some selections which were much appreciated.

The local Y.M.C.A. basket ball team played the Kingston team evening and were defeated, the score being 30 to 10. The following composed the Belleville team: Wilkins, A.Atoom, Moore, R. Moon and T.Irvine. Mr. Oenan, Physical Director, accompanied the Belleville team.

Mr. W. P. Hudson recently addressed the senior pupils at Queen Victoria School on reminiscences of the earlier days and the growth and general development of the country, especially that of Belleville and district. His address was greatly enjoyed and appreciated by the pupils.

40 YEARS AGO

May 6th., 1898

The steam barge Iona arrived in port this morning to load oats for Montreal.

The barge Nellie Hunter is loading stone for Cornwall.

The sloop Gull is in port with wood for the Rathbun Company.

At a meeting of the Separate School Board last evening only routine business was transacted. The following were present: Messrs. C. D. Macaulay, chairman; Coopland, Lynch, Tisdale, Sidney, Downie, Patterson, Meagher, Gillick and Butler.

Mr. James Wallbridge returned home from Toronto yesterday.

Messrs. A. B. Arnold and H. H. Dodder of Trenton were in town today.

Mr. Arthur Giel has returned to the city after spending some time in Vancouver, B.C.

Messrs. James Hanley and Charles Kyle left today on an extended trip to Vancouver, B.C. and other places on the Pacific Coast.

Mr. W. B. Northrup, barrister, is in Toronto on business.

50 YEARS AGO

May 6th., 1888.

Mr. Cesar Bonier, a native of Belleville and who is the oldest conductor on the C.P.R. is in the city viewing the scenes of his youth.

The special committee of the Board of Education, appointed to purchase a lot in Bleecker Ward for school purposes, met last evening and completed the purchase of an acre lot on the south side of Station Road, being the first vacant lot west of Albion Street. It was purchased from the Murney Estate for $400.00. The price of the same lot a few years ago was $1,000.00.

A Secretary is wanted for the Mechanics' Institute. Applications are to be sent to Mr. J. Lyons Biggar, the President.

The Rev. Mr. Maine, Pastor of the Congregational Church on Bridge street, assisted by the Rev. Robert Wallace of the Marchmont Home, will preach about thirty candidates into membership of that church on Sunday next.

A daughter of Harry Clark, Cannifton Road, fell off the logs into deep water in the river above the railroad bridge yesterday and was rescued by Samuel Brown, a G.T.R. brakeman. It was a gallant rescue.

Real Anglo-French Goodwill

British War Minister Leslie Hore-Belisha must have told "a good one, to judge from the smiles of approval shown by General De Camp, LEFT, and Colonel Girard, of the French Army. The photo was made on Hore-Belisha's arrival at Le Bourget from Rome where he conversed with Premier Mussolini. A few days later French and British statesmen tightened the ties that bind their armed forces.

Some Cases of Epilepsy May Be Free In Sensitiveness to Certain Substances

One of my early recollections is of a man "take a fit" on the street. It was a terrifying sight to me. Later I learned that there was no cure for epilepsy and all physicians could do was to try to keep the patient "quiet" by the use of quieting medicine—the bromides, and perhaps him inhaling chloroform during an attack. No cause has or had been found for epilepsy.

Then came the discovery that by means of the ketogenic diet (often fat and less starch food) together with a daily dose of phenobarbital, that many patients could be kept entirely free of attacks, and the attacks in others were less severe.

Notwithstanding the effectiveness of this treatment, the search for the cause of epilepsy still goes on all over the world. While the cause is still unknown some of the conditions which seem to bring on an attack are known—such as a blow on the head, shock, teething, worms, intestinal parasites, constipation and others.

The commonest factor however is hereditary. Statistics show that from one-third to two-thirds of cases are hereditary. Certain nervous family history of neuroses (thinking you have an ailment when none exists), insanity, migraine, one-sided headache, "St. Vitus' Dance, and hysteria.

In studying the heredity factor as a cause of epilepsy, it is believed that just as one can inherit red hair or blue eyes, so can nervousness and other mental or emotional predispositions be inherited. And from this heredity standpoint also has come the idea that allergy—sensitiveness to foods, pollen of grasses and other substances— can also be inherited and it is this sensitiveness to these substances that in some cases causes the epileptic attacks.

Dr. N. W. Cisin, Seattle, in Northwestern Medicine, discusses the cases of epilepsy and migraine and points out that cases of this type of allergy will show the following facts:

1—A positive family history of allergy which can be found in practically every case.

2—Previous allergy in the same person such as eczema and other such and intestinal distress in infancy and later hives, hay fever, asthma and frequent head colds, and one-sided headaches."

Dr. Cisin suggests therefore that when the usual treatment is not effective, skin tests be made of foods, dusts, and other substances, and the leaving of suspected foods out of the diet.

MIGRATION LANES

Some migrants, back from overseas, have lately reached not only land but one particular bush, wood or orchard—after a nightmare flight and losing their marvellous directive sense in that unnatural region above. Others, exhausted, have died. Light rising in their path bewilders them so utterly that even where perches have been placed they still strike and fall. Hence the enormous destruction gives evidence of strange things, for while at some lighthouses there is a death every year, at others none is killed, spring or autumn. How narrow, then, how rigidly fixed, must be the ancient lanes of migration! Do birds really travel as if between long walls in the air?

Were they to shift their lanes, the same species would not strike the same lights every year. Sometimes larks would fall, sometimes curlews, sometimes lapwings. Or, a lighthouse where birds had never struck suddenly would be found fatal. Only a slight detour over the undistinguishable spaces of the sea, and the travellers would not collide with the tower. But, so far as incomplete and meagre records show, birds are impelled to follow one invisible highway laid out by their ancestors and do not learn avoidance of it from this kind of disaster, although game birds' leaders often seem to remember what waters in their course are likely to be infested by hunters, approaching them with caution. Are they ever warned "permanently" from an ancestral route?—New York Herald Tribune.

Tea was served at the close of sessions.

Liberal Women Warned Against Becoming 'Smug'

London, Ont., May 5—(CP)—Liberal women of Ontario should beware of the danger of becoming "smug" and should be ready for a general election within the next two years, in the opinion of Mrs. Arthur Brickenden of London.

Mrs. Brickenden told the closing session of the annual convention of the Ontario Women's Liberal Association here yesterday afternoon women must take stock of present-day problems. They must not become mere information bureau of political thought.

She deplored what she said was a trend toward sectionalism in Canada and in the world at large. Fear in these days of unrest "is becomes so evident why the democracies must stand together."

Mrs. P. E. Dewan, wife of the Provincial Minister of Agriculture, in proposing a toast to Canada said tribute to pioneer mothers who followed their husbands into the hinterland and there reared families and helped create civilization.

Mrs. R. C. Widdifield, Stratford, was elected President. The 1939 convention, it was decided, will be held in Niagara Falls.

St. Catharines Will Hold Victoria Day On May '23

Theatre Owners' Ad in Paper Stirs Up Hollywood Film Stars

Advertisement States Certain Stars Have Small Box Office Appeal

GARBO, DIETRICH LISTED

Hollywood, May 5.—(AP)—Charge of a group of film exhibitors that a group of top-flight motion picture stars aren't worth their huge salaried keep stirred up a hornet's nest in the film city today.

Screen actors, especially those whose names were mentioned, did not, naturally, comment on the advertisement which touched off the squabble.

The Ad, by the Independent Theatre Owners' Association of New York, ran in a Hollywood Trade paper. It began "We want the Myrna Loys, the Gary Coopers, the Sonja Henies, but we want them when we get value, not when they drive people away from the box office."

The advertisement went on to give capsule criticisms of the drawing powers of various big movie names, among them Greta Garbo, Katharine Hepburn, Marlene Dietrich, and Kay Francis.

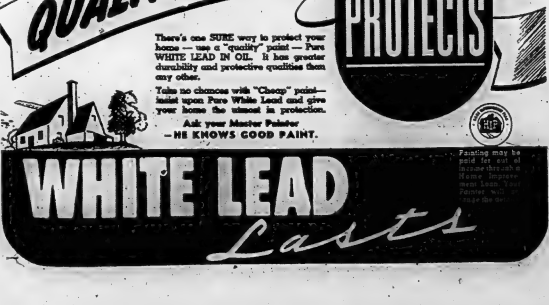
A spokesman for the Artist Manager's Guild, M. C. Levee, struck back. "Contracts are being made for the purpose of determining whether or not any legal action will be taken," he said, "but based upon the wave of resentment from other exhibitors throughout the nation and upon opinions expressed in responsible circles it is pretty well concluded now that the Ad in question is the result of a group of brain-fagged individuals trying to pick a fuss where none either exists or belongs".

The advertisement asserted that producers "are now, or soon will be, concentrating on the making of pictures which not merely surrounding a $5,000-a-week star with any sort of vehicle".

Harry Cohn, president of Columbia pictures, who has signed Miss Dietrich for a film, answered with a statement on the vagaries of the box-office.

"Many of the so-called waning stars have bounded back into top-flight appeal as the result of one excellent picture," Cohn said.

X-RAY'S VALUE TOLD TO O. M. A.



Toronto, May 5 (CP) — Dealing with the various uses of X-ray a paper written by Dr. W. C. Jones and Dr. R. C. Burr, Kingston, was read at the Ontario Medical Association at the Royal York today.

That X-rays occupy a very pertinent position in the treatment of cancer was one of the statements made. It was also pointed out that men who have had experience with pre-operative irradiation are convinced that it is a very useful procedure.

"It is a procedure in our institution," the address continued, "to wait for two months following the termination of the irradiation before these cases are operated upon. Every surgical wound usually heal quite promptly and no trouble is experienced."

CHICAGO ZOO GETS RARE ANIMALS

Chicago, May 5 (AP)—It took few years and negotiations, but the Chicago Zoological Park is going to get three strange animals known as Okapis. Zoologists say they have the head of a Giraffe, legs of a Zebra, habits of a goat, and are a baldover from the Dinosaur age. Captured in the Ituri forest in equatorial Africa by members of a pigmy tribe, they were said to be the only pair in captivity.

Dr. and Mrs. J. H. Forrester have returned from New York City.

Mr. and Mrs. Ewart Maidens, of Niagara Falls, spent last week here returning home on Saturday.

Mr. and Mrs. Macintosh and family spent a few hours with Mrs. Masters, Mrs. Macintosh's aunt, on their way to attend Parliament, at Ottawa. Mr. Macintosh being a member for North Hastings.

Fred Douglas, President of the Rotary Club, and President-elect, Alderman McLean Haig left for Elmira, N.Y., on Thursday, to attend a Rotary convention.

Miss N. Ross and niece, Killean Ross, Geddes Street, have returned to stay after spending the past five months at Berwash, Ont., where they visited Dr. R. F. Ross and Mrs. Ross.

Kresge store was the scene of a pleasant Get-together last evening at which Mr. and Mrs. Garrison were presented Miss Verna Garrison with a beautiful electric toaster-and-iron wishing her success and happiness in her forthcoming marriage, which takes place May 13th. A few words of appreciation for her splendid work and co-operation, which were given the company during Miss Garrison's period of services were expressed by Mr. John McVeigh, manager of the store.

A delightful tea was held at the home of Mrs. W. Hughes, East Moira Street, on Thursday afternoon, under the auspices of the Evening Branch of the Woman's Auxiliary of Christ Church. The guests were received by the hostess and Mrs. Ryerell, both presiding at the tea table and entertained in the drawing room by Mrs. G. G. Wright. Mrs. M. Lackey invited tea to the dining room where the tea table with lace cloth, yellow tapers and a floral centrepiece of narcissus, daffodils and iris, was presided over by Mrs. F. O'Connor and Mrs. L. Kells. Miss Dorothy Prentice and Miss Margaret Symons assisted in serving. Mrs. D. Stewart was treasurer, for the afternoon. Miss Audrey Pigeon was the Spring flowers which was won by clarge of a vase for a bouquet of Mrs. Burton, Octavia Street.

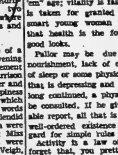
HEALTH IS BASIS OF GOOD LOOKS



(By HELEN POLLETT)

Pallid cheeks don't suit the girl of this day. It is an "up-and-at-'em" age; vitality is fashionable. It is taken for granted that every smart young woman will realize that health is the foundation of good looks.

Pallor may be due to undernourishment, lack of exercise, loss of sleep or some physical condition that is depressing and depleting. If long continued, a physician should be consulted. If he gives a favorable report, all that is necessary is well-ordered existence and a regard for simple rules of health.

Activity is a law of life. Don't forget that, you pretty ones who ride in motor cars and don't walk a mile a week. The blood is the living stream that turns the wheels of the physical being. Without exercise, fresh air and nourishing food, these streams cannot function normally. When they are active, the tiny capillaries clog to the surface of the skin respond and cheeks get rosy.

The soft glow is a simple means of rousing circulation. Smart the bathtub, friction moistened salt all over the body. Turn on the tepid spray, chill gradually. Finish with a rousing rub-down with a coarse towel. Then take 40 deep breaths.

LYNN BARI
Known health is the foundation of good looks

Maybe you won't believe that the movements of the knees have much to do with the shape but they have.

Watch how you use yours when you walk. They mustn't buckle; they must not be rigid. If you feel that yours have stiffened, sit in a low chair, lift one foot as high as you can with an easy swing at the knee. Do that five times, then five times with the other foot and repeat.

Enlarged pores are due to two causes: neglect of the complexion or a diet that is too rich in fats, too much starch, too many sweets. Cut down on these and you'll see a difference in your skin.

The complexion needs soap and water—plenty, and it needs a lubricant to keep the surface smooth. By spending ten minutes each night on the complexion one ounce of witch hazel, one-fourth ounce of boric acid, one-half pint of camphor water. Apply with a bit of absorbent cotton, let it dry on, and follow cool do better, and stopped coming to see me. I thought when I did that I didn't show me a good time that he would probably tell me how much he loved me, but he didn't.

A few weeks ago I met him at a dance. He made a date for the following Sunday, then sent me a letter with a bunch of violets saying he wouldn't call because he was still afraid he couldn't give me a good time.

Unhappy

The best laid schemes o' mice and men gang aft agly'e.—Burns. Scotland's great poet, reminds us. And this usually true of young ladies, when they work too hard to succeed in getting a definite end in the point. The bunch of violets presents a ray of hope. When you see him again, don't make any just fooling about him not giving you a good time.

Waste To Be the Right Thing by Everybody

Dear Miss Fairfax:

My parents don't like him, or his suggestion that I continue to live with them until he makes enough money to support us both. He intends to stay with his parents too. There's another man who wants to marry me, and he could give me a very nice home, for which he's paying now, and my parents want me to marry him, but they prefer to have me wait a few years.

I want to do the right thing by most everybody, but how can I please them all? I'm 18 years of age.

Georgette

It's absolutely impossible to please everyone in a situation like this. And when it comes to a question of marriage, the one to do the right thing by is yourself. As you do not appear a preference for either of these young men, and are only 18 years of age, why don't you wait until you really care so much for someone that you feel you can't live without them?

Weddings

STATIA—EMPEY

Trenton, May 6.—(Special)—An interesting marriage took place at Mr. and Mrs. Grover Empey's home, when their daughter, Jean Gertrude, was united in marriage to Perrin Church Statia, son of Vance A. Statia and the late Mrs. Statia of Teeswater, Ontario. The ceremony was performed by Rev. George Campbell, minister of Grace United Church. The bride given away by her father was wearing a dress of powder blue satin cut in princess lines and she carried a bouquet of Colonial roses and snapdragons. She was attended by Miss Gladys MacDonald, who was attired in sky blue sheer over printed crepe and was wearing a corsage of Talisman roses.

Following the ceremony a reception at which close friends and relatives were present was held. The guests were received by the bride's mother gowned in brown crepe and wearing a corsage of Hollywood roses. Later the happy couple left by motor for Toronto and points westerly. On return they will reside at Trenton.

MILLER—MINOR

The marriage of Dorothy Virginia daughter of the late Lieutenant and Lucian Minor, U.S. Navy, and of Mrs. Minor of Galveston, Texas, to Flight Lieutenant Frank Robert Miller, R.C.A.F. Station, Trenton, Ontario, son of Mr. Hedley McMillan Miller, of Kamloops, B.C., took place on Tuesday evening at half-past seven o'clock at Trinity Church, Galveston, Texas, Rev. Edmund Gibson officiating.

The altar was decorated with magnolia, jasmine and white candles.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her first cousin, Mr. Lucian Minor Williams, wore a gown of white moussoline de soie with a full skirt and a train, appliqued in sprays of white and silver leaves at waist and throat, and a white tulle veil held in place by a coronet, and she carried a prayer book decorated with single magnolia blossoms, and the flankers of white ribbon and lily-of-the-valley.

The maid-of-honor, Miss Eleanor Douglass, of Galveston, wore a gown of white pointe d'esprit, over white taffeta, having a full skirt and a short bolero of white Valenciennes ruffles, a short veil with a coronet of white daisies and lily-of-the-valley and a bouquet of daisies and lily-of-the-valley.

The bridesmaids, Miss Katharine Creelman, of Montreal, and Miss Anne Wilkens and Miss Dorothy Rouge, of Galveston, were in white pointe d'esprit, over yellow taffeta, with bertas of white Valenciennes ruffles, and bracelets of the same material and they carried bouquets of daisies and lily-of-the-valley.

Flying Officer R. C. Procter was best man for Mr. Miller, and the ushers were Flying Officer J. D. Twigg, Mr. Clinton G. Wells, Mr. Thomas E. Kennedy, Mr. Leon Blum, Mr. Henry Wilkens, Jr., and Mr. Leon Harrocks.

Mrs. Minor, the bride's mother, was in blue lace, trimmed with a deep bib, trimmed in blue, and a small corsage bouquet of pink roses and lily-of-the-valley.

A reception was held at the home of the bride's mother.

Flight Lieutenant and Mrs. Miller left on a motor trip through the New England States, the bride travelling in a navy blue sheer frock with a matching bolero piped in white and wearing navy and white accessories.

They will reside in Belleville, Ontario.

Among the out-of-town guests were Colonel Creelman and Miss Katharine Creelman and Miss Marguerite Slocum, all of Montreal; Flying Officer H. Procter, Winnipeg; Flying Officer J. D. Twigg, of Victoria; and Mrs. Robert Barker, of Fort Worth, Texas.

FOX—KNOX

Marmora's quiet wedding took place at St. John's United Church parsonage, Campbellford, on Tuesday evening, May 3rd., when Yvonne Adele, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. David Knox of Marmora, became the bride of John Robert Fox, son of Mr. Fox and the late John Frederick Fox, Marmora. Rev. Harold B. Neal was the officiating clergyman. The happy young couple were attended by Mr. and Mrs. Randol Dalgleish of Campbellford, the latter being a sister of the bride. Mr. and Mrs. Fox will reside in Marmora.

GOOD MANNERS

By MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

(Copyright, 1937, King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

"A Virtue of Necessity

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I am a Senior in High School and I will attend the banquet and entertainments given for the Junior Class. I am left-handed, owing to a deformity. At the table I use my left hand and if seems awkward at the table is arranged for a right-handed person. Can you please tell me how I can appear less awkward? Wouldn't it seem less conspicuous for me to act as though I were left different or to conceal my hand as best I can? This is the first banquet to me, and I hope that you will help me. Thank you.

Dorothy

I know that this is very important to you, my dear girl, and that it would be very happy if I can help you. What I would like to urge you to do is to develop, as much as you can (and you can develop it to the last degree if you set your determination on it), an apparent unconcern about your hand. This philosophical point of view about it will be constantly easier for you. As you practice it, and, what is equally important to the situation, it will put other people at ease about it. Treat the silverpieces, even though they are of the wrong kind as far as you are concerned, as if they are friends, not enemies. Constantly make a point of not noticing . . . make up your mind to be even more graceful in your use of the silverpieces. Be unconcerned, casual, as you pick up a fork or knife or spoon, and use it with a careless easy grace. It can be done . . . I have seen it done. Many times, I see that conspicuousness vanishes, and only ease remains. Bob remember that it is not the awkward motions of your hand as it is your wise mental poise in the handling of those motions. You must be apparently unconcerned about it. In your thinking, before you can make others unconcerned about it. And please don't make any apparent effort to conceal your hand. There are natural ways that you can do this, but don't ever make it seem conspicuous.

A very dear friend of mine, a young lady of about thirty, has had a rather similar problem, and never speaks about it, but, judging from my observation, she has developed a point of view such as I urge you to develop. She has developed a way of making her hand inconspicuous that puts people at ease, and she gracefully uses the "other hand". Her deformed hand is her right hand, and recently she has become engaged. She cannot wear her beautiful engagement ring on her left hand, as she wears it on her right hand with such a grace that you don't think it belongs on that hand. That is what I mean by making a virtue of necessity!

Eating Etiquette

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Is it improper to place one's spoon on the plate between bites and when eating from a grapefruit or sherbert glass? The prevailing habit of keeping the spoon suspended in the air, or eating in a meticulous eating until finished, seems to me to be "crude".

Olive

The careful eater shows a certain carefulness, or at least lack of speed, while eating. Therefore the knife and fork, or spoon, should be "rested" for suitable pauses while eating. It's unattractive to watch a person gorge, or eat a mouthful of even one item of food, and keep it in constant motion. The well-ordered eaters don't even look up from the food, let alone pause to rest or for conversation. Remember the rhymes about the "Gloops" of this world, and see that is where they did.

Rest the knife or fork or spoon unprepared in middle or used to emphasize conversational points is also to be avoided, definitely avoided.

Hoped For a Boy Friend, Now Hopes to Get Rid of Him

Dear Miss Fairfax:

We live in an awfully lonesome place in the country, and I never had any young friends, girls or boys until about six months ago when we came to this city to live. I'm 21, and everybody says I'm pretty, but awfully green for my age. I got a job in the Five-and-Ten, and liked mixing up with people, and seeing the crowds, and the stock in the store, very much.

On the same but I take every morning going to work was a man, and after I had seen him five or six weeks he began talking to me. I didn't like him. He must be real old; I should say, all of 40. He found out where I work, and comes to the store and loafs around. Then he walks round and comes home on the same bus.

One night he followed me to my house and asked to come in. I refused. I always wanted a boy friend, but I don't like this one and want to get rid of him. What would you suggest?

Sadie

There is no reason why a girl living in this country should be subjected to the unpleasant attentions of any man. Tell him positively that you want nothing to do with him, and if he persists, go to the Legal Aid Society, the Domestic Relations Court or the Family Court and have him bound over to keep the peace.

A boy who persists in tormenting a girl, in the face of her objections, is either mentally unbalanced or so stupid that delicacy is wasted in dealing with him.

Now Why Did She Say That?

Dear Miss Fairfax:

Goodness only knows what got into me, but one day I told a boy, with whom I was having fun, to say that he didn't show me a good time. He said maybe some other

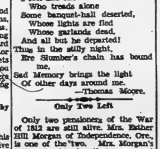
Poems That Live

OFT IN THE STILLY NIGHT

Oft in the stilly night,
Ere Slumber's chain has bound me,
Fond Memory brings the light
Of other days around me;
The smiles, the tears,
Of boyhood's years,
The words of love then spoken;
The eyes that shone,
Now dimmed and gone,
The cheerful hearts now broken!
Thus in the stilly night,
Ere Slumber's chain has bound me,
Sad Memory brings the light
Of other days around me.



When I remember all
The friends, so linked together,
I've seen around me fall
Like leaves in wintry weather;
I feel like one
Who treads alone
Some banquet-hall deserted,
Whose lights are fled
Whose garlands dead,
And all but he departed!
Thus in the stilly night,
Ere Slumber's chain has bound me,
Sad Memory brings the light
Of other days around me.

—Thomas Moore.

Toronto, May 6 (CP)—Tone of the Toronto market improved as the session advanced today and the close was firm with gains predominating in all index groups. Western oils were up from the opening on news from the Turner Valley field and the base metals played a minor active role in the later proceedings. Eldorado was a feature of the half hour action as it pushed up to 2.65 for a gain of about 15 cents.

A heavy trade in Maybob at a gain of 2 to 3 cents accounted for about one-quarter of the aggregate turnover. Senior oils and utilities were the strongest of the industrials.

The junior oil market was stirred by the bringing in of a new well by National Petroleum which enlarges the known oil field by a mile or more southward in the Turner Valley-Calgary-Edmonton, a holder in National Pete advanced 10 to 15 to 20 cents in active trading.

Narhob and Amm Gold registered gains of 2 to 3 cents. Noranda and International Nickel posted gains of ¼ to a point.

Most of the industrials group, including utilities, base metals and beverages held to the up side by minor fractions.

Board Room Gossip

As supplied to Bigger and Crawford
By Financial Service

There is reason to believe that the trend of business, in the not distant future, will turn upward, and the security markets should begin to discount this pending betterment. It should be remembered that very few are able to discern the beginning of a bull market, the average trader becoming convinced only after a sharp rise has taken place.

Canadian business is clearly in a position to respond and move quickly forward whenever affairs in the United States and Great Britain lend encouragement and confidence. The outlook for the crop is the most favourable in many years, with good prices for it in prospect. European war alarms have greatly subsided. The United States Reciprocal's stand on tax reforms, helpful to business, is cheering. Political action at Washington has an important bearing on Canadian business and Washington should be watched carefully. Spending programme number one has now been launched in the United States by the Roosevelt administration, Several billions of dollars are being pumped into the country's blood stream and this cannot fail to be stimulating in time. Our Canadian Government are also "pump priming" to some degree. The drift is certainly inflation-ward. Inflation in some or form or in the United States and abroad, is looming up largely again, and should private capital, of its own accord, or because it is forced, resume, even to a small extent, its proper function, a broad recovery in trade would naturally be the consequence.

A recession in business irritates everyone's patience. It is a time when cheery words with friends and influence people. Nevertheless, we have tried to curb our hopes and keep our eyes open on those basic forces which should direct the trend of security prices, states Jones Heward & Co. in their Mid-Week Review. There are signs of a certain slackening in the downtrend of business and commodity prices. New lows are still being registered, however, and there is not yet a sound foundation for a sustained advance. Nevertheless, it is not the actual deterioration in the country's position which is alarming; the danger lies in what might develop out of a further undermining of the confidence of the people.

Hopes are beginning to swell up again. It is always difficult to adjust oneself to the realization that every corrective movement must run its course. We all like to cling to the theory that "no basis exist for a serious setback at this time". During a major upward movement, one can usually visualize a broad expansion when, periodically, saturated, by unimportant setbacks. It is not difficult to take a long term view.

Last Year's Tomato Crop

By C. E. Mighton, Department of Botany, Ontario Agricultural College.)

In 1937 two tomato field crop competitions were conducted in Eastern Ontario, one in Northumberland County and the other in Prince Edward. These were the first field crop competitions that had ever been held in Ontario with tomatoes. Approximately fifty per cent of the total score was given for cultivation, weeding, freedom from and uniformity of stand and growth. It was felt that these points were largely within the control of the grower and that by allotting a large percentage to them that those growers who took proper care of their fields would be rewarded.

The other fifty percent of the score was given for amount and quality of the fruit on the vines. While this can also be controlled to a large extent by the grower, they are influenced considerably by seasonal conditions.

It is of considerable significance and worthy of note that the winners in both competitions had followed a clover and had also used fertilizers. This is further proof of the advantages of growing tomatoes with some legume crop.

That tomatoes is a heavy feeding crop has long been a recognized fact. Similarly the recommendation calling for a crop such as clover preceding tomatoes is also satisfying. In spite of this the records from these field crop competitions and our experimental plots show that only about twenty percent of tomato crops follow a legume crop. This has not been the fault of the growers in every case. In the last few years a great deal of seeding has been killed out with an accompanying disruption of the rotations. But in too large a percentage of cases no effort has been made to follow any definite rotation and some fields have grown as many as three crops of tomatoes in five years.

Ploughing down of a good top growth of clover, red clover, sweet clover or alfalfa, not only provides the most economical source of nitrogen for tomatoes, but also supplies it at the time when there is the greatest demand, namely, during the latter part of August and September when the fruit is ripening. In addition, it supplies considerable phosphorus and potash in a readily available form. It is also a source of organic matter. However, if organic matter is required in the soil, rye, barley yard manure, straw, or any crop grown for the land. In supplying nitrogen, phosphorus and potash to tomatoes, a legume crop has no equal.

If a crop of rye is ploughed down, it does not start to decay as rapidly as will a legume. The same is true of straw and other forms of crop refuse. However, they are too valuable to be overlooked and the grower who adds any of these materials from his farm is not acting in the best interest of the land. As has been mentioned before a plentiful supply of organic matter in the soil will greatly aid in conservation of the soil moisture. It also helps greatly in the solubilization of soil potash when applied in a mineral form. Mineral elements do not move up or down in the soil to any great extent unless there is plenty of humus present. Organic matter in the soil improves the physical condition, which is just as important for plant growth as is the chemical condition.

Even though the land is well supplied with humus and in the best mechanical condition it is likely to require some supplemental mineral, in the form of a chemical fertiliser. It is impossible to put everything we grow back into the soil and so we have to make up the deficiency with commercial fertiliser. However, it should be understood that these fertilisers only attain their maximum efficiency when the soil is in good condition.

Produce Prices On Montreal Market

Montreal, May 6 —Both butter and egg markets were firm undertone. On the potato market there were no more No. 1 new Floridas offering, but some No. 2 were available. Cheese was unchanged. Poultry was unchanged. Receipts of eggs were in fair volume and demand good. Arrivals for the day were posted at the Board of Trade as 1,908 cases of eggs, 603 boxes of butter and 30 crates of cheese, excluding truck arrivals.

A carload of fresh Canadian eggs gathered from 30 small poultry points in eastern Ontario will leave here today by the freighter Sulairia to be placed on the Glasgow market. Dominion Department of Agriculture officials announced yesterday. Other shipments of fresh Canadian eggs are going forward from the west and from Quebec. The Canadian eggs reach the British market in condition to compete favorably with eggs from Northern Ireland and other overseas sources.

There were no sales at the Canadian Commodity Exchange. At the close Quebec fresh 82 score butter was offered at 26 for 1-4c. Butter futures closed unchanged to 2c lower. Sales for June 26 1-4c to 26 1-2c for November. The spot open market for butter was unchanged. Sales were in brisk some asking fractionally higher.

On the egg market graded shipments were steady. Trade in used free cases at 22 1-2c for A-large, 21 1-2c for A-medium, 20 1-2c for B and 19c to 19 1-2c for C. Storage 19c, nullfied cases, 20-23c; selected chickens, 26-30c; selected fowl, 20 1-2-25c; selected ducks, 18-21c.

THE HUME ARENA TO OPEN DANCE SEASON SATURDAY

Interior Has Been Decorated in Gay Manner With Bunting And Lights

COMMODORES ORCH.

All dressed up in its brand new spring costume in itself a picture of brilliant colorings and decorations, the Hume Arena will inaugurate its summer dancing season Saturday night.

So successful was the 1937 season and in view of the fact that a large number of requests have been received that the program be continued this year, the management went to extra expense and labor to install one of the most colorful dance interiors seen in this part of the province.

Brilliant colors of festooned bunting hang across the top of the dance floor. Gaily decorated and softly shaded by subdued lights the orchestra stage is one of the many pretty features of the arena. Here Bud Haines and his new Commodores —raied as one of the outstanding dance bands of the province will dispense the rhythms that made them so popular with dance fans last year.

New music and new tempos in the modern style will add to the swinging of the crowd while new and distinct novelties will be introduced by this versatile band during the season.

Nothing has been left undone to ensure the many patrons of the very best in dance entertainment. Every Tuesday Thursday and Saturday nights during the coming summer the arena will ring with the laughter and gaiety of the youth and "oldsters" of the city and districts as they indulge in one of the healthiest forms of pleasurable exercise.

The Hume Arena extends a cordial invitation to all to attend its gala opening Saturday night. You won't be sorry.

IMPERIAL 'VETS' HOLD FESTIVAL

Gala Occasion Observed by Eighty Guests at Armouries

Flashes of lightning and crashing peals of thunder failed to dampen the spirits or upreads of eighty guests at the Imperial Army Veterans of Belleville at their annual "At Home" held in the Armouries last night.

Under the eye of genial master of ceremonies Jim Shepherd, who incidentally is the president of the local branch guests arranged themselves at the many card tables for euchre and bridge. They continued until eleven o'clock when the many valuable prizes were presented by Mr. Joseph Semaine.

A delicious lunch was served to members and guests shortly before midnight, with the ladies present assisting materially in this valuable part of the programme.

Dancing

Then in the delightful rhythms of the Grass-Wilkinson orchestra, guests danced until the wee small hours. Interspersing the dance numbers were delightful acts furnished by guests artists and entertainers present. Highlighting a fine program were the dainty Misses Joan Marsh and Mercy Woodhouse, two pretty tap dancers whose colorful routine brought the well-deserved plaudits of the assembly. They graciously responded to encores and again drew rounds of applause with their colorful costumes and twinkling feet.

Vocal solos and accompaniment by a member of the orchestra was also enjoyed by those present, while Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Semaine the only dancing grandmother and grandfather team" in Ontario practically "brought down the house" with a sparkling exhibition of stepdancing both, solo and duet.

Special Prizes

Affording additional enjoyment was the presentation of theatre tickets donated by the Capitol Theatre for novelty dance and the lucky ticket holder got in full to the lucky ticket holder. This was won by "Dolly" Stark. Door dance prizes were won by Mrs. Jeffs and Mrs. Robinson while honors for the most married couple on the floor went to Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Semaine, Jr.

Winners of prizes for euchre were, ladies' Mrs. F. Hall, Mrs. J. Hatfield and Miss Jean Delise. Gentlemen—Joseph Semaine, Jr., Leo Bellanger, Peter Tilley. The prize for rummy was won by Miss Dorothy Calbery.

The committee in charge of the affair consisted of Messrs. Joseph Semaine, Jack Gordon and James Shepherd.

Tiger Catcher Blasts Two Homers in Game With Boston

By BID FEDER

Associated Press Sports Writer

Don't look now, folks, but can that be the rejuvenated Cleveland Indians and Bill Terry's terrific Giants who have just dropped the first series of their respective eastern and western hinvasions.

Only a week ago, they said Oscar Vitt had put some T.N.T. into the tribes breakfast food this year, and that from now on Dave wouldn't be the Little Bo Peep's lost sheep when they made their tours 'round the circuit. And they were saying, too, that Terry's Terriers had uncovered a batting punch no one suspected they had—a wallop that almost made them look like feared American Leaguers. But all that was before both outfits left home.

Homers With Bases Loaded

The Senators squeaked through with a 7-6 decision in 12 innings Wednesday, and yesterday hung an 8-3 beating on the Vitt warriors, largely through Johnny Stone's homer with the bases loaded.

For the last three days, the Giants have been performing in the vast reaches of Cincinnati's Crosley Field and things have been so different they've dropped two of three games. Yesterday Harry Gumbert went to the war and was whipped 5-3 by Cincinnati Reds. Monday through the help of an obliging two-run error by master Mel Ott.

Cubs Show Mettle

An though that wasn't enough misery to hand Bill Terry in one day, his chief rivals, Chicago Cubs, knocked the ears completely off the Phillies 21-3 with an 18-hit attack that featured a 12-run splurge in the eighth inning. A rookie, Paul Hyperly, hold the Phils to six hits in his first major league start while all that was going on.

The Indians has left the Tribe in first place in the American League by only one game, since those Yankees rolled up their sleeves, fired out 16 hits for 28 bases, including homer No. 2 for Joe DiMaggio, and bowled over the Browns 12-10 for the third straight day.

York Finds Range

Rudy York finally found the range and clouted two homers to pace Detroit Tigers to a 7-5 win over Boston Red Sox as a crowd that saw George Tribbetts and the Indians get Ben Chapman's job took a bounce for fighting. Jimmy Dykes' Chicago White Sox socked the Athletics 10-4 while Connie Mack's club couldn't make the grade in the National League, handcuffing Casey Stack's managerts with seven hits.

Red Lucas, Cincinnati and Pep Young's three runs batted in gave the Pirates a 4-2 decision over Brooklyn. The ailing Dazzy Vance and Shoffner pitched an eight-hitter for a 5-2 win by Boston Bees over St. Louis Cardinals.

Fighting Fox and Bull Lea Favorites For Kentucky Derby

Louisville, Ky., May 6 (AP) — Having run in every renewal which was one of its highly regarded winter book favorite, the Kentucky Derby will be run for the 59th time since Aristides, the little red horse, romped home a winner in 1875, with prospects of an eastwest duel for the $50,000 gold prize.

Fighting Fox, racing for William Woodward, New York banker, and Bull Lea, foaled in the Blue Grass but owned by Warren Wright of Chicago, were established the strong choices today with Owner Maxwell Howard in declaring the ailing Stagehand definitely out of the three-year-old classic.

Stagehand, held as short as 5 to 2 in the future books following his victory over Reshlecult in the Santa Anita Handicap, apparently was not well on his way to recovery from a fever but Sande and Fox was taking no chances.

Most of the followers of Stagehand quickly jumped on the band wagons of the Fox and Bull Lea. A few however, stuck with Sande, holding to the belief the popular little trainer has a powerful threat in The Chief, winner of the mile trial stakes on Tuesday in track-record equalling time.

Fighting Fox, Menow, Head Favorites For Kentucky Derby

Earl Sande, Three Winner as a Jockey, Trains Stagehand, Favorite for this Year's Running

The ambition of every race horse owner trainer and jockey in United States is to own, train or ride a Derby winner. And Derby, winner means the horse that comes down in front under the Wire as Churchill Downs, Louisville, in the running of the Kentucky Derby, which will be staged May 7. The wire the victorious steed gallops under to receive the nod of the judges and the acclaim of the vast crowd is seen in the CENTRE, while the TOP (inset) shows the favorite for the race, Stagehand, winner of the $100,000 Santa Anita handicap and the Santa Anita Derby. With him is his trainer and a name that is synonymous with the classic event, Earle Sande, who in his days as a jockey rode three Derby winners, Zev, Flying Ebony and Gallant Fox. A brother of the latter horse, Fighting Fox, will be strong for victory against the Sande-trained Chamberlin. He is shown at the bottom LEFT. Next to him, the upper picture shows Lawrin, owned by H. M. Woolf and highly favored for the race since he did a trial mile in 1.36, said to be the fastest time ever made in a Derby prep. Beneath Lawrin is Menow with Fighting Fox, one of the joint second favorites. Menow contended for the Derby by Hal. P. Headley, won the Belmont Futurity last year in the world record time and has apparently lost none of his speed since that time.

Initial Baseball Practice Is Scheduled for Monday

Belleville Intermediates Work Out at Exhibition Park

ALL INVITED

With aspirations of reviving baseball in Belleville, an intermediate team has been entered in the Bay of Quinte League, that embraces Napanee Gibbards, Picton, the C.O.B.I. and a local entry. The local management announced today that the season's first call for Spring practice has been issued and all aspiring ball players are invited to attend the initial work out of the local intermediates at the Exhibition Park on Monday evening next.

With baseball having been dormant for one year local citizens interested in the promotion of the summer pastime are endeavouring to not only revive interest, but plan to reconstruct the local baseball picture in hopes of once again fostering senior baseball in Belleville, one of the oldest in the game and seven times winner of the C.O.B.I.

Nightly practices will be held at the Fair Grounds from now until opening day, May 24th, when the local intermediate entry is scheduled to open the Bay of Quinte baseball season versus the R.C.A.F. "Flyers" on the home diamond. As the Belleville team is to be completely rebuilt from the ground up, naturally all positions are open and vacant and available to the players making the best showing during the three week period of Spring training.

Several Good Ones Available

According to rumours about the city there are several baseball players on shibitz in the city, all of whom are expected to try out with the local club. Baseball was always a major sport in this city, where such outstanding diamond celebrities as Freddie Goyer, Jim Smith, the Mills brothers, Wicky Ross, Stan Hagerman, Jack "Chief" Williams, "Hoot" Gibson and other diamond stars too numerous to mention first got their start in the game of baseball.

Local promoters feel there is still plenty of home brew baseball talent available to assure a good team representing Belleville once again in the ranks of the O.B.A. and in the Bay of Quinte League, where Belleville once predominated, before the institution of the C.O.B.I. With every position vacant a sterling battle for positions is expected during every practice, which opens at the Fair Grounds Monday evening. Equipment, such as bats and balls will be provided, while Manager Burl Fanning is in charge.

One of the first moves of the local club will be to appoint a coach, presumably to be chosen after Monday night's work-out and doubtless from among the ranks of the veteran players, who are expected to mingle with the more youthful aspirants during practice.

TORONTO LEAFS BLANK GIANTS BEFORE 13,000

Fourth Straight Victory But Win Quite Expensive

CALDWELL SPIKED

Rochester Only Northern Club To Lose Opener

By The Associated Press

Toronto Maple Leafs, who started like a house afire last year and then folded like an accordian, are sporting it in reverse this season. In 1932 Dan Howley's young men won their first seven games in a row but this season the Leafs dropped four games, three of them extra inning affairs, before hanging their first victory over Newark. They then lost two more to Baltimore a week ago but haven't been beaten since.

They carried a three-game winning streak into their own park yesterday after two weeks on the road and cheered an opening day crowd of 12,000 by blanking Jersey City Giants 3-0. The feast sent the little Giants down to third place as Buffalo Bisons, who also opened their home season, walloped the league leading Newark Bears 12-9 before a banner turnout of 16,000, and moved into second.

Manager Royals also came Montreal through impressively in their inaugural by a 5-3 score before 5,000 fans. Rochester Red Wings, the fourth northern club to make its first home stand, took a 10-4 lickin' from Baltimore Orioles as 11,190 customers looked on.

Allowed Only Three Hits

Three Toronto pitchers combined to whitewash the Giants with three hits. Earl Caldwell started but was relieved after the game at the end of the third inning after being spiked by George Myatt in a close play at first base. He allowed but one single and John Berly, who received credit for the win, gave two more one-baggers before being lifted in the fifth inning because of wildness. Mike Meola stopped the invaders in the next two frames.

The Bisons rammed out three homers that accounted for their runs in stopping the Bears. Ollie Carnegie, Smoky Joe Martin and Johnny Price clouted for the circuit to more than overcome Buddy Rosar's base-clearing home in the third inning. Rosar later suffered a split finger on a foul tip and will do not catching for at least a week.

Phil Weintraub duplicated Rosar's stunt in a big seventh run rally for the Orioles that ruined the Red Wings and the veteran southpaw Harry Smythe halted the Syracusans with eight hits to score his third victory of the season.

CALLING 'EM

Between the Lines

Ken J. Colling

Apparently the heads of the South Hastings Baseball League are seeing the light and also the folly of basketball imports. Art Hall, hard-working secretary of the loop, informs us that "It is to be one hundred per cent home brew talent in the future. "Any all we are fostering and sponsoring baseball for the men and boys of our own district and each of our clubs bring in players from Belleville, Tweed or other points is simply means our own local boys are not given chance to play the game, so we are proposing to eliminate all importations in the future," added Mr. Hall. Incidentally we think you've got something there, Arthur.

By rigidly enforcing the non-importation rule, the South Hastings loop moguls will have all local talent appearing on the roster of each club, which naturally means that many years hence it gives his first chance to play with the home team, his parents, friends, aunts and all his relations will be out to see their boy perform. Frankly we feel the halting of importations into the South Hastings League is a step towards the assured future and continued success of the league. It is too bad that other larger leagues did not realize the folly of importations years ago. Had it not been for wholesale importations and the advancement of the residence rule, such places as Belleville, Cobourg and Port Hope would still be in the C.O.B.I.

Congratulations to Wilfred 'Wicker' Rose, one time star centre fielder for Belleville in the C.O.B.I., upon his recent appointment to the position of night yardmaster of the Belleville Canadian National Railway yards, replacing William 'Bill' Redner, who was retired on pension recently.

We have some good news for local anglers. According to Inspector Herb McCabe of the Ontario Game and Fishery Department, his supporters have assured him that there is to be an advancement in the muskinonge season this year. The 'large season will open on June 20th, this year, just ten days in advance of the opening date of season in previous years.

The proposed and tentative Bay of Quinte League schedule was received today from Secretary Lyn Crossman of Napanee. It is a double schedule, which means each club will visit the other on two separate occasions. The league will open with the R.C.A.F. at Belleville on the morning of the 24th and Napanee at Picton in the afternoon. Incidentally we understand the "Flyers" could be induced to play their home games at the Belleville Exhibition Park, so we see no reason why the Intermediates could not have an eye to business and clinch the Flyers as a home attraction in Belleville by scheduling games relative to the "Airmen" making the local ball park their home ground. Surely a city of hard cold business and to the person who goes after business goes the harvest.

"Sishi" Barrett's junior ballsters after a short workout at the Exhibition Park on Monday night will journey to Fair Grounds on Tuesday evening when the squad will get down to some strenuous practice. Coach Barrett has a number of candidates still vacant and despite the fact that he was over-populated he had named Turner and another Thompson, join his flinging squad for Tuesday's workout in order to size for a good right hander. As the Juniors will be included with Napanee and Picton this year, junior ball should enjoy as good a season as intermediate, we expect.

After being in the "dog house" for a full season, baseball is to be revived in Belleville once again with an intermediate entry in the Bay of Quinte league. Local fans should realize the potential strength of the Quinte loop, that will entertain Belleville's former entry, the colorful R.C.A.F. "Flyers" as well as Napanee and Belleville. Manager Burl Fanning has called the first practice for Monday night next day night and owing to the shortness of the practice period, only from now until May 24th, considerable work has to be done before a local team can be placed on the field to meet the "Flyers" on Victoria Day. As the local team is to be completely rebuilt, naturally all positions are vacant and will be awarded to the respective players making the best showing during these pre-season practice periods. Belleville produced outstanding ball players in years past and there is no reason why this cannot be repeated, but the late year lies in the hands of the individual players, who profess to be interested and anxious to play the game. The first practice is Monday night at which the club's coach will doubtless be chosen, presumably from the ranks of the veteran players at hand.

Hodge Podge—Tennis Lou's had a nice speed day over the week, nearly 12,000 and made it a perfect day by winning over the Mills Classic 9-0. If Belleville could have about one-tenth that number set on opening day here—everything would be in the clover . . . Judge Lamb, a high Commissioner of baseball, struck the keynote yesterday in Toronto when he said: "there is not adequate provisions for youngsters desiring to play baseball," and indicated that was the reason for the game's dwindle . . . When Stagehand was scratched yesterday, some of the (?) wise boys switched to Fighting Fox. . . . The Canadiens and Detroit are still thrilling the hockey fans over 'ome, staging the old swirlwuk of Falstaffs to add to the general picture . . . Even admiral Byrd's niece of Dizzy Dean, the Cubs continue to win and are gaining on the Giants frequently.

Sportsmen Demand Release of Von Cramm

San Francisco May 6.—(AP)— A group of California sportsmen, including world amateur tennis champ Don Budge and Joe DiMaggio of Herb McCabe of the Ontario Game and Fishery Department. his supporters have assured him that there is to be an advancement in the muskinonge season this year. The 'large season will open on June 20th, this year, just ten days in advance of the opening date of season in previous years.

The proposed and tentative Bay of Quinte League schedule was received today from Secretary Lyn Crossman of Napanee. It is a double schedule, which means each club will visit the other on two separate occasions. The league will open with the R.C.A.F. at Belleville on the morning of the 24th and Napanee at Picton in the afternoon. Incidentally we understand the "Flyers" could be induced to play their home games at the Belleville Exhibition Park, so we see no reason why the Intermediates could not have an eye to business and clinch the Flyers as a home attraction in Belleville by scheduling games relative to the "Airmen" making the local ball park their home ground. Surely a city of hard cold business and to the person who goes after business goes the harvest.

"Sishi" Barrett's junior ballsters after a short workout at the Exhibition Park on Monday night will journey to Fair Grounds on Tuesday evening when the squad will get down to some strenuous practice. Coach Barrett has a number of candidates still vacant and despite the fact that he was over-populated he had named Turner and another Thompson, join his flinging squad for Tuesday's workout in order to size for a good right hander. As the Juniors will be included with Napanee and Picton this year, junior ball should enjoy as good a season as intermediate, we expect.

After being in the "dog house" for a full season, baseball is to be revived in Belleville once again with an intermediate entry in the Bay of Quinte league. Local fans should realize the potential strength of the Quinte loop, that will entertain Belleville's former entry, the colorful R.C.A.F. "Flyers" as well as Napanee and Belleville. Manager Burl Fanning has called the first practice for Monday night next day night and owing to the shortness of the practice period, only from now until May 24th, considerable work has to be done before a local team can be placed on the field to meet the "Flyers" on Victoria Day. As the local team is to be completely rebuilt, naturally all positions are vacant and will be awarded to the respective players

By

Martha King Davis

But Miss Lydia spoke out in her old sharp way. "Mr. Parker should be here in some of the empty seats in the room, evidently to 'phone him. Mrs. Caldwell asked—Who did you covered this?" And I told her about my seeing the light and trying to open the door.

I never know how Sheriff Wilson got there so quickly. His round face was quite pale as he went directly to the pantry.

I heard him say to Mac—"You late? Too late! I should have realized this might happen." He made a mess of this."

The detective nodded with satisfaction. "Ah—now I guess we'll get somewhere with this case!" His small bright eyes darted from one to the other of the group.

"What's the verdict, Doctor?"

"Shot thru the back, the bullet penetrating the left lung. Died instantly." The doctor looked at his watch. "Couldn't have happened more than an hour or so ago."

Miss Lydia stepped forward. "It was just four-thirty. We were about to go upstairs."

"Who do you mean by 'we'?" shot out the detective.

"Grace and Lawyer Langford and I. We had been in the library all the evening. Lawyer Langford had just spoken of retiring. There was the sound of an explosion, and I said—What was that?' and I told him it was probably a motor-boat. Mary didn't be allowed in the harbor. You remember this, don't you Lawyer Langford?"

The lawyer nodded. "Yes, I did hear a shot like the back-fire of a motor car, so I did not give the matter another thought. I am sorry that I should have investigated," he said stiffly.

"And mighty glad you are you didn't—I thought. "You are wishing right now that you were in the second miles away from this place."

"I think we should question these people at once, Sheriff Wilson," declared Mac.

"That's agreeable to me," said the sheriff. "I guess everybody is here."

"Bobby isn't here," said Miss Lydia.

Mrs. Caldwell stepped forward. "He is spending the week-end—that's shall I get him, Sheriff?" Her voice was calm and unsteady.

"Yes Might as well have him here."

But when she came back in a moment, she looked even more disturbed than before. "My brother is not in his room."

"Not in his room?" echoed the detective. "He was usually out at this hour?"

Mrs. Caldwell bowed her head. "Yes—sometimes. He —he comes and goes at all hours. During the summer he has slept some nights in the room over the Alcott garage Oh—here he is now!"

Eddy slouched in at the kitchen door. He stared about at its wondering and his sister went to him and forward and put her arm about him.

"It's all right," she whispered, her face close to his. "Stay by me, dear" and she drew his arm tightly within hers.

He looked up at her with a sweet smile and said in his strange high voice—"All right, Norma."

"No first discovered this!" asked Parker.

I told of Mac and me being in town — of returning at eleven o'clock, and of my seeing the light under the door of the butler's pantry. I had stepped inside and found Barnes lying there on the floor with the blood stain on his shirt.

"Did you touch him?"

"Only as I called his name, and when he did not stir, I ran to the stairs, and called Miss and to the Mr. command screamed for Mac."

The detective turned sharply. "Where were you all this time, Miss?"

Poor Miss jumped about a mile! Her face was a chalk-white, and her lips were a blue. "I—I was in bed right after dinner. I went right to sleep."

"Didn't you hear that shot?"

"I—I—I—" I heard a noise. I didn't get out of bed. I got right down under the covers."

"Humph—you would!" sneered the detective. "Had you gone upstairs, Miss Caldwell?"

Lawyer Langford, Miss Linnell and I went up at about eleven. I went directly to bed but I did not expect to sleep when I heard Judy screaming for Mac."

"Same here," said Grace Linnell "But before this screaming happened I guess I'm going to get out of this joint."

No one questioned the lawyer's statement. All looked ill. All were looked ill.

The detective whirled to Mrs. Coldwell. " Isuppose you were in your room asleep? Have you time to get up and get dressed, eh?"

His tone brought the swift color to the lawyer's cheeks. "Sheriff—"

"No, I had not gone to bed," she said coldly. "In fact, I had just come in about half an hour before."

"Hohoi Been out, eh? Where did you been?"

"I have been to Alcotix next door."

"Stayed there—in the house—till eleven o'clock?"

She hesitated a moment and I thought she spoke suddenly—she saw her hand clench. "Not—in the house. Mr. Barnes came to see herself up proudly—"I refuse to answer any more of your questions!"

In Memory

"O for the sound of a voice that is still!"

The voice of Mrs. L. VanDusen, in Middle Ridge Church is faithfully courieous in the discharge of her public duties as Manager of the local office of the Bell Telephone Co., at Wellington, will be heard no more. Sunday after she answered the music of her voice over the wires, she was stricken and yet spoke to us, in the memory of their lives where duly and cheer were so beautifully combined.

STEP OUT - ENJOY LIFE

GET THAT "WAKE UP AND SING"! FEELING

There's fun and success waiting for you if you'll only insist on real health! What a difference it makes! You wake up full of energy and pep. At the end of a day's work you still want to step out at night! And it is all so simple—so easy. Just a matter of insuring "regularity"—the right way! Take a hint from other happy, healthy people: try Feen-a-mint, the delicious chewing gum laxative. It tastes good and it's so easy to take! More important still, Feen-a-mint doesn't burden the intestines with pills or bulky doses. Chewing helps digestion—and the tasteless laxative works gently, dependably in the lower bowel, where it should—not in the stomach. No wonder so many of your friends have already changed to this pleasant modern laxative for all the family! Try Feen-a-mint yourself tonight—and tomorrow you'll "Wake up and sing"! —adv.

PENSION FUND

"The Pension Fund is growing yearly and is at present in a magnificent condition" Secretary Dr. Lindsay told Synod. "It is receiving additions yearly from $15,000 to $20,000 and we now have the splendid sum of $346,000 in the coffers. The fine increase may be seen in the fact that our total in 1926 was $436,000."

"There is a hope" continued Dr. Lindsay, "that the yearly amounts paid out may be increased to $1,000 for the minister and $500 for the widow. This however, is only a hope. Other finances of the Synod are in a fine condition, and it remains for us to keep them that way."

Summer Camp

The Presbyterian Summer camp at Baden, donated by J. Lyingstone will be taken over next year by the Synod, it was decided after the meeting. It will be run as a boys' camp in conjunction with Glen Mohr Camp at Beaverton will be under the direction of a board appointed by the Synod, members decided.

Next Synod

Members of the Synod accepted the gracious request of Moderator the Rev. Dr. G. D. Stewart, that next Synod be held in St. John's Presbyterian Church, Toronto, on the first Tuesday in May, 1939.

Considerable discussion followed a motion by the Rev. W. T. McCree that the opening session begin at two-thirty in the afternoon instead of the customary time of eight o'clock in the evening. Spirited debate ensued before Moderator Stewart called for a vote. The motion was defeated by a substantial majority.

Following recommendations brought in by the Recommendations Committee and the hearing of Standing Committees, Synod was adjourned with the Benediction being pronounced by the Moderator. Following are the standing committees for the Toronto-Kingston Synod for the coming year;

Standing Committees

Business—D. P. Rowland, H. W. Reid, J. W. Fowle, W. Williams, C. S. McGillivray, Elders).

subjects here represented that God's richest blessing may be poured out upon our King and upon Her Majesty, the Queen, and that you may be long spared to reign over a prosperous and contented people."

To the Governor General

The Synod of Toronto and Kingston of the Presbyterian Church in Canada, now assembled in the city of Belleville, assures Your Excellency of their deep feeling of loyalty to the throne and to represent.

The Synod recognizes the great interest you have taken in the life and people of our Dominion, and would express the hope that, as you continue to discharge the duties of your high office among us, you may have great happiness in Canada.

May it please Your Excellency to accept this renewed assurance of our good wishes both for yourself in person and for Mrs. Matthews.

The Synod rejoices in your appointment and trusts that your term of office may be marked by continuous prosperity and happiness for the citizens of this Province.

May Your Honour be pleased to accept this assurance of the Synod's good wishes both for yourself in person and for Mrs. Matthews.

The Synod rejoices in your appointment and trusts that your term of office may be marked by continuous prosperity and happiness for the citizens of this Province.

To the Lieutenant Governor of Ontario

The Synod of Toronto and Kingston of the Presbyterian Church in Canada, now meeting in the city of Belleville, desires to express their loyalty to the throne which you represent in this Province.

Th Synod rejoices in your appointment and trusts that your term of office may be marked by continuous prosperity and happiness for the citizens of this Province.

May Your Honour be pleased to accept this assurance of the Synod's good wishes both for yourself in person and for Mrs. Matthews.

The Synod rejoices in your appointment and trusts that your term of office may be marked by continuous prosperity and happiness for the citizens of this Province.

To "strike" Standing Committees—Dr. J. S. Short, W. G. Beare.

Resolutions brought in by the Resolutions Committee follow:

To the King—

The Synod of Toronto and Kingston of the Presbyterian Church in Canada, now meeting in the city of Belleville, desires to express their loyalty and attachment to Your Majesty's throne and person.

Though soon separate us in Canada, from the centre of Imperial life, we are not the less united in the part of your vast Dominions we there more devoted subjects than the members of this Synod.

They also forget the heritage of freedom bequeathed to them from the Motherland, and it is their ambition to contribute to noble tradition in the years to come.

It is the prayer of your devoted

Marmora

Marmora—The regular monthly meeting of Marmora Council, No. 779, Canadian Order of Chosen Friends was held at the home of Friend Mrs. A. Gillen on Tuesday evening with chief councillor W. J. Cockrell presiding. After business session members enjoyed a game of cards and the hostess served a delicious lunch.

Mr. and Mrs. K. Cairns of Toronto spent the week end with the latter's sister, Mrs. M. McPhail.

Mrs. John Izzard of Belleville is visiting her son, Mr. Fred Izzard for a few days.

Residents of Marmora and Deloro very regret to hear of the serious illness of Mrs. William Mantle of Trenton. Mrs. Mantle was a highly respected resident of Deloro for several years.

Miss Rose Mantle of Toronto visited her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Mantle over the week end.

Mr. and Mrs. C. Clarke of Peterborough visited the latter's mother, Mrs. P. Sopha over the week end.

DOG AND PARROT FRIENDS

Hamilton, May 6 (CP)—Friendship of the animal world are Polly, parrot owned by J. J. Gay, President here, and his pup. The parrot likes to eat better from a spoon but midway through each delicacy, the bird will lean down and let the dog lick the better from his beak.

AIR SQUADRON AT CALGARY

Calgary, May 6 (CP)—Plans for organization of a non-permanent air squadron in Calgary have been announced by officials of Military District 13. It will be known as Squadron 113 (fighter) squadron, Canadian Air Force, non-permanent, and it was understood Wing-Commander F. Heaton Rennie, Canadian Air Force commander, would be appointed commander of the new squadron.

TURTLE-KILLING

DRIVE BEGUN

Stratford, Ont., May 6 (CP)—First result of a drive against turtles, who have been killing hundreds of trout in Sutherland's pond, southeast of here, was the shooting by Wilfred Lowe, 19, coxwer, of a 26-pound, 37-inch snapping turtle. The turtle was about 60 years old.

Little Benny's Note Book

Pop was looking at the paper in his private chair before supper, and all of a sudden he sneezed. He sneezed again. By golies I knew it. I'm catching another cold. If the doctors would only stop being so snobbish about finding cures for Bulgarian aitches rash and carbonomia of the tillapoo gland maybe they mite find a little time to condescend to isolate the germ of the common cold, and by golies once they get it isolated, nothing too bad for it, I said.

Which just then I heard while selling cocktails, something as it mite be for me, and I started to run down to find out, and pop said, Come back here, and come right back here.

Which I did, saying, Cl. pop, what's a matter and he said, I dont mind your rushing out of a room, because at your age a certain amount of impetuousity is an indication of health, but rush or no rush(when you find a door closed I expect you to close it again after you, because ten chances to one it's been closed by somebody older and wiser than yourself for a specific reason, such as an honest endeavor to word off another cold. Now close it and stay on this side of it' he said.

Which I did against my will, and just then somebody opened it again and came in and left it open. Being me, and pop said, You gosh and little microbes, how is a man to keep his health in a world like this? Life is just one long succession of accidents and a person's property nothing to be done about it, he said.

Now Willyum dont tell me you imagine you're catching a cold just because you happened to casually sneeze once or twice, ma said. I declare, the more I see of men the more I admire babies, she said, and pop said, Say no more, take the confounded door rite off its hinges it's a womens world, I'll see you in the cemetery.

And he got in back of the sporting page and stayed there.

Tweed Council Minds

Tweed, May 6—The council met on Monday night with Reeve W. H. Sayers in the chair. Councillors Myles, Way, Kerr and Quinn were present.

Messrs. Berry and Will Rodgers interviewed the council with regard to removing a number of large stones and boulders, along the street near their homes. They pointed out that it is almost impossible to pass or meet other cars at certain points because of these obstructions. Reeve Sayers, chairman of the streets committee promised that the council would look into the matter at once and remove the stones.

Mr. S. H. Connor, interviewed the council on behalf of the Horticultural Society to solicit a grant for the carrying on of the society's work f beautifying the town parks and other spots. He stated that the society is undertaking additional work of improvement as this is Old Home Week Year and the only funds available are members fees and a small grant from the department. On motion of Messrs. Myles and Quinn a grant of $10.00 was voted to the Horticultural Society.

Chief Constable J. C. Hayes advised the council that collections of dog tax this year show a decided improvement over former years. He also reported the very few properties are in arrears for taxes beyond the three year limit. The council decided to set men to work cleaning up the yard behind the council chambers. Certain old buildings will be torn down and a small section of fence constructed.

The question of the dog nuisance was discussed at some length by the council. It was finally decided on motion of Messrs. C. R. Day and C. H. Kerr that the dog by-law requiring dog owners to tie up their dogs from May 1st to October 1st will be rigidly enforced. One councillor pointed out that already considerable damage had been done to flower beds by dogs which had scratched out a number of tulip bulbs in a flower bed belonging to Mr. J. G. Frost near the township hall.

A considerable part of the evening was taken up by the council in the discussion of the problem of relief. Government grants for relief are cut 50 percent. For May and April and further reductions will be made for June. The council found it necessary to make proportionate reductions to the relief allowed to certain families. Two families were removed from the list and the direct relief to six other families was cut considerably.

The question of pool room licenses laid over from the last council meeting was dealt with. The applicants informed the council that they were not able to make as large returns as formerly on account of the pinchers shows and did not think the licence fee could be increased. Councillor Myles observed that he was not in favour of pool rooms, but that they at least were more desirable than a beer parlour. Councillor Kerr suggested that the licence be left at the old rate of $15 for one table or $25 for two tables, and that the key restricting the playing of pool and frequenting pool rooms to those over the age of 18 years be rigidly enforced. Other members of the council were strongly in favour of the suggestion and recommended that pool room licences be cancelled for failure of the operators to observe the law. A motion to this effect was passed, moved by councillor Way, and seconded by councillor Myles. Constable J. C. Hayes was instructed to see that the law was observed.

The council expressed itself as strongly in favour of a suggestion that the citizens be urged to make a special effort this year to clean up and paint up their properties in preparation for Old Home Week.

New Bus Purchased

A fine new school bus has been purchased by Nichols Chemical Co. of Belleville to transport pupils to Tweed high school. The bus was obtained from Edgar Jones and is a decided improvement over the old one.

Shrubs Purchased

The Horticultural Society purchased a large number of ornamental perennial phlox, peonies, ornamental shrubs and trees for Memorial Park. The effect is being spared by the Society to make the park an attractive spot for tourists and other visitors as well as local citizens this year.

WARD ENTITLED TO $1,005 OF WILL

Justice Chevrier Gives Judgment to This Effect

Toronto, May 6—(CP)—Della Marchen, married Ernestown Township, Lennox and Addington County, is entitled to $1,005 against Walter Adamson, executor of the will of Henry Atkinson of the same township, Mr. Justice Chevrier states in a judgment delivered yesterday. The plaintiff, as a ward of the Children's Aid Society, went to live on Henry Atkinson's farm. She was about to leave him in 1932 when he induced her to stay, it is said. "I find," says Mr. Justice Chevrier, "that Atkinson promised to place $1,000 in the bank in her name and let her have the interest thereon if she did not then marry but continued to stay with him."

Fortunate Honesty

By ANN SAVILLE

Although customers seldom came into the store at night, it was part of Judd Baines' job to keep it open until nine. He often decided inconically, as he seated himself before the coal stove, that it was lucky for him he could spend so much time dreaming. And he enjoyed it, too, this dreaming of the day when he could get beyond the limitations of his office where there was laughter and music the same as there never came to his. Of course it wasn't so pleasant when his dreams were persistently proved by a grim reality—money. At least five hundred dollars he would need to get "in style". Such an impossible amount that it was fortunate the store cash rarely exceeded fifty dollars.

He was thinking along these lines when a couple, typical of the hardy hill-folk entered. Wheneel they were, and Judd noticed it all the more because their eyes were so bright.

The man spoke first. "Is that a courthouse hereabouts where we can get married?"

"Why, yes, there's a courthouse across the way, but it's too late tonight. You'll have to stay over until tomorrow morning."

The old man wiped his brow in fatigue. "We come a long way. Couldn't make it no earlier."

His bride-to-be patted his hand reassuringly. "One more day ain't much. We can stay up to Cousin Tillie's over night."

"Tain't the stayin' part that worries me," the prospective bridegroom said, then paused as his eyes roved about the store until they rested on a safe in the corner. He looked at it a while, then turned back to the clerk and studied him carefully.

Judd was becoming uncomfortable when the old man spoke. "Young feller," he said, "you 'pear honest to me. I wall to put this money in the safe 'till mornin'. I don't trust cousin Tillie's man a mite." He took the purse from the woman and handed it to Judd. Judd took it, fumbling deftly well that he couldn't put it in the safe; that was beyond his domain.

The man was saying wistfully, "That's nine hundred of 'em in that. We saved quite a spell for this."

Judd muttered something unintelligible as the trusting pair made their way off. He was left standing with the nine hundred. Four hundred dollars more than he needed! He looked at the clock on the wall. It's ticking was suddenly like a volley of rhythmic hammers. Eight-fifteen—thirty minutes until the only night train to the city pulled in. The train would take him to the city that had music—and lights.

He stood there, a solitary figure, his imagination playing merry scenes that were now within his reach. His own apartment crowded with friendly people and shining with lights of brilliant hues... And all at once another sort of light came into his vision. Light's that had no color and starry lights that shone from the eyes of a charmed old lady—a bride-to-be. And still again appeared a different sort of light, proud, defiant, that was the possession of the eyes of the groom.

"We saved quite a spell for that."

But sometimes that had always threatened the cash register still persisted. It was saying that the little hell-town had a heart; a great big heart that would shower the poor couple after he was far beyond apprehension. They wouldn't suffer, and he would gain.

The clock on the wall struck note in a startling interruption of his thoughts. Eight-thirty. It left a dismal echo in the store to remind him that he had been standing there fifteen minutes.

The purse was still clutched tightly in his hand. He wished suddenly he had the train might come at once, so that he need hesitate no longer.

Suddenly he whirled around. The door had opened and the old man was again entering. Judd dropped the purse into his pocket.

The old mountaineer leaned on the counter. "Jes' thought I'd run back 'n ask ya to go 'long to the courthouse tomorrow," he said, then added confidentially, "I never liked Cousin Tillie's man nohow. He's got wicked eyes, not straight like mast folks—like yourn are."

Judd Baines' eyes fell, then lifted suddenly as a train whistled shrilly. The eight forty-five!

The engine had stopped and was panting impatiently at its inactivity. Judd stood fascinated until the panting began to quicken. Bells rang warningly, and then the panting became a steady purr.

Then, to the old man's astonishment, he laughed. A laugh that held a world of relief. He stretched his neck and ran his handkerchief around the inside of his collar.

"What's a matter—" His trusting friend wanted to know.

"That train." Judd motioned in the direction of the station. "I'm just glad it wasn't early."

The old fellow's brow wrinkled in puzzlement. Then he, too, laughed in a bewildered manner. He had dismissed as something he couldn't understand.

And he was right about that. But the next morning, when a happy ol' man opened a decrepit purse to pay for his marriage license, and nine hundred pennies rolled out, Judd Baines blinked at the pile of coppers and then understood many things. Among which was that honesty—even fortunate honesty—pay.

Germany Given Free Hand by Italy to Deal with Czechs

DUCE MAY URGE CZECH GOVT TO BE 'REASONABLE'

Believes Sudeten German Problem One For Countries to Decide

SHOW WASHED OUT

State Dinner Will be Highlight of Hitler's Visit

Rome, May 7.—(AP)—Premier Mussolini, according to German sources, has agreed to give Germany a free hand in Czechoslovakia, so far as they interested.

Mussolini was said to have promised, during a conversation last night with Joachim von Ribbentrop, being diplomatic pressure to bear upon the Czechoslovak government to be "reasonable" in meeting German demands.

The German sources said Mussolini agreed Italy was a disinterested party in Czechoslovakia, and that the Sudeten German problem was one which concerned only the Germans and Czechoslovakia.

Might Stabilize Peace

Mussolini was reported to have expressed hope Germany would be able to solve the problem "on her own strength," and also was quoted as having expressed the conviction that a solution of the German problem in Czechoslovakia would contribute to the stabilization of European peace.

After the Dictators had talked in private for an hour, the German Foreign Minister, Joachim von Ribbentrop, and Count Galeazzo Ciano, Italian Foreign Minister, were called in and the conversations continued for another hour.

Mussolini's pet project—rejuvenation of the power pact alignment—was reported to have been the chief topic of discussion. The German sources, indicated willingness to join in such a pact (involving Italy, Great Britain, Italy and Germany) but left no doubt he

Must Be True to Their Religion To Be True to Adopted Land

Windsor, Ont., May 7 (CP)—Canada's new citizens of foreign birth and extraction must give full loyalty to their adopted country unless they are true to their religion in the opinion of St. Rev. Monsignor Isaie Jouvy, Prosyr Galen of the Greek Orthodox Church for the Patriarchate of Antioch.

Because of that belief and a desire to unite all Greek Orthodox communicants, regardless of their racial strains, into a brotherly community, Mr. Jouvy is in Windsor to preach Sunday.

"There is not enough religion today," he said, in announcing the intention of reviving interest in the church and ends arousing to bury warring factions of the church closer together. He explained that differences of opinion between communicants of the Greek Orthodox Communion have not been caused by any questions of dogma—rather by administrative friction."

ONT. GOVERNMENT GIVEN AUTHORITY TO BUILD BRIDGE

Bridge Niagara River at Same Spot Collapsed Bridge Stood

N.Y. MUST CONCUR

Ottawa, May 7 (CP)—After being "talked" right through the House of Commons' Private Members' hour, the Ontario Government will get authority to build a bridge over the Niagara gorge here at last passed through committee stage.

All it needs now, so far as the Commons is concerned, is third and final reading and that is always a formality. The measure then will go to the senate. Last night it passed Senate.

Conservative opposition, particularly from Ontario members of the party, prevented passage of the bill the night before. It was given consideration previously this session. Repeatedly Conservatives spoke on the measure at such length that private members' hour expired before any action could be taken.

Passed in Twenty Minutes

Last night the clock only twenty minutes for it to be reviewed clause by clause. Similarly, Conservative Bennett, who had objected to the bill previously, had succeeded in having one amendment to it passed made objections to some clauses. But there was none of the concerted Conservative attack that had been levelled at the measure before.

The bill would give a company power to build the connecting end of a bridge to span the gorge in

CRIES OF BABY AWAKEN FAMILY AND ALL SAVED

Fire of Unknown Origin Destroys Four-Roomed House

LOSS IS $3,000

Windsor, Ont., May 7.—(CP)—Cries of a three-month baby today saved the lives of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Pare and their two children when fire of unknown origin destroyed their four-roomed home in Sandwich West Township. Only a few belongings were saved, so fast did the flames sweep through the building.

The human alarm was baby Ruth Ann who began to cry, wakening her father and mother. Mr. Pare found the kitchen was a mass of flames. Pare dashed to the bedroom of Alexander from his crib, while Mrs. Pare smothered Ruth Ann, then wrapped the blanket and dressed in the open air.

Pare called upon his father, Albert Pare, who lies 300 feet away, and together they poured pails of water on the flames but to no avail. The roof of the two-storey building collapsed a short time later. Loss was estimated at $3,000.

Both the fire-fighting forces available, Pare called the Windsor fire department, but was informed they could not go out on city call because they had no authority to go outside the incorporated area for service. However, they responded a short time later but by that time even the walls of the building had collapsed.

DEMOCRACIES TO FLOURISH BY SIDE OF 'JUGGERNAUTS'

Sir Samuel Hoare Hits at Anti-Semitism of Germany

'GOOD COMPANIONSHIP'

"No Jewish Question in Britain" He States

Blackpool, England, May 7.—(AP)—Sir Samuel Hoare today declared his belief democracies can flourish by the side of the "juggernaut machines" if Democratic peoples face facts.

The Home Secretary, in a speech to a Rotary International Club conference, said the democracies never could countenance for themselves the anti-semitism of the "German dictator" or the "Italian dictator" or the distinction between rich and poor.

Without mentioning Italy, he made a strong plea for "good companionship" among nations and said this was the basis of British foreign policy.

Sir Samuel said "neighborliness" is the first duty of democracy, add-

'WILL PUT TEETH' IN DESERTION ACT CONANT STATES

"Too Many Slackers Evading Act And Passing Burden"

CHILD WELFARE

Supreme Court of Canada Will Decide on Four Acts

Ottawa, Ont., May 7.—(CP)—Ontario will put "teeth" in its deserted wives' and children's maintenance act and in other legislation dealing with child welfare after a decision by the Supreme Court of Canada is handed down, Attorney-General Gordon Conant told the Ontario County Children's Aid Society last night.

"When the court's decision has been handed down, which I expect will be late this fall, it will be necessary for us to meet the situation with legislation," the Attorney-General said.

Too Many Evaders

There are too many slackers evading the act and passing the burden on to the public, Mr. Conant said.

The four acts before the court are the Adoption Act, Unmarried Parents' and Children's Protection Act and the Deserted Wives' and Children's Maintenance Act. The court will decide if they are under jurisdiction of the provincial judges and magistrates' courts or if cases under any of the four can be tried only by a county judge, Mr. Conant said.

Improve Quality Canadian Cheese Member Urges

Ottawa, May 7 (CP)—Improvement of the quality of Canadian cheese was a matter which the Dominion Dairy Department should study, T. A. Thompson (Con., Lanark) urged in the House of Commons last night. The House was in committee on the agricultural estimates.

Some time ago Agricultural Minister Gardiner had deplored the decrease in exports of Canadian cheese and had conferred with the Ontario Provincial Minister of Agriculture on this matter. But the practical results of the conferences, if any, had emerged from it, were not reflected in improved quality, Mr. Thompson said.

Canadian cheese was not advertised in England and the greatest new single potential prospects of increasing the market for the Canadian commodity had been lost through the recent Ontario government when it closed the Canadian Cheese Exchange in London.

New Zealand cheese had not crowded the Canadian product out of the British market. It was the quality of the product that had moved from it. Mr. Thompson urged concentration of the appropriate department of government on matters involving improvement of quality.

New York, May 7 (AP)—Because tomorrow is mother's day, Arthur Miller, 34, steadfastly refused today to give police his address.

Miller, charged with robbing Julius Grossman, a chiropodist, of $37, said he was afraid his mother would learn of his predicament.

"I'll not tell you my address," he repeated doggedly. Grossman told police Miller robbed him at gunpoint.

Warn Germans, Czechs Against Violence Over Minority Issue

Berlin, May 7.—(CP-Havas)—Anglo-French decisions regarding Czechoslovakia and its minorities were communicated to the British German Foreign Ministry today by the British Ambassador, Sir Nevile Henderson.

In the absence of Foreign Minister Joachim von Ribbentrop at his post in Rome with Chancellor Hitler, Sir Nevile was received by Ernst Woermann, Under-Secretary for Foreign Affairs.

The object of the Demarche, decided upon during the conference in London of French and British statesmen, is to further peaceful settlement of the problem created by the presence of 3,500,000 Germans in Czechoslovakia.

Prudence Is Threshed Out

It was believed the Ambassador's visit was of an informative character.

BY-ELECTION TIDE RUNNING AGAINST NATIONAL GOV'T

Chamberlain, However, Appears Able to Hold Party in House

COUNCIL OF ACTION

By GEORGE HAMBLETON

London, May 7 (CP)—The by-election tide is running against the National Government.

In the House of Commons Prime Minister Chamberlain has scored success after success. The threatened Conservative revolt, which followed Chancellor Hitler's seizure of Austria disappeared in a brief week-end.

Impressive majorities supported successive developments of Mr. Chamberlain's foreign policy, including the agreements with Italy and Eire.

But in by-election battles the government has been less fortunate. In about 40 by-elections since October, the government met Labor in straight fights. Five of the seats were vacated by government members, two by Labor members.

Captured Four Government Seats.

Labor not only retained easily its own seats but captured four government seats. In North Islington a government majority of 13,385 was converted into a Labor majority of 1,206. In Dewsbury a government majority of 7,250 was converted into a labor majority of 2,161. In West Fulham the government majority of 14,605 was cut to Labor

SEAMAN TO PAY VERY SMALL FINE HAD PHOTOGRAPHS

Canadian Will Likely be Released by Japanese Authorities

'JUST UNLUCKY'

Tokyo, May 7 (CP)—Joseph Gilbertson, young Canadian seaman, was expected to be released from Japanese custody today after payment of what the Canadian Consul considered would be "a small fine" for illegal possession of harbor photographs.

The 34-year-old Vancouver man was placed in custody in an hotel in the Japanese port of Osaka after being taken from the freighter Heathcote on which he was fourth engineer.

The Canadian Legation here said it was expected a small fine would be levied but address to H. Shimizu, Japanese Consul-General in Vancouver, said Gilbertson was fined ten yen (about $4.73) in Osaka police court.

(In Vancouver Friday night Memphi said if Gilbertson had paid the "very, very light" fine he likely was a free man.)

The Tokyo Legation of the Canadian government was asked to have the release of Gilbertson and members of the crew of the British steamship Heathcote, returning to Vancouver by trans-Pacific liner Empress of Asia was paid to Japanese interests, said Gilbertson had been detained

Resident Heard Shouts From River Bank Late at Night

Buckingham, Que., May 7 (CP)—A verdict of accidental death was returned today at an inquest here into the drowning of Fred C. Betts, Conservative member of parliament for London, who drowned Tuesday in the Blanche River in a wooded section of Papineau County.

Buckingham, Que., May 7.—(CP)—Swift waters of the Blanche River today yielded the body of Fred C. Betts, 42-year-old Conservative member of the House of Commons for London. He drowned in the stream, about 30 miles north of Gatineau, while on a fishing trip Tuesday.

Identification of the body was established by D. C. Betts of Toronto, a cousin, after a grappling party took it from 10 feet of water in a small bay about 100 feet from a slippery, tree-clad shore. Eugene Bissonnette, Provincial Police for Quebec Attorney-General's Department and three Mayo residents recovered the body shortly before 8 a.m. E.D.T. after grappling since daybreak.

SIX GUESS TIME SON IS RIVER GOES OUT

Fairbanks, Alaska, May 7 (AP)

The ice went out in the Tanana River at Nenana at 9:36 a.m. E.D.T. today, beating opening in 1937 by one day. Since 1917 when records were first kept on the breaking time by the ice, there was a wide range from 1:00 to 1:00. The carrying ice moved the marker staked out in the middle of the river and was wire attached to a timing device when pulled taut by the sudden crash.

The annual ice breaking signalizes the official start of the season opening interior Alaska's navigation.

Why the Weather?

By Major A. H. Thiessen

Science Service Meteorologist

Fashions in rainfall fashion fall follows the several parts of this country, certain fashions or types. That of the Rockies we have what is known as the summer maximum type. In this type the greater part of the rainfall occurs in the warmer months. This feature is very pronounced in Florida, but also in New England and in Ohio. The other great type is called the Pacific. It is the greater portion of the rainfall occurs during the winter months. In the northern Pacific coast states the difference between summer and winter rainfall is much more pronounced than in the northern portion.

THE WEATHER

Toronto, May 7 —(CP)—Synopsis: Rain has occurred in southern Quebec, though except for light showers in a few districts the weather elsewhere in Dominion Canada has been fair. It continues cool in the west and also somewhat more occurred in southeast; Manitoba also light showers or snowflurries in Saskatchewan. Moderate temperatures are centred over the southwest states, northwest Quebec and Newfoundland with high pressure covering the Northwest Territories.

Lake Superior: Moderate to fresh northwesterly winds; partly cloudy and cool today and Sunday.

Manitoba: Partly cloudy and cool today and Sunday.

Saskatchewan: Northerly winds; partly cloudy and cool with occasional flurries or light showers in southern districts. Sunday, partly cloudy and cool.

Alberta: Generally fair today and Sunday but not much change in temperature.

CAR TAKES YOUTH TO HIS DEATH

Plunges Into Galops Canal From Railway Near Cardinal

Cardinal, Ont., May 7.—(CP)—Bruce Wingard, 20, son of George Wingard of Williamsburg, Ont., was drowned near here early today when his automobile plunged from highway into the Galops Canal. Cardinal is on the St. Lawrence River, 50 miles east of Kingston.

Wingard was returning to Williamsburg when the accident occurred on a curve. He was alone in the front seat of the car when the machine was piloted onto the steamship Knowlton.

Summoned from nearby Morrisburg, a diver recovered the body of the car lay in 40 feet of water to prepare for hoisting the car.

Only witness of the accident was Ernest Stanley Gourlay who saw the car leave the road, crash into the canal bank at a 45 degree angle which it went under for more than 200 feet. Leaving the top of the bank at the same angle the car hurled through the air for 150 feet, to the water where it plunged down five feet below. The car bounced down forty feet and plunged into the water.

OCTAVIAN COGA RUMANIA, DIES

Headed Nationalist Gov't. For Few Years Early in Year

Bucharest, Rumania, May 7 (AP) —Octavian Goga, 57, who headed a fascist-like Nationalist Christian government for a few turbulent months early this year, died here. Goga resigned as premier Feb. 10.

King Carol's commissioners took over the premier's cabinet minister, to form a new government Dec. 30, which is now in power. Goga died, his administration imposed drastic restrictions on Jews, the basis for a broad anti-Semitic and, nationalistic program.

The country was sharply divided over Christian issues and business suffered heavily. In the end, with the nation's economy endangered, King Carol summoned Dr. Octavian Cristes to form another government.

Goga, a lawyer, was known as "The Nightingale of Transylvania", his native land.

He left six children.

LOCK IS BROKEN

Woodstock, Ont., May 7—(CP)—Some person or persons unknown broke the lock on a gasoline pump at Porter's service station at Eastwood early today and drained seven gallons of the contents—water in the pump had been out of use for some time.

Chinese Guerrilla Troops Threaten To Annihilate Japanese Garrison

Shanghai, May 7.—(AP)—Three thousand Chinese guerrilla troops, fighting recklessly in the streets of Nantungchow, threatened today to annihilate the Japanese garrison of that city's west bank on the north bank of the Yangtze River, 60 miles north of Shanghai.

Japanese reinforcements were rushed from Shanghai in a supersize effort to save the defended garrison and retain possession of the important city.

Loss of Nantungchow would cut supply and communication lines serving a Japanese army of 10,000 men operating in North Kiangsu Province. This army was last reported 25 miles south of the Yangtze rail railway, fighting in the vicinity of Tungtai.

Foreigners arriving from Yangtze ports said scores of Chinese civilians already had been killed and hundreds were hiding in terror while hand-to hand fighting raged inside the walls of Nantungchow.

The Chinese guerrilles infiltrated Nantungchow three days ago and attacked by surprise, inflicting heavy casualties upon the Japanese garrison, which numbered only 300 men at the start. Remnants of the garrison were last reported fighting for their lives.

Ontario Pleads for Control Over Income and Mining Tax

(By Carl Reinke)

(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Toronto, May 7.—(CP)—Ontario's plea for full control over income taxes and exemption of mining profits from Dominion Corporation taxation was before the Royal Commission today, with the repeated assurance that the Province wanted to live on good terms with the provincial neighbors.

The Ontario Government's presentation wound up yesterday with Attorney-General Gordon Conant declaring that Confederation must be not optimistic but determined that current problems must be met in the same way confederation was brought about by conferences.

Chairman R. C. Bowell gave his hearty endorsation to the idea. The commissioners met in the city which was primarily to dig out the real facts of the situation as a basis for positive discussions.

With the Government's statement completed the Commission last night were dinner guests of Lieutenant-Governor Albert R. Matthews. The day they are being conducted on a tour of the Niagara Peninsula by the Provincial Government. Monday they briefly resume work here by receiving some remaining submission of provincial and national organizations before leaving for Quebec Tuesday.

Parents to Decide Whether It Will Be Death or Blindness for Their Baby

Chicago, May 7—(AP)— Baby blindness threatened by a fatal social crib today while her distraught parents wavered on decision that would mean life or death for her.

Chairman R. C. Bowell gave his hearty endorsation to the idea. The commissioners met in the city which was primarily to dig out the real facts of the situation as a basis for positive discussions.

With the Government's statement completed the Commission last night were dinner guests of Lieutenant-Governor Albert R. Matthews. The day they are being conducted on a tour of the Niagara Peninsula by the Provincial Government. Monday they briefly resume work here by receiving some remaining submission of provincial and national organizations before leaving for Quebec Tuesday.

Mr. Conant yesterday was far from depressed at the tangle of Dominion-Provincial Confederation at the moment. He did not think Canada had any reason to fear. Australia solved through conferences and agreement without constitutional amendment. He did not think Canadians had by any means exhausted their genius for government and compromise.

The present situation stripped of its verbiage and fluff was fundamentally due to the fact the provinces did not control themselves equal conditions after seventy years of Confederation, he submitted. This resulted in a tendency to transfer revenue from one section of the country to another through the Government held alarming. The Province of Ontario, he said, in the Dominion should assume a lot of the grief of the less fortunate provinces and then extend its tax system which already bore heavily upon Ontario.

The province had developed a structure "of its own with current commitments and future needs which made "imperative" the "return to the province of direct taxation and its natural resources, he said.

Mr. Hershman's child's maternal grandfather, said yesterday the young parents had reached the fateful decision to "let fauate take its course." But today the latter said no final decision had been made.

Baby Colan is afflicted with glioma in both eyes. Physicians said medical science could spread sprayed to her brain and cause death if an operation is performed. Only hope of sight would be removed in an operation.

Two parents turned to friends, relatives, brain surgeons and a spiritual adviser for help. They received conflicting advice. Physicians generally said the risk of the operation could cost the child's sight and that death would ensue, probably within two months, if no operation were performed.

Until two weeks ago the baby was believed normal in every respect, then Dr. Hershman noticed a fray in the left eye. Specialists subsequently confirmed his diagnosis—glioma of the retina in both eyes. Physicians declared they knew of no certain cure.

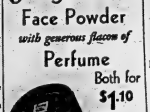
ARM IS FRACTURED FOR FOURTH TIME

A visitor to Campbellford where she has been regularly for the past few days with friends, Mrs. George Carlaw of Hamilton, received a broken arm when she fell on stone and cry as the result of a heavy fall in a Campbellford store this week. It is the fourth time that the same right arm has been broken. She was reported to the victim, Mrs. Carlaw is receiving treatment at the Campbellford hospital.

HORSE FOUND TO BE IN POOR CONDITION

Acting in humanitarian interests local police today examined a horse that was seen hauling a heavy load on along the city streets. The animal was thoroughly examined by P. C. Evans and Sergt. Major Ingham and found to be in no condition to perform its duties. The owner was warned to turn the animal out to pasture until such time the animal became more fitted for service. Several sores were found on the animal's collar-boning horse apparently where the harness had caused the abrasions.



TO INSTAL NEW LIGHTS ON GOVERNMENT DOCK

Tenders are at present being called for and work is expected to be started soon on the relighting of the government dock, it was announced today by members of the Trenton Harbor Commission. In rewiring the dock, some changes in the lighting standards are to be made. One new light is to be erected on the new dock addition on the east and north end, while the iron standards will be furnished with special blue phase globes of expensive make, it was claimed.

DIFFERENCES OF TIME CONFUSE TRAVELLERS

"Toronto is on fast time, Oshawa is not; Port Hope is on fast time, Cobourg is not; Trenton is on fast time, Belleville is not. What a mess that makes along No. 2 highway," remarks Editor Harry Moore of the Trenton Courier-Advocate. "And, incidentally, the travellers are not happy about the whole thing also, I'm told," he adds.

SPRING PRODUCE HEADS OFFERING ON CITY MARKET

Prices Show Firm Tone — Asparagus, Rhubarb Plentiful

EGGS FIRM

With new spring vegetables and flowers forming a bright background the city market presented a colorful appearance today as a large crowd of Saturday morning shoppers availed themselves of the new produce of farm and garden.

In spite of the fact that new produce has been available for nearly two weeks, prices showed little or no change from the original quotations. Asparagus, the market showed a firm tone, with little or no fluctuations in any particular commodity.

New asparagus found a ready display of new vegetables selling briskly to a lively public during the early hours. Pound bunches were offered at 30, 35 and 40 cents per pound although the majority of vendors were selling at the popular quantities at 10 cents each.

New onions was scarce selling at two bunches for 15 cents. Onions are varying in size, quality and potential as were new radishes with the former selling at 15 cents and the latter at 5 cents per bunch. Rhubarb was plentiful in various lots with bunches selling at the main at 5 cents each and dozen lots offered at 40 cents.

Potatoes Plentiful.

Old potatoes for eating purposes were plentiful being offered at 65 cents for 10 pounds. Seed potatoes were available selling at $1.25 per 90-pound bag with a smaller size offered at $1 per bag. Other winter vegetables showing a marked decrease in quantity showed little or no change from prevailing prices of the previous week-end.

Cabbage plants were offered in varying quantities today selling at 50 cents per flat of 80 plants while onion sets were offered at $1.00 per flat of two thousand plants. New Columbia Rose Raspberry canes were offered at 10 cents each.

Fresh eggs showed a marked decrease in quantity in the main and met although quotations showed no change from those in force a week ago with "A" selects selling at 23 cents per dozen, medium at 21 cents per dozen, pullets and some ungraded stock at 18 and 23 cents per dozen respectively.

Farmers' butter showed a small decrease in quantity and was maintained firm at 25 cents per two-pound roll with a few pounds selling generally at 38 and 40 cents.

First Broilers Seen.

The first broiler chickens of the season appeared on their debut in small quantity today with some choice young birds selling at from 60 cents up to 90 cents per pair. Selling was brisk in this line and vendors disposed of their stock in the main in early hour. Fowl and other birds showed little change from last week's high at $1.35 each.

Fish showed a fine display greeted lovers of this food with fresh white-fish offered at 20 cents per pound and fresh pickerel at 20 cents. The inevitable mudcat was again in evidence in the market selling cold or to a brisk market at 10 cents a pound. Pike at 10 cents and smelts rockfish at four for 26 cents, and a few eels at various prices rounded out the offering.

Young pigs reached a new city market high today with seven-weeks old shoats selling at from 45 to 47 each. Meats showed little or no change in this particular branch of the market.

LATE F. C. BETTS WELL KNOWN HERE

Vacationed For Years at Weslemkoon Lake With Friends

"He was one of the finest chaps it was ever my privilege to know," Mr. Sterry Robertson, head of the firm of Quick and Robertson, stated today in tribute to the late F. C. Betts, Conservative M.P. for London, Ont., whose body was found in the Blanche River, Quebec, early today, after a disappearance of four days. He had been drowned while fishing.

The late Mr. Beggs who was associated in law with Mr. G. Robertson, son of Mr. Stewart Robertson, at London, was the husband of the former Miss Betts of Belleville, a born girl who was the daughter of Mr. Thomas Moore, who in turn was connected with the Canada Steel Company Rolling Mills here before that company removed to Hamilton.

"He was an ardent fisherman," Mr. Robertson stated, "and spent the last ten years at our summer camp at Weslemkoon Lake. At times he was prone to wander off by himself and suggest on fishing expedition but we never had any cause for worry. He was a wonderful chap and very popular with all with whom he came in contact. His death comes as a great shock to us, as he was an intimate friend of the family."

Splendid Performance of All-Star Cast From City Schools

SCHOOLS HELP PROJECT

Before a capacity house in the auditorium of the Collegiate Institute last evening pupils of the city's public school, the Collegiate and Vocational Institute combined in a splendid show of the most sparkling revues of the season.

An all-star vaudeville concert held in aid of the Quinte Bay Beaches Association to further the plan constructed of this important project the volunteer performance was refreshing in its simplicity and unrehearsed charm marred with a smoothness at times of finished professional entertainment.

Individual Skits

Worthy of note were the individual skits and turns of the solo artists and groups. In the concert prepared program which was made more complete in perfection through the absence of prompting, or forgotten lines by even the tiniest performer.

As chairman of the evening, Alderman Laurie Lewis, welcomed the large attendance, reviewing the reason for the concert.

"We of the Beaches have for the past three years and more endeavored, in spite of disappointments and lack of enthusiasm on the part of residents, in the construction of civic facilities for the most helpful have been the efforts of the school teachers and principals of our city schools in the presentation of this evening's concert, and to all we owe our debt of gratitude. We are grateful to them for their enthusiasm this evening.

Referring to the waterfront development, Alderman Lewis declared optimistic progress of the scenic beauty which would be part of Belleville if the Beaches Association could but; finish this work, through the assistance of citizens of Belleville.

R. Moncrieff Praised

To the president of the Beaches Association Alderman Lewis paid tribute.

"When that work is finally finished, a mark of appreciation should be shown Mr. Moncrieff whose interest and efforts toward the construction of this project have amazed all who have been privileged to work with him," he said.

Opening the program, a nursery skit by pupils of King George School in which the tiny actors took the part of well known fairy book characters, drew applause from of the many present. The scene which depicted in its entirety the Three Kittens, Jack and Jill, Miss Muffet and the Spider; Humpty Dumpty, Grimm's Sleeping Beauty of the well-known nursery character—Old King Cole; Mary and Her Little Lamb; Little Boy Blue; Simple Simon; Jack Horner and others, was beautifully pictured and cleverly worded, the combined pupils portraying the tribulations of the various characters in words of well adapted poems.

Principal Writes Play

A "Truth Machine" a play written and directed by Miss (Principal) C. Wilkin of Queen Victoria School which had as its main effect a large cabinet which was used to show the actors in this skit told the truth, the whole truth and nothing but the truth, had its amusing complication, revealing the frailties of human nature and finally exploding into disorganized parts when the complexities of one final story became too much for its mechanism.

Band Performance.

Repeated encores greeted the efforts of St. Michael's School band, one of the newer musical organizations of the city, in which the appointments and efficiency of the individual performances on regulation instruments. Leading the band, Bandmaster Allan was the first number, a selection, also, was the first Jig by Misses Mary and Jean Mc-Cann and Gloria Barrett, pupils of Johnstone's Academy. Most novel number of the night was the Jazz Antique by the uniformed Boys' Jessie Jenkins and Robert Allore, and the Fairy Waltz by Misses Mary and Catherine Grant and Catherine Barrett, St. Michael's Academy were concluded by the physical training class acrobatics of the Collegiate class under the direction of Mr. John Doran. Here physical discipline among the school's stalwart pupils was prettily shown to its best advantage by the uniformed boys working with the snap and precision of professional tumblers and acrobats.

"Alice Blue Gown" Legend

One of the most colorful of the evening's performance was the skit Jazzicana on the theme of the "Alice blue gown" pupils of Queen Mary School, who portrayed in song and costume the story book legend of "Alice Blue Gown", "Charlie McCarthy" acted by two pupils of the same school was presented with entertaining punishment and versatility, bringing gales of mirth to the audience by the two in apt sayings of the "dummy".

Most pleasing also was the second gymnastic display by the Pupils of Queen Alexandra School which the numerous youths of physical perfection engaged in the most difficult and strenuous gymnastics and pyramid building.

Dance Band.

During the evening the band of the Collegiate, under the able direction of Mr. Ross Hunter provided dance music for the occasion, while during the concert readings were given by Miss Florence Gibson of Queen Victoria School, Miss Shirley Flynn of St. Michael's and Betty Barr of Queen Mary School. The Collegiate Glee Club under the direction of Miss Hunter concluded the evening's fine performance.

Special mention of the work of arranging the most successful concert was made by officials of the Beaches Association and thanks tendered to Principals A. C. Wilkin, C. I. Frederick, W. S. Anderson, L. J. Mode, Sister Mary Hilda and Sister Mary Mercedes of St. Michael's Academy; Miss Ross Hunter and teachers of all schools who contributed to the entertainment. Appreciation for the generous assistance by the local Stewart-Warner Corporation and Wray's Home Furnishings was also expressed.

Police Blotter

Arrested on charges of issuing worthless cheques, a man who police say is C. E. Rockwell, Prince Edward County, appeared before a local justice of the Peace today and was remanded until Monday. Drew, by was arrested yesterday by Constables Constable Fred Izard following two complaints registered with the police relative to the alleged uttering of worthless cheques by the accused.

Mr. A. Buck, 323 Albert street, reported the finding of a child's wagon and a bicycle on his premises recently. It was subsequently claimed by the owner, but without success." Mr. Buck told the police. He also added the playthings had been protected by him at night, but left out in full sight throughout the daytime in hopes the owner would claim his property.

Two speeders were apprehended exceeding the speed limit by Traffic Officer Ellis yesterday, while a truck driver was stopped and upon examination of brakes of the vehicle, they were reported to be defective. Charges are being preferred in each incident.

Petroleum transients were billited in the cell block last night.

FRANKFORD GROUP PRESENTS PLAY

Interesting Program Under Tabernacle Church

Last evening an interesting program was presented at Tabernacle Church under the auspices of Group No. 1 of the W.A. A varied musical program preceded the presentation of the play, "Mr. Pelkins Comes to Mentionfield" by the Group of Frankford.

The meeting opened with "O Canada", Rev. D. T. McClinlock presided and expressed the appreciation of the audience for the talent from Frankford. Mr. Willshire sang "Heigh Ho Come To the Fair", Reading, Mrs. Tripp, "When Father Rode the Goat". Duet, Mrs. Bradley and Mr. Wishart, Guitar solo, Master Don Tripp. Piano solo, Miss Bentenfield. Duet, Mrs. P. Cornell, "Chinese Lullaby", Reading, Mrs. Boneham, "Columbia, Crunin' Solo, Mr. Bennett. "An Old Fashioned Street In An Old Fashioned Town", Musical selection, Lohnes brothers. Solo, Master Jack Willshire, "I Passed By Your Window". Piano solo, Miss Florence Davis. Accompanist, Miss Ruby Tripp.

Story of Play Given.

Rev. Lane of Frankford gave a few introductory remarks regarding the history of the play, which portrayed the arrival of the new minister and his family in Mentionfield. The Ladies' Aid met at the parsonage to welcome them. The minister's wife objected to find that their four little girls were really four little boys. Mrs. Pelkins and her daughters at the first opportunity entertained the Ladies' Aid at their new home. Of course all the ladies of the village were there to show their family just how entertaining should be done. The reaction of the daughters was amusing, however, after this effort to show the Pelkins family just how entertaining should be done. The reaction of the daughters was amusing, however, after this effort to show the Pelkins family just how entertaining should be done. The reaction of the daughters was amusing, however, after this demonstration the Pelkin family decided to return to Hemlock Pass, their last charge, where Just Plain Folks like themselves are appreciated. The characters were particularly well chosen, and all deserve credit for their performances. The cast was as follows:

Mr. Pelkins (the new minister), Mrs. A. Montgomery; Mrs. Pelkins, Mrs. Ross Parkin; Amanda (their daughter), Mrs. Russell Parkin; Jane (their daughter), Miss Marjorie Forbes; Matilda (their daughter), Mrs. Lloyd Bonisteel; Susannah (their daughter), Mrs. S. Colerbeck; Mrs. Hemlock Bentenfield's First Lady), Mrs. Geo. Spencer; Mary (her maid), Mrs. Jack Bonisteel; Mrs. Deerville Ladies' Aid, Members of the Triple Group.

A social hour followed between acts by "The Four Aces and the Joker", after which the group closed "God Save the National Anthem."

The group entertainers were entertained after the program by the ladies of Group No. 1 in a social half hour and refreshments.

ARTHUR W. MEEKS PLEADS GUILTY TO CHARGE LAID

Remanded in Custody Until Monday For Sentence

POOLE COMMITTED

Will Appear For Trial in Next Court of Jurisdiction

Arthur W. Meeks of this city appeared before Magistrate K. J. Butler, K.C., in adjourned police court Friday afternoon facing a serious charge that implicated a 19-year-old girl which to the surprise of the court and after stating he did not desire counsel, Meeks pleaded guilty to a charge of unlawfully assaulting a girl, under the age of 13 years, and was later remanded in custody until Monday for sentence.

Meeks elected summary trial and after entering his plea, Crown Attorney H. C. Thomas, K.C., outlined the case. "As I understand it the accused man had a young girl come to his home under the pretence of giving her a pair of shoes. He not only assaulted the girl, but threatened hey and warned her not to make mention of the fact." Crown Attorney Donnan stated.

Meeks also warned for his arrest had been issued, gave himself up to the police last Sunday and has been in custody since then.

Committed For Trial.

Clarence Poole, Belleville, was committed for trial at the next court of competent jurisdiction at the conclusion of the evidence submitted by the Crown on a charge of receiving in his possession cigarettes that were believed to have been stolen.

Poole reserved the right of election through his counsel, Jacob Goodman, local barrister, at the opening of the proceedings, His Worship holding that a prima facie case had been established. The accused was charged with retaining in his possession a quantity of cigarettes the property of Lock Bros., Campbellford, and which were alleged obtained by a person unknown by an offence punishable on indictment; to wit: theft and said Clarence Poole then knowing the cigarettes to have been so obtained, contrary to section 396 of the Criminal Code. Numerous witnesses were called, including Mr. Lock, who stated he had lost 10,000 Buckingham cigarettes in a shipment from the Tuckett Company of Hamilton.

Cigarettes Produced.

Sergeant Harry Thompson and other investigating police presented a large quantity of Buckingham cigarettes, allegedly found in Poole's possession. Mr. Goodman held the cigarettes had been purchased by his client from a stranger, however. The carton in which the cigarettes were found, however, was later identified as the identical carton to have been shipped to the Lock Bros.

At the conclusion of the evidence adduced by Crown Attorney H. C. Donnan, K.C., Mr. Goodman held the prosecution had failed to prove the goods found in his client's possession had ever been stolen.

"I'm quite convinced there are peculiar things surrounding these cigarettes and sufficient evidence to put the accused on trial," stated His Worship as he committed the accused for trial. Poole applied for bail today and it was allowed.

A similar charge preferred against his brother, Harry Poole, was adjourned until Monday at the request of Mr. Goodman.

'Crazy Drivers in Toronto' Reports Trailer Traveller

TRAILER TOUR BOOSTED BELLEVILLE DISTRICT

Belleville, May 7—Thousands of people inquired about Belleville and Hastings county when Arthur Jones toured through the U.S. in a trailer.

Mr. Jones returned with his advertising trailer and was greeted by Mayor Jamieson Bone. In his trailer Mr. Jones saw too many crazy drivers there," he asserted. "The traffic lights are on the side of the street instead of in the centre of the intersections."

"I passed out innumerable campbells advertising the fishing in Hastings county," he said. Thousands of people asked me questions concerning the city and county."

"Driving conditions in Toronto are the worst I encountered during the entire trip, Mr. Jones said. "There are too many crazy drivers there," he asserted. "The traffic lights are on the side of the street instead of in the centre of the intersections."

Boy's Father Discovers First Stamp Coil Made in Canada.

HAS ONLY SPECIMEN

Saint John, N.B. May 7—(CP)—As one stamp collector to another, Jayie Anglin, 10, has mailed an important letter to King George. The letter contained a specimen from the first coil of stamps ever made in Canada.

Both Jayie and his father, W. Arthur I. Anglin, a lawyer, are keen philatelists. The younger Anglin has been interested reading of newspaper items and notes in stamp journals about the King's collection.

When his father recently acquired sixteen rare specimens Jayie suggested the King might like one and the boy's father agreed. With collectors hitherto not even suspecting their existence, the stamps are so rare that they are unlisted in any catalog.

Jayie had another idea. He decided that the envelope addressed to the King and containing one of the 16 valuable stamps as a gift, should itself be a philatelic specimen. So he put on the envelope, as postage, stamps showing British sovereigns back to 1837 as well as one with the likenes of Princess Elizabeth.

Others included a two-cent stamp issued in 1897 to commemorate the diamond jubilee of Queen Victoria's reign; a two-cent stamp issued in 1908 to commemorate the tercentenary of the founding of Quebec City by Champlain in 1608 showing Edward VII and Queen Alexandra; a two-cent stamp issued in 1935 to commemorate the jubilee of the reign of George V and Queen Mary; a five-cent stamp issued in 1933 showing Edward VIII as Prince of Wales and a three-cent stamp issued in 1927 to commemorate 150 confederation of George VI and Queen Elizabeth.

In a small store Jayie's father discovered a coil of two-cent stamps issued in 1901. Stamps commonly used are sold in sheets but others come in coils or rolls for the use of large companies who buy big mail bushess. Coil stamps have perforations along top and bottom only but sheet stamps have perforations on the side as well.

Previously it was believed that the straight-sided coil stamps were first made in Canada in 1911. Three years later the supply ran out and an emergency coil was made for coils. Ordinary sheet stamps then were torn into strips of ten and pasted together with every fifth stamp overlapping the next one. Collectors called these overlapped stamps "paste-up pairs", and as there were only 1,800 of them they became prized by philatelists.

Philatelists' Gem

Anglin doubted that the coil with perforated sides and dated 1903 could be genuine but he bought it because the pre-cancellation mark (post offices sell pre-cancelled stamps to companies handling much mail, in order to save postal employees work) led him to believe the stamps might be a collector's gem.

Unrolling the coil, he found every tenth stamp was a paste-up pair. He also found that two kinds of pre-cancellation marks had been used and that one paste-up pair bore both marks. If the coil were genuine, he owned a stamp as rare as any in the world—and a stamp a male anywhere.

Jayie accompanied his father to Ottawa on a business trip. Experts there scrutinized the stamps and declared unanimously that the pasting had been done by the Canadian Bank Note Company, which makes stamps as well as currency. They also recalled that someone had once torn two sheets of stamps—300—into strips of ten and made a coil but nobody knew what happened to it.

Father and son then went to the philatelic division of the federal post office department for further confirmation. After thorough study the coil was declared genuine. Anglin had another one but strips of stamps made in Canada, and so far as known, the only coil made before 1912.

Originally the coil had 300 stamps and 19 paste-ups. As Anglin bought it, there were 16 paste-ups, including the apparently rare and only paste-up in the world with two pre-cancellation marks on it.

So Jayie mailed an important letter to King George VI, offering as a gift one of the 16 paste-ups.

BUILDING SHIP WITHOUT STEEL

Non-Magnetic Craft of Teak And Bronze Ordered by Admiralty

London, May 7—(CP)—The British Admiralty is having built at Dartmouth a non-magnetic 600-ton ship the second of its kind to be designed for magnetic survey work and which will replace the American vessel Carnegie, destroyed by an explosion off Samoa, in 1929.

The new vessel to cost £100,000 ($500,000), will be named Research. Her magnetic materials. The hull will be made of teak with bronze or other non-magnetic alloy bolts and girders. The engine and boilers also be of bronze, and the galley equipment will have no steel or iron. The crew will not be allowed to carry steel penknives. The Research will be brigantine-rigged.

CAMP COMMITTEE ARRANGE REUNION

Leaders in Training Camp Movement Meet at «Y'»

The Special Committee of the Leaders Training Camp to be held at Metro Lake, Ontario in the fall for Sunday School and Young People's Leaders met at the Y.M.C.A. last night to complete the final programme and billeting arrangements for the Camp Reunion to be held in Belleville over the week-end of May 21 and 22.

The group will register at the Y.M.C.A. where the opening banquet will be held. Reeve Ira Thrust, Canadian representative to Oxford will report on that Conference. Rev. S. B. McKee will introduce the camp staff and outline camp features. Recreation, church attendance and a trip to the camp, etc., etc., will provide happy hours for the campers as they gather to re-new friendships and prepare for this year's camp.

Misses Jessie Cunningham, Jean Shorey, Robina Tyrrell, Edith Looker; Messrs. Jack Clarke, Lionel Blaker, Mr. Bert Orr and J. R. Shortt represented the local churches at the meeting.

Moscow, Russia, reports that during the winter 500,000 visited its Central Park of Culture and Rest to enjoy winter sports, 1000-000 using the ski station, 7,000 taking skating lessons and 6,000 learning figure skating.

NOXIOUS WEED ACT EXPLAINED

Dr. W. J. Stephens Meets County Weed Inspectors at Shire Hall

The drafting of a new "Noxious Weed Act" depends largely on the opinions of weed inspectors and municipalities of the province, Dr. W. J. Stephens of the Ontario Department of Agriculture told Hastings County weed inspectors at a meeting held in Shire Hall yesterday.

"There is a grave lack of uniformity in the functioning of the Act across the province," Dr. Stephens said, "Weed inspectors' salaries are as different as day from night. Some work for nothing, some get ten, fifteen and twenty dollars for their services, while others get from five to seven hundred dollars per year."

Opinion Sought

Should these salaries be unified? Should there be a minimum salary? Should there be a check up on the methods of inspection? Do you feel that these irregularities exist, and have you any suggestions to remedy the situation. If so you are asked to forward them to the Minister of Agriculture who will gladly consider them. A new Weed Act is coming, and the Minister is anxious to have a general opinion as to the proper methods before drafting the Act," the meeting was told.

Counts on Inspectors

Dr. Stephens described the working of the Act, and how inspectors should work. "A strong inspector should try to help the farmer, he said, in outlining the requisites of a good inspector. "Dictatorial methods should not be used. Establish interest in the farmer's farm friendship and soon you will find that prosecutions will be few and far between. "In extra hard cases, the weeds can be removed from the farm of a stubborn man and the cost charged against his taxes."

Powers in Urban Centres

"You have the same powers in city cities, as in the countryside, inspectors must insert a notice in the local paper advising residents of the presence of weeds and asking for their removal. If this is not done within a period of two months inspectors have the authority to remove the weeds and charge the cost against the taxes of the property," Dr. Stephens pointed out.

Miss Gibbs, co-operation of ratepayers in reporting to their councillors the presence of weeds, and of councils in aiding the department to find the province of pernicious growths, one of which are becoming a national menace. Roadside cutting of weeds cost the province over $300,000 last year, the speaker stated, and only twenty per cent of the weeds were cut. He advised cutting to furnish weed inspectors with spraying machines to eliminate the more pernicious growths.

Listern Slides

The meeting was held under the chairmanship of Agricultural Chairman Thomas Gibbs, and a brief address was given by Mr. H. L. Fair, Hastings County Agricultural representative on the county weed question. "Municipal problems with regard to the Act were given by Warden Henry Larkin.

The afternoon session consisted of addresses by Dr. Stephens with lantern slides, "Identification of Weeds shown by C. C. Vincent, Department of Agriculture. The Weed Control Act discussed by Mr. W. Michael, Inspector Dominion Weeds Branch, and a discussion led by W. H. Langlois, county road superintendent.

Jackie Coogan May Be Father At Year's End

Hollywood, May 6, (AP)—Friends of Jackie Coogan hinted today "The Kid" may become a father by year's end.

Jackie, embroiled in a $4,000,000 accounting suit against his mother and step-father, met the hints with silence. Betty Grable, his bride, of last November, indicated that Coogan is the family spokesman.

Mrs. Arthur L. Bernstein, Jackie's mother, financially brought the name of Bobby, his 13-year-old brother, into the accounting case.

"Jackie," she said, "apparently wants all the money that Robert earned, too."

All that Bobby earned as the star of "Sooky" in 1931 went to Jackie Coogan Productions, Inc., Mrs. Bernstein said.

Madoc

On Wednesday evening the Junior Farmers' Club held a very successful dance in Madoc Armouries. Music was furnished by Jack Grant's orchestra and a very pleasant time was spent by the large number in attendance.

On Friday evening Mr. Herbert W. Piercy interpreter of literature, gave a very interesting program in Trinity United Church. The special number was Enoch Arden, the greatest love story of ages. Those who were present enjoyed the entertainment very much. Mr. and Mrs. Percy Phillips and Miss Phillips gave several numbers on their Hawaiian guitars and Mr. Tom Jones contributed a solo.

IN HONOR OF THE MOTHERS

Mother's Day will be observed throughout North America on Sunday, May 8th. Once in a year in a public way the people give themselves to meditation on the place of motherhood in the nation and the importance of the mother in the life of the home and of the individuals in the home. This does not mean that in many homes every day of the year the mother is not held in the highest love, but that it is a special occasion on which to return thanks to Providence for the blessings which the soul of motherhood has brought to earth. One can think only sadly of those deprived of a mother's love and affection and enduring care and feel a sense of shame when one reads that some time ago a nation defended the theory that children should be brought up in large establishments away from the kindly attentions of their mothers. This latter is surely a distortion of the principle of life.

The mother instinct and love occupy no small place in the records of every race, and such affection is in high regard in every religion of the world.

Mother-love is the most enduring, the universal love. It is one of the great pillars on which this world is built. Man and woman cannot have any conception of what life would be without the principle of motherhood. It outlasts every other principle, every material thing. It carries loads too great for any other thing, and bears them unselfishly and wholeheartedly.

Such love asks but love in return and this It considers ample compensation.

The best reward is the individual's recognition of his or her mother and the handing down of this affection from generation to generation.

FRONTIER COLLEGE

Frontier College which has been established for the purpose of companionship, instruction, Canadianization and leadership among the navvies, bushmen, and other campmen across Canada who number in normal times no fewer than 12,000 men, depends for its success largely upon two factors: the interest and devotion of laborer-teachers and the loyalty of friends whose subscriptions go a long way to make the work possible. Under the principle on which the Frontier College is operated, the campmen has beside him, shaping his life and thinking a fellow-worker, who is a university man with broad human sympathies and a solid background of Canadianism.

What these laborer-teachers do is done in the spirit of love of their fellows. What the result of their work is can only be weighed in the moral scales, but it is certain that many lives have been influenced and built up into fine Canadianism. These men are hundred laborer-teachers are located among the men in isolated places. They have had during last year 2,117 campmen enrolled in study classes, 9,870 workers benefited from discussions on land settlement, health, naturalization, thrift and other topics. The College provided 104,000 magazines and books for the use of camp workers last year.

Everywhere the press has supported this institution for many years, realizing its importance as an educational and moral force, given gratuitously to the men in the far-away places.

As Principal E. W. Bradwin, M. A., Ph. D., states, "Work camps located in the back places of Canada are a vital part of Canadian life and campmen comprise no inconsiderable portion of the population of the Dominion. Not only are their conditions of life monotonous, but they are deprived of the advantages usually available to workers in more settled communities. There are always subversive influences that would take advantage of the situation that arises."

The Frontier College has made one great discovery which cheers and that is, that for the last thirty years the Frontier College has found that there are young men of university education, of fine physique and of good Canadian background ready to give of their best to help campmen. These do not shirk hard work, but share with their fellow manual employment under sub-zero conditions or in the heat and flies of summer. In the evenings, when the day's work is over, and other supervised quarters, laborer-teachers hold classes. To the foreign-born, opportunity is given to prepare for citizenship. But perhaps most important is the healthy leadership given to the campmen.

One youth, a Done, writes to the College with this tribute: "I am very satisfied in saying I have enjoyed the work of the Frontier College. I have learned more in the past three months here than I did in a year in a country school."

Another notes that "the good we got from the work of the teachers of the Frontier College in camp 10 is not to be valued in money alone. It was a light in all our camp life and we appreciate it."

One of the teachers writes to tell of sleeping in a good bunkhouse, of fine meals, of study from seven to eight in the evenings, of recreation from eight to ten under supervision, of parties and entertainments and singsong. He speaks of the fine equipment, of the appreciation of the men, of scientific study and experiments, and of talks on current events.

There cannot be the slightest doubt of the splendid work done by the College in these camps and no finer contribution to the national life can be made than by helping the Frontier College program.

MOTHER'S DAY

In these glad days of greening earth and sunshine—
Days when you felt the spirit of the Spring,
When singing birds and May-time blooming
Woke in your heart a happy carolling,
When all the joy held in your hearts' deep treasure
O'erflowed in love and laughter from your eyes,
We set apart to thee a day most sacred
Who dwellest now beyond the azure skies.

A time most fitting to thy memory, Mother,
When all the earth is throbbing with new life,
When days were sweet, sublime in spite of struggle
When morning worlds were torn by strain and strife;
Deep in our hearts, thy memory, fresh and fragrant
Gives us the courage in life's trials to sing,
Trusting and waiting till again we meet you
In heavenly lands where always it is Spring.

ONE OF THE MOST OUTSTANDING IMPROVEMENTS accomplished in Belleville in some years is rapidly taking form and shape under supervision of a committee of the City Council and the approval of that entire body. Reference is made to the clearing up of the lots behind the stores on Front street, bordering the Moira river. As one citizen said: "You wouldn't know the old place now." The ground has been levelled and filled in, old ramshackle buildings removed and substantial stone walls built up from the water's edge, making a large and clean space suitable for automobile parking purposes, space being made available for over two hundred automobiles. No longer is this space a dumping ground and the river front is now a thing of beauty which looks well on a close-up or from across the river. The area is electric lighted also, which adds to its value. This work is being carried out under the supervision of a sub-committee of the Property Committee, of the City Council, with Alderman Burton Jennings, chairman, Aldermen Cushing, Barlow, and Lewis. This work gives an idea of the scope of the Regional Planning Committee which can render very worthy service not only in chairmanels not touched by their civic committees. As an object lesson on the advantages of a clean-up campaign, this could not be improved on.

RAILWAY SERVICE IS NOT ALL THAT WHICH IS VISIBLE FROM A CAR WINDOW. Frinstance Belleville was visited recently by what is known as a Railway Medical Service Car, in charge of Dr. Richard Hughes, one of several such cars which patrol the line from coast to coast. In-his thoroughly modern and well equipped medical car Dr. Hughes lives and works. At Belleville he gave physical examinations to 375 employees of the railway, at Brockville 125, and at Ottowo 300. In the work with which Dr. Hughes has been engaged for the past year he examines approximately 80 men a week. They are given a complete medical examination and where physical defects are found the men are referred to the railway doctor at the respective terminal where the examinations are conducted. In the event of serious ailments being found the men are afforded the services of specialists at railway clinics which are located in Montreal and Toronto. The men coming under his attention realize the value of such examinations after attaining the fifth decade of life and co-operate with the examining physician in a most wholehearted manner. The men appreciate the realization that their physical condition is good but when defects are found are most anxious to receive treatment to set them right. Dr. Hughes is entrusted with periodical inspections of approximately 8,000 railway men employed by the Canadian National Railways in the area lying between and including the cities of Montreal and Winnipeg. About 80 men are examined every week. In the modernly-equipped car, similar to two others engaged in the same work in Canada. One car works east from Montreal to Halifax, N.S., and the third from Winnipeg to Vancouver, B. C.

That Body of Yours

By James W. Barton, M.D.

Hoarseness May Be a "Harmless or a Dangerous Symptom"

As most cases of hoarseness are due to a slight cold or overuse of the voice during music it is overthought about it, yet hoarseness which persists for weeks and does not has been a cold or overuse of the voice may be a very serious matter. For this reason physicians and surgeons do not lightly dismiss cases of persistent hoarseness until complete examination and tests have been made.

Drs. J. W.-and W. M. Carpenter Greenville, in the South Carolina Medical Association Journal, divide the causes of chronic or persistent hoarseness into four groups, (a) inflammation which is followed by swelling or ulceration, (b) new growths, (c) nervousness (neurosen) and (d) paralysis.

"The physician should never treat chronic hoarseness until he can identify its cause, nor should he prescribe until the cause of chronic of hoarseness until he has made a complete or thorough examination." This examination for every part can be thoroughly examined without causing the patient pain.

"Tuberculosis syphilis and new growths (cancer), are the most frequent causes of hoarseness in an adult. Hoarseness is the first symptom of cancer of the larynx itself. Many cases of cancer of the larynx last less lasting more than a few weeks should be considered cancer until proved otherwise."

If the Drs. Carpenter extend this advice, are rarely if ever that the good physicians, what about patients who have persistent hoarseness? It means that many cases of hoarseness lasting more than a few weeks fear is due to more than a simple inflammation. It may be due possibly to tuberculosis, syphilis, or even cancer.

The thought then is that the hoarseness may be due to some harmless inflammation or to an inflammation from more dangerous causes. And whether simple or dangerous, early treatment is absolutely necessary to prevent serious consequences.

IMPARTIAL

It is impossible not to admire the impartiality with which Justice Berwick constable who has just appointed to the Court of Appeal summons, and paid a fine for allowing his chimney to catch fire. Perhaps the appointment of Mr. Justice Dubally in the administration of justice was designed to show that African magistrates. Having both offended the law, and being thus a bright without a light, they agreed that the majesty of the law could be upheld only by their appearing before the other for judgment.

The senior constable, taking precedence, tried his deputy, and fined him five pounds since the latter had tried his senior, and fined him fifty rupees, justifying his severity by pointing out that since he was on a second case of the kind that day, the offence was the more heinous. It remains to be dealt with lightly!
—Manchester Guardian.

THE EXPERT

The department store hired an efficiency expert, whose obsession was to discover the unnecessary. On one different part of the store every day. One day a section would be closed, top floor, then the next day it would be in the basement, and on the third it would be placed, where the first section had been.

After three weeks of this an old lady approached a harassed floorwalker and asked him if he could tell her where the notion department was."

"Lady madam," he said wearily, "but if you'll stand here for a few minutes I'm sure you'll see it yourself."—American Boy.

BACK TO SCHOOL

There are a lot of school teachers in the Atlantic Provinces, to whom spinster some of them ought to go back to school for a course in mathematics. Perhaps then they wouldn't be taken in by the astronomical figures of the Social Credit board which says that every Albertan is worth $300,000 in resources and that the province owes each $6,000 a year.

The Dominion Bureau of statistics is a fairly conservative organization. It deals in figures, in facts and facts them. The Bureau tells us in the Canada Yearbook, 1938, that the total wealth of the whole of the Dominion of Canada is $21,000,000,000. But Mr. MacLachlan and his associates on the Alberta Social Credit board tell us that the capital wealth of Alberta is $231,000,000,000.

Evidently the old school has been changed to meet the Social Credit standard of education. It is a lot greater than the whole by a mere two hundred billions of dollars.—Lethbridge Herald.

It's His Money That's Invested

The newspaper publisher is very often asked by people why he doesn't publish books in book form. But the very people who ask such questions never stop to think that every book is newspaper to its somebody or something is paid for out of his pocket or his business.

We wonder if the average reader of a newspaper ever stops to think what every column of a newspaper costs the owner. If type could be set up and proofs read for talking, if columns were like rubber that would stretch and stretch and keep stretch to get in everything, if the readers themselves could understand that advertising is advertising and that straight reading matter is straight reading matter and not advertising, the job of conducting a newspaper would be much easier.

Of course, the publisher likes to boost worthy things as they come along, but he likes to be free about it; to boost as he sees fit and as his columns permit.

You never look a gift horse in the face, neither as a beggar should you be a chooser. Not a publisher in the world but would gladly donate any reputable organization, unless he finds that that organization demands that all its printing be done somewhere else or plays favorites in distributing the patronage of its activities.

It is assuredly the publisher will boost but it is not a wise policy to attempts to force him to boost anything nor to threaten to punish him if he does not do what you want him to do. For after all, the publisher of a newspaper is usually the owner of his paper and can do what he likes about it. And nothing under high heaven can move him to boost or to knock a line he has written if you tramp on his toes. And neither would you if you were the publisher.

Get your printing done by your own home printer. Give him all the news you can instead of trying to get it up as outside items. The outside paper don't help to pay taxes.—Hastings Star.

Prime Ministers Have Sanctuary

Chequers, the official country home of Britain's prime ministers, "comes of age" this year.

Stanley Baldwin, when prime minister, said: "There are three classes which need sanctuary more than others—birds, flowers and prime ministers. Prime ministers want some place where they will not be snapshotted, where they can perch for a moment on a fence and look at the landscape without being 'shooed' off. Thanks to Lord Lee, I have my sanctuary at Chequers."

Twenty-one years ago, Lord Lee of Fareham, director general of food supplies during the World War, presented his Buckinghamshire home to the British people for this very purpose.

But Lord Lee had a higher aim also—Chequers was to be a kind of talisman for the British constitution.

"To the revolutionary statesman," he wrote in his deed of settlement, "the antiquity and calm tenancy of Chequers and its annals might spread some saving virtues in the continuity of English history and exercise a check on too hasty upheavals; while even the most reactionary could scarcely be insensible to the spirit of human freedom which permeates the countryside of Hampden, Burke and Milton."

Standing on the site of a fort probably built by Cromwell's cavalry British warrior king who resisted the Roman invasion, Chequers is a perfect example of the English Tudor manor house. It was inhabited for a time by descendents of Cromwell and contains a unique collection of Cromwellian relics, including three portraits of that patriot and statesman. These are the special pride of Ramsay MacDonald during his occupancy of Chequers.

(The name Chequers, by the way, is supposed to be derived from the office of an early owner of the estate who was clerk of the exchequer.)

To preserve the privacy of this rural sanctuary, the stricture that every surrounds the prime minister he is there. The newspaper reporters are allowed in the grounds, whether the prime minister is in residence or not. His privilege of working or relaxing away from all prying eyes has been consistently respected ever since Lloyd George held his Chequers housewarming in 1921.

What does he do? Walk? Fish? Watch birds? Have himself in bed? The few who know the prime minister's activities are tightlipped as confetti to dividing them.

Should the prime minister not wish to make use of his country retreat, the Chequers Estate act provides that it shall be offered in turn, to the chancellor of the exchequer, the secretary of state for colonial secretary and the American ambassador in London.—Christian Science Monitor.

Work Religion Needs Revival

The American people are in a spiritual mood. Symptoms of the revival of the old-time religion of Billy Sunday days are seen in the willing gladly to trade the chance of a government pension for the privilege of working for the certainty of private job in the immediate present. For the years the New Deal handed them on wind. The longer they have sampled it, the more disgusted they have felt. They have grasped at the boon-doggling shadows in the hope of WPA, and have been bitterly disillusioned. At the end of the years of hoping for Roosevelt recovery they have a Roosevelt recession. Even the optimism of the White House mahatma but larger does of the fatal New Deal formula cannot conceal the fact.

The American people, if given the chance, are ready to work their own salvation, and with much less fear and trembling than they have endured under the bungling paternalism of the Great White Father in Washington. The old religion must be renewed on the old foundation of work. With unemployment increasing in commerce and industry, not six-cent-an-hour jobs multiplying in political jogs, it is time to center thought and energy on the private job.

In the American mind the shibboleth of social security is a financial age has lost its fear and its master; the possibility or inability of security in a world where the world far outshines it as a goal for effort. The people of Rome had their high steak as a lunch counter. There was none of the usual people's place passing between them. The talk was of the job.

"Suppose it is killing me," said one. "The office may close at the end of the week. Where will I be then, or the rest of the gang."

There is nothing the drifting setled with us either," said her companion. "But the boss is worried. We all know he is going to fall somewhere. Say, Roosevelt seems to be just muddled. He's running his bike tricks and going in circles, and we aren't getting anywhere."

That is a typical conversation in any office, John, Jobs, jobs — the people want jobs. Between them, the hope of those who lack them, and the fear of the financial wreckage of the nation.

Government and industry and clear-visioned, courageous political leadership must unite their forces to meet this emergency. They must agree on a program, for common action, to restore the private relation of work. They must agree on the necessity of creating not six-cent jobs secure for those who hold them, and not relief for the life we are eager to work. They must demand emancipation from ideologies of the past that hamper the operation of jobs. They must liberate the energies that have been in a straitjacket; liberate the wealth that fit the people to live and thrive; and America free, once the land of jobs and opportunity, to be itself again in the land of the free. Then will we have a real revival of the old-time religion of work.—Chicago Daily News.

Time They Got a Break

On behalf of his brother newspapermen the country over, Colonel Frank Knox, publisher of the Chicago Daily News, recently interviewed Will Hays, czar of the motion picture production industry and requested that the movies give some newspapermen in such unfavorable and untrue light. The committee which voted by Colonel Knox did not the first received by motion picture producers, but Colonel Knox letter and they have promised in good faith improvement especially in the future.

Previous complaints which the motion picture moguls admitted have apparently gone unheeded and it is to be hoped that their promise to Mr. Knox will result in a much needed change.

If it were not pathetic, the roles in which newspapermen are cast in motion pictures would be the source of day antics of ordinary newshounds would be a subject for laughter and in the business to laugh out loud. Usually, however, the thing is too far fetched to be classed as good comedy.

Any reporters chewing fat cigarstubs and dashing hither and yon in search of sensational news are rare as dodo birds. There may be one or two in existence, but they are never run across them. Beer guzzling in quantities that would satisfy ordinary mortals is credited to newspapermen as a matter of course in the movies. Any time a screen they can soak it up in large gobs and still be able to ward off the facts of a big break while impatient presses wait for theblasting headlines.

This is the sort of thing they can do on the screen but in real life it is a vastly different story.

Most newspapermen of our acquaintance who smoke at all, and that is the majority, smoke their cigar on Sunday when they have time to enjoy it. Most of the week they either roll their own cigarettes or buy them in packages cost money and the ordinary newspaperman like the ordinary human voted by Colonel Knox becomes seldom finds himself overly flush. Ask any newspaperman you see why none of the folks we know are millionaires and you have an expensive care. Some have modest little hacks on which the monthly payments are a matter of a problem just as it is to other people who have to live on a budget and there is up a lot of news in a day with the aid of a battery of the best cameras just hoof it, or depend on a well trained thumb and the good nature of a motorist to get around.

As for drinking we don't think newspapermen drink any more than any other class. Some do and some don't. There are many occupations by individual engaged in any other business can do his best on a diet of water and be successful. Newspapermen have to be ready at all times to put in long hours on their job and good newspapermen do not jeopardize their health by dissipation or by going about in a continual daze.

As a class, we believe newspapermen are as fine a group as we know and sympathetic in their outlook and understanding of the human condition. considerable pride in doing their job well. We have yet to find a break from an industry that would still be calling its way out of a tough spot when not the assistance these same gentlemen have given it. —Lindsay Post.

PROGRESS

Digging into an Indian burial mound in western Kentucky, Mrs. Blanche B. King, an ethnologist, has found the skeleton of a prehistoric man surrounded by 825 flint arrowheads, 40 spear points and copper.

We smile as we think of the simple savages who must have spent most of his lifetime accumulating that store of copper from the distant mines near Lake Superior, in order to have it safely drawn from use and buried with him. Modern fashions are always greater than his. What we have gathered from all the world and buried in concrete and steel in the Kentucky hills is $13,000,000,000 worth of gold.—New York World Telegram.

SCREEN HISTORY

An eastern newspaper has been delving into Canadian screen history. It finds that the first regular motion picture theatre was opened in Toronto in 1896. The showing of the picture of the Corbett-Fitzsimmons fight is said to have been the attraction. It may not have marked a long step forward. But plenty of people whose sporting memories are keen will be quick to furnish a correction. The fight did not take place till March 17, 1897, and the pictures arrived in Toronto months the following autumn.—Edmonton Journal.

Gladden Their Hearts On Mother's Day

From the day we are born we exercise a sometimes cruel rule over our mothers. Her every action, mood and sensation is guided indirectly by us. She laughs with us, cries with us and dedicates her life that our pathway through life may be smooth. These three are just a few of the millions of mothers throughout the world who are waiting and praying that their children may some day safely return to them.

Mother's Day

By W. H. Mabee

Sixteenth Annual Letter

Deep down at the world's foundation.
As pure as the dreams of the blest,
Is the love the mother bestows
On the child she holds at her breast.

She who guided the unsteady feet,
Held the little hands to pray,
Pillowed the dear little head
At the close of each golden day.

She who gave the first sweet blessing
To light up this vale of tears,
She, our Mother; whose loving protection
Guarded our infant years.

Her love is as true as keyword,
Whose wings are above us spread,
Our guard and guide eternal
Wherever our feet may tread.

What would homes be without Mothers. Songs have been sung all down through the ages, in all tongues of a Mother's heart, a Mother's care, a Mother's loyalty. There is no face so beautiful as her sweet face, even though the years have stolen away the softness of youth, silvered her hair, and dimmed the light of her eyes, one thankful is clear. When we reach maturity and pause for a moment to glance back at the years through which we have passed, there is for all of us, I'm confident, one shining memory, one tender love, which has been the staff upon which our hearts have leaned in moments of discouragement and distress; one smiling face which has reflected one joy when things have been well.

Mothers have always "stood by." Times and circumstances change, that is inevitable (right, and in accordance with the eternal purpose. But Mother love never changes; it is always there, strong, dependable, not to be shaken by the most adverse wind that blows. Through misfortunes, even disgrace, it stands by faithful to the end. And because we know this is so true, we hail the day set apart as a special time for remembering the best mother on earth, the second Sunday in May, grateful to the happy thought that placed it on our calendar. I have been writing of good mothers, they are the greatest need of the hour. I love to write of them. It is very, very sad when we realize that the world has met with a great loss in the unsaved Mothers that have not the power of training their children in to the better life, the life that leads to God. I am writing today on a new thought as regards "Mothers".

It is to the "Unknown Mothers" and their sunshine are legion. Are not the majority of the mothers of our Canada "Unknown Mothers". Well known in the great work they are doing for the children of our land, and for the great Missionary movement. The "Unknown" mothers have accomplished much, they have kept on dreaming, hoping, thinking constructively, taking intelligently, creating a healthy, informed public opinion as she awaits that day when her fond dreams come true.

Her life is really a song of love, unselfishness is the keyword. Unquestioned devotion is the determining factor as she creates a home. Religion, temperance, patience, ruling her life by convictions and not conventions, all combine to make her the childs ideal, as queen of the home she reigns lovingly, wisely. Among the "Unknown" Mothers, the widowed mother occupies an honored place. Her hands are tireless, working, sewing, trying to keep the home, the farm together, the children clad, fed, educated. Her feet are swift on errands of mercy and love. Her ears are turned to the faintest whisper; Her eyes are keen to see and know; her mind plans, dreams, dreams, for the children as she beholds the invisible and holds fast to the finest so that her sons may grow into stalwart manhood and womanhood. No epic of devotion, sacrifice, unselfishness can equal that of "Unknown Mothers" on the battlefield of daily life, on the farm, in the school and best specimens of Canadian womanhood is the result. No public applause is theirs; only the satisfaction of work well done. In the bravery and success of their children, the bravery and success of the "Unknown Mother" is reflected. There is no earthly love so true and unselfish as a mother's love.

Thomas A. Kempis, the author of that wonderful book The "Imitation of Christ", writing about our mothers, said "No language can express the power and beauty and heroism and majesty of a mother's love. It shrinks not where men cower; and grows stronger when men faint, and over the wastes of worldly fortune sends the radiance of its quenchless fidelity like a star in heaven. Moreover, she is of a humble and tender spirit, stooping to the lowest need, thinking nothing too small in which she may help. ready to give back blessings for cursing, benefit for harm and wrong. She possesses the thoughtful insight, the delicate tact, the gentle ministering hand of love. The life of a faithful Christian mother is a guide to paradise."

I would like to give you a little incident that I think portrays mother-love most deeply. A Swedish gentleman whose mother lived in the homeland and he gathered up some money and he could talk with her across the waters to her homeland, and he selected his mother's birthday.

For twenty-two years he had not seen his mother, he went to the office and had the company call up his mother, there was a brief wait, and then suddenly his mother's voice was in his ears, "Mother", he cried and stopped, he could not get out another word but simply wept wildly for two minutes of his precious three, the time allowed for speaking.

The word "mother" is surrounded by a sort of magical significance. It stands for the noblest thing in the eyes of God, the symbol of a woman who endures discomforts and pain to bring to into the world, and if that suffering is not enough, she goes through life with her daily program of self-sacrifice. She has given us the most priceless possession possible—life. She has taken helpless children and tried to make them upright men and women. In return she asks nothing and sometimes that is all that she receives.

There is a voice sweeter than any song; there is a remembrance of those loved—"and kept awhile", to which we turn betimes — even from the storms and loveliness of living to rest at the sweet and sacred shrine of memory.

"The altar of mother's love — devotion — sacrifice — and labor — given to us — so willingly and beautifully — asking no return — save that of instilling in our hearts, the knowledge and power of true living and a preparation, for a larger and more lovely habitation; where we shall clasp again those hands that lifted us from life's cradle into the beauties and realities of true life, and had us glimpse a vision of life eternal.

Harold, Ont.
April 26, 1938.

Rev. H. H. Lackey—
Frankford, Ont.,

Dear Mr. Lackey—

This being our last meeting of the season and consequently the last meeting with you as our pastor, it was our earnest desire to hold it in your home with you.

Your faithful attendance at our meetings has been an inspiration and an example which we do well to follow.

We feel that we would be very negligent if we let this occasion go by without assuring you that we do appreciate most highly your kind leadership and work with the Young People.

Your interest and co-operation with the executive and members of the Society has been a powerful moral and spiritual force. Therefore as a visible token of the sincerity and heartiness of our appreciation of your faithful services, we present to you this gift, trusting that it may be a constant reminder of our gratitude to you, good will and very best wishes.

Signed on behalf of the Salem Y. P. U.—Lorne Hagerman, president; Della McMaster, secretary.

Mr. Lackey then expressed his sincere thanks to the Union. All joined in singing "For He's a Jolly Good Fellow". After which games were played and the ladies served lunch and coffee.

BIG in SIZE and SAVINGS

The size and comfort of the new Ford V-8 is surprising. Bodies are designed and styled for beauty inside and out. And, of course, the compact V-8 engine allows more useful space for passengers and luggage.

In performance, the Ford is equally outstanding. The V-8 engine gives dependable power with remarkable economy. Letters from owners report that they get from 22 to 27 miles per gallon.

This year's Ford V-8 is available in De Luxe and Standard models. Both are built on the same 112-inch wheelbase and powered with the famous 85-horsepower V-8 engine. The De Luxe, at a slightly higher cost, gives you more room, more luggage space and finer appointments — all included in the delivered price.

If you haven't driven these newer, finer Ford cars, see your dealer for a demonstration. It will give you a new conception of low cost and high comfort.

$30 A MONTH, with reasonable down-payment, buys any new Ford V-8 car under T. C. National Finance Plan.

No Extra Charge for All These "Extras"

Ford V-8 delivered prices are low and include the following equipment:

ON DE LUXE MODELS — electric tail lights, two windshield wipers, two sun visors, twin electric horns, cigar lighter, de luxe steering wheel, deluxe cowl ventilator, door lock and lock, rustless steel wheel bands, in addition to front and rear bumpers and guards, spare wheel and tire and tube, tire lock, and headlight beam indicator.

"Tree Asthetic"

AS IN A CAFETERIA, a tree will feed itself if the food is put out and made available for the roots. But do not wait until a tree is starving before feeding it. A healthy tree is able to resist many insect enemies and diseases.

As shown in the accompanying Garden-Graph when feeding a tree the plant food should be distributed underneath the spread of the branches. Generally roots of a tree are located as far out from the trunk as the spread of the branches.

Remove the sod in circular area beneath the tree. Then make a series of holes with a pointed crowbar. The holes should be from 12 to 18 inches deep. Place the fertilizer in each hole, refill the hole with soil and replace the sod.

Forty to fifty pounds of fertilizer should be used for every 100 square feet of ground area under the spread of a tree.

Banks of Germany have adopted a new money bag which resembles an ordinary suitcase bag, but any attempt to snatch it causes it to automatically release a series of loud alarm shocks and to develop black smoke.

Teach Child Courteous Habits

But Be Certain They Don't Give Him an Inferiority Complex

(By LIZA GRENELLE)

Tommy was a courteous, considerate child. Before he did anything or ventured anywhere, he always asked, "Is it all right? Are you sure it's all right?"

Strangers were impressed. "That is so unusual," they would say, "in a child of his age, especially a boy." Then Father said one day: "I don't like it, Sally; I'm worried about that boy".

"Worried because they're making a gentleman out of Tommy at that new school?" Mother asked.

"I'm in too early to become a gentleman," Father said. "The present phase of Tommy's—always being afraid he's going to get his face in it—is natural. It's pathetic; it's pathological, or something. Anyway, I don't like it. He should be more sure of himself than that."

Too Considerate

"Tommy has just begun to realize that he must consider other people, their wishes and their inconvenience," said Sally, "and I think it's a fine thing."

"Nonsense! I mean—well, sure, up to a point. But at his age he shouldn't be always thinking of what will please someone else. I never did. Pretty soon I expect the poor child won't begin to breathe to me for breathing. It's awful!"

The next day Father and Mrs. Tommy: "Listen, fellah; this is your home, and you do what you like in it. That's absolutely basic for. Unless it's something special. You don't have to ask anybody's permission. If it gets my goat or Mother's, we'll tell you so. Until then, do as you please. Understand?"

Freedom of Action

Tommy beamed — and understood. When he left, he did not look the stairs two at a time, slid back down the banister, and finally knocked them out and went to bed with a song on his lips, even though it wasn't a very good song, and a slightly off key, at that.

And the next week Father arranged for Tommy's transfer from that school, much to Sally's chagrin.

Children should certainly be taught to be considerate and courteous, but their actions must be made to feel continually fearful that the next one on their part will incur someone's displeasure. Such excessive considerateness in Tommy's case, for instance, in a child, any particularly unselfish or naturally thoughtful disposition, but rather a sense of inferiority, perhaps a feeling of guilt, certainly a complete lack of self-confidence—a fear of not pleasing and of probably being disliked or not wanted.

Poems That Live

EARLY SPRING

How sweet this morning air in spring,
When tender is the grass and young
I see some little leaves have not
Yet worn their early childhood yet;
And cows no longer hurry home,
Forever sweet a voice cries "Come".

Here, with green Nature all
While that fine bird the skylark sings;
Who sent in such a passion it,
He flies by it, and not his wings:
And many a flower, shrub, and sparrow,
Sing songs than I may borrow.

These watery swamps and thickets wild—
Called Nature's slums—to me are more
Than any courts where fountains play,
And men-at-arms guard every door:
For I could sit down here alone
And count the oak-trees one by one.

GOOD MANNERS

By MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

(Copyright, 1937, King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

Doctor

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1—My husband and I have recently joined a club among whose members are a married couple who are physicians. I have met the husband professionally. Of course I address him and refer to him as Doctor So-and-So either professionally or socially, but what about his wife? She is equally well-known as a physician. What is the correct way to address her, and is she present as there would be some doubt as to which Doctor Doe is was intended to refer to in the conversation?

2—I believe, of course, that if we were consulting the wife professionally, it would be necessary to address her as Doctor Doe also. In that case, would you say "your husband" or "Doctor Doe" when inquiring about him?

D.

1—Professionally, they would both be addressed as referred to above. On social occasions when the identification referred to would not be definite, the first name would be mentioned . . . Doctor and Mrs. Doctor James Doe, Doctor Mary Doe.

The form of address socially for the physician depends on the form of name she prefers. You may know you may be able to find out from a mutual friend or you may not. If you know, or learn it may properly, ask her. Many professional women doctors prefer to be known socially as Miss Mary Doe, and many others prefer to be known especially if their husbands are doctors also, use the form of Mrs. Doctor Doe. Fundamentally, the rule for the use of a person's name, like the pronunciation of a person's name, is that we use the form of name and the pronunciation of name as the person wishes it.

2—When you are inquiring of Doctor Mary Doe about Doctor James Doe, you would refer to him as "your husband."

Inviting the Boy Friend

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Our school has two formal dances each year, one in the Fall and one in the Spring. The first dance is a regular dance, but in the second dance the girls ask the boys.

Since our Fall dance, I have learned to know a boy in my class quite well, but he has never had occasion to ask me to any place with him. However, he has often hinted that if I were going to a dance with another boy, he would like to take me.

Please tell me if it would be proper for me to ask my new friend to our Spring formal, even though he has never taken me anywhere? There are other boys that I can ask to the dance, but if it isn't against all rules of etiquette, I would like to ask my new friend.

Alice

I don't see any real reason why you should not invite this boy to go to the dance with you. You especially wish to, and I think that the fact that he has not invited you to go to a party with him needn't deter you. He has "hinted" that he would like to! But you are the one who will know, by his attitude, whether or not he will think that this invitation is appropriate to the degree of your friendship.

Ordination

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I recently received an invitation to an Ordination into Priesthood, reception and First Mass of a friend. I will not be able to attend the Ordination or the Mass, but may be able to attend the reception. Please tell me if a formal bow is called for, and if so, how should it be worded?

2—If I am unable to attend the reception, should I send an informal note of congratulation?

S.

1—You do not tell me what type of invitation this is but I assume that it is a formal one. If it is, then your answer should be formally worded, that is, in the third person, like the invitation. You might use, for your answer, the white double-sheeted letter paper on which you wrote to me, and write your answer on the first page, leaving as nearly as possible as the lines of the invitation are written, and in the form of your acknowledgement follow the phrasing of the invitation. If there is a possibility that you may be able to attend, the Ordination and the Mass, as well as the reception, it would be wise to accept for all.

2—Write your regret . . . acceptance or regret, and, if you are unable to attend the reception, it would be gracious of you to write a friendly little note of congratulation and good wishes.

Also Try To 'Move In Beauty'

JOAN FONTAINE
Stands and walks gracefully always

(By HELEN FOLLETT)

Do you "move in beauty like the night"? Or do you get where you are going unmindful of how you look while walking? Yes, my friends, we're right back on that subject of posture. It is vitally important to every woman who would be charming; and it is vitally necessary to health.

If you disregard posture, time will punish you. The muscles will lose tone, flirm and tissues will go flabby. The girlish shape will be a "washout". The most expensive frock will look like nothing but so many yards of dry goods.

Even though you loathe exercise, you can learn to carry yourself beautifully. A simple way of getting that habit is to pull up the body full length, draw in the muscles of the abdomen and, while holding them there, take several deep breaths, expanding and lifting the chest.

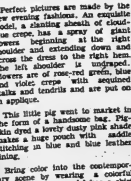
Even the laziest girl can do them three times a day for five minutes once or twice a day.

Fashion Flashes

(By ALICE ALDEN)

A vote for thanks goes to Alix for something new.

Alix is soft and pliable as chiffon made up into afternoon wraps destined to add glamor to summer afternoon frocks.



A nice tie-up is made between the blouse and suit of a new Mainbocher model. The suit is in polka-dot blue wool and the double-breasted jacket has white daisy buttons which match exactly the daisies in the printed blouse worn with the suit. The jacket has patch pockets and lapels of the coat are stitched to simulate revers. Skirt has wide box-pleats all around.

The masquerade of the suit-dress appeals to many of the smart set. Just like a suit is done in blue sponge woolen and has a navy flannel collar and cuffs, big, buttoned on gauntlet cuffs of the same navy flannel. The fashion has a bow opening over a white gilet.

Perfect pictures are made by the new evening fashions. An example noted, a floating sheath of cloud-blue crepe, has a spray of giant flowers beginning at the right shoulder and extending down and across the dress to the right hem. The left shoulder is undraped. Flowers are of rose-red green, blue and violet crepe with sequined stalks and tendrils and are put on in applique.

This little pig went to market in the form of a handsome bag. Pig-skin dyed a lovely dusty pink shade makes a large pouch with saddle stitching in blue and blue leather lining.

Bring color into the contemporary scene by wearing a colorful suit. A lovely model has a skirt in dull violet tweed and a jacket in pink and mauve plaid with revers of the dull violet.

A new drab brand of black lipstick has been put on the market. The theory is that it will match the color of the lips of the user. Each and make it more beautiful. Of course, it would be on a par with the old-fashioned "beauty spot" of the days of our grandmothers.

Deflated Values

By BETH BOUTWELL

The music of Ooozacrats" filled the high school gymnasium.

"Swell music, isn't it?" Floyd and his partner stepped and dipped in time to it.

Anne smiled dreamily.

"Say you know, you're not such a bad dancer." Floyd's tone was a little condescending.

"Oh, how kind you are!" He failed to catch the hint of sarcasm in Anne's voice and answered:

"No kidding. You are! I'm glad to find someone I can really dance with."

Her murmured "You overwhelm me!" encouraged him to greater heights of eloquence.

"And you're not such a bad looker, either."

Then she laughed. "We're all the girls in your old high school good dancers and good lookers?"

Floyd had just been transferred from a city high school to one in a small town, and this was his first dance with his new school.

Later on they wandered out to the grounds. The school grounds have a way of looking very different in the moonlight from their usual daytime appearance, and the sight of them went to Floyd's head. He kissed Anne.

"Why," she said, "you kiss like all the boys. Don't they do it any differently in your other high school?"

He laughed indulgently. "Look here, Anne. I like you better than any other girl in the school. Will you go with me st...dy?"

Anne said for a little while. Then she said:

"I'll have to think about that, Floyd."

"What?" he asked in surprise. "You'll have to think about it?"

They went over to get a package of cigarettes at the canteen.

"Oh, what a darling car!" exclaimed Anne, "Is it yours?"

"Uh huh. I'm afraid," said Floyd as he fumbled in the pocket for the cigarettes.

"My!" Anne sighed. "You must have plenty of money to have a car like that. Floyd, what does your father do?"

"Why, he's a—well, a corporation lawyer that looks after the interests of a chain of grocery stores. I'm going to be a lawyer when I finish school. There's lots of money in it."

At the close of the dance, Anne agreed to let Floyd take her home, rather reluctantly, to the young man's bewilderment. They dodged among the cars that were scuttling back and forth like traps' crabs, in search of Floyd's car. They came upon the place where the car should have been and stopped. A dilapidated delivery truck stood in its place.

"Floyd, whatever — become of your car?" asked Anne. Then she saw the truck. "Oh, how very poor. He was staring at the car, dropped his jaw, and unconsciously let the body of the car was written his father's name, over the word "Floyd."

A note lay on the front seat. Floyd read it in silence. Then he crumpled it up and threw it away. Anne picked it up again, smoothed it and handed it to Anne. She read, but the light of the head lamps, as he had done.

"Mother and I have decided to go to a show. So I got the car and left the truck for you, Dad."

Floyd's face flushed. Then a miserable, "I can't take you home in this thing!"

"Why not, Floyd?" Anne followed. Then a miserable, "I can't take you home in this thing!"

"Why not, Floyd? Truly!" At least she wasn't laughing. Then she asked:

"So that wasn't your car?"

"Yes."

Then he faced her. "I don't know why I lied like that, Anne."

But her face glowed in the moonlight.

"I do," she said softly. She put her head on his arm. "I like you better than any other boy, Floyd. "I'll go with you—slowly."

"Ah, you're sweet!"

In the shadow of the grocery truck he took her in his arms.

Recreation Essential As Safety Valve For Youth

How I wish that some of the boys and girls who write me about their strict parents and the taboos that prevail in their homes, forbidding them to have young friends, attend movies, dancing or athletic meets, could have heard Mrs. Roosevelt's appeal for recreation as an important factor in education.

Speaking the other day at the University of Maryland to upwards of 7,000 persons, on the civic responsibilities of citizens, she made a plea for recreation for young people.

The President's wife was heartily in accord with the claim of those in charge of penal institutions, that much of the youthful crime wave has come from a lack of recreation.

It is easy to understand that in homes maintained on the scantiest of wages, parents are apt to overlook the value of fun and entertainment which is instinctive in youth. The grim struggle waged by them to feed and clothe their children is apt to make them forgetful of recreation.

Churches know and understand the appetite youngsters have for fun. So do Neighborhood Houses and college settlements. And wise parents who cannot afford to take into account the high spirits of youth, will do well to let their boys and girls sign up with well-managed recreation centers.

Judging from thousands of letters which have come to me during a radio contract of many weeks, not to mention those which come in my daily mail, the parents who in youth took the bit in their own teeth and followed the bent of inclination, are apt to be least understanding concerning their own youngsters.

"I ran off and married Mr.—and I wish my mother had locked me up before I did it," do the parents in that family are apt to proceed on the locking up principle, which is fatal.

Such well-meant intentions to save very often lead to complete disaster. The girl who isn't allowed to have boy friends, and to learn at first hand that they're more than likely to be selfish, greedy and disappointing, imagines the tabooed sex as young gods, and is the first to experiment with the delightful adventure of sneaking out and meeting them on the sly.

And the boy is told to stay home night after night, lends a willing ear to urgings to gear up with a tough bunch and try his hand at the amateur hokkup.

Parents who deny wholesome escape valves to their children are taking upon their shoulders grave responsibilities. Why—let me ask of these forgetful fathers and mothers—should all the forces of being have come to an always stop for everyone with the exception of your home-making instincts.

As the President's wife wisely said in her talk at Maryland University, she believes people should have a good time in this world. And if they don't have a good time, they are tempted to do things they should not do Also, that recreation is the best cure for older and younger people to bridge the gap between the two generations.

Opening Dance at Country Club is a Gala Affair

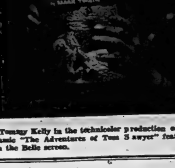
Soft lights shedding a subdued glow upon pretty floral decorations of apple-blossoms, tulips and marigolds, enhanced by shaded multi-colored lights of Chinese lanterns provided a perfect setting for the opening dance of the season at the Golf and Country Club in the club house last night.

The conventional black and white of the formal garb of the gathering men afforded a contrasting background to the beautiful gowns of the ladies as two hundred and fifty members and guests thronged the spacious rooms of the club.

Dispensing rhythms in the modern swing tempo and the more conservative melodies of the waltz and waltz, Bud Haines and his New Commodores provided a musical background that left nothing to be desired.

Shortly before one o'clock a delicious luncheon was served by newly appointed steward and stewardess of the club, after which dancing was resumed until an early hour.

Easily one of the outstanding social functions of the season the dance inaugurated a series of summer dances that will feature the seasonal program of the club, with the next being scheduled for May 23rd.



Among the guests present were Wing Commander and Mrs. A. R. Godfrey, and officers of the R.C.A.F. Trenton, and a number of out-of-town members and their friends.

A distinct novelty of the dance was music featured by the "Rockola," a musical machine that played modern rhythms for the guests between regular dance intervals.

The decorations of the club-house were under the supervision of Mrs. Charles A. Cameron and Mrs. Robert Martin.

Dyspepsia Myth Is Exploded

Dr. Clendening Says Foods Don't Cause Indigestion

Once a week in this column there will be printed a discussion of a medical superstition. Readers are invited to contribute.

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

"THAT FOOD CAUSES INDIGESTION."

It is perfectly natural when you eat something and have a stomach ache to blame it on what you ate, but usually the character of the food itself is of no consequence in the causation of an attack of indigestion.

Some foods have been tagged with the description of "indigestible". Ice cream used to be considered a rubber of the stomach. So with hot bread.

I had an uncle who was born in Virginia and used to eat no form of bread except hot rolls, pancakes and waffles. He finally developed indigestion, to the great satisfaction of my sixth, and all the rest of our relatives who were brought up in the cold, dry bread tradition. With one acclaim they all pronounced his indigestion as due to the hot bread which he ate, when he was young. He was for years for me a horrible example and warning against such practices. The fact was that his indigestion was due to a collection of gallstones in his gall bladder, which had nothing to do with the food he ate at all.

Foods That "Don't Like You"

You often hear some such thing said as "I like cucumbers but they don't like me." Of course, cucumbers being mostly roughage, exert a stimulating action on the intestine so that they sometimes produce cramps. Instead of this being harmful, it is probably good for the taker of cucumbers.

In one particular respect, there may be something said for the theory that food causes indigestion. This is in the case that a person may be sensitive or allergic to a certain food which, when he eats it, produces digestive upset, but in the majority of cases the good old stomach can handle nearly any kind of food that you want to put in it.

Beauty Expert Gives Hints On Soothing Aching Feet

Solves Hot Weather Problem

Sunshine and fresh air rout the foot

By JULIET SHELBY

Central Press Writer on Beauty

WARM WEATHER, with all its increased activities, is with us again, and we hope that you are planning to make the most of it. If you are fortunate enough to be living or visiting in the country you won't be able to resist taking long walks. And if you live in a large city you'll be longing to go to the sea or go strolling in the park.

There is only one thing that could mar your enjoyment of Nature these days. And that is that old bugaboo—aching feet.

While your feet are hurting you can think of nothing else. Your best beau may be whispering sweet nothings, your food parcel may be delivered, but you just don't have been longing for—but all you want on earth is to get home and take off your shoes. It is sad but true, that nobody can think of higher things while their tootsies throb.

Hot days seem to bring foot ailments with them. Feet swell in the heat, and it's a wise girl who prepares for this emergency. Be sure to get shoes that fit and are comfortable. Don't economize on your footgear. Three pairs of shoes that are of good make and suit your feet are much more practical than ten pairs of cheap shoes that cause pain every minute that you have them on.

It is also a very good idea to get stockings a half size larger in summer. And wear at least one clean pair a day. If you have a chance to go home and change your stockings more frequently, by all means do so. And when you wash your stockings give them several rinsings, then you will be sure that you have gotten every bit of the soap out. If soap is left in stockings it will make your feet burn and smart.

After you have had your bath rub some talcum powder on your feet before putting on your stockings and dust a little in your shoes.

Daily Treatment Helps

If you are one of the unlucky ones who constantly have foot troubles, then you should give yourself a foot treatment when you get home every day. With treatment and the proper shoes and stockings you will be able to prevent these conditions, unless you have some definite ailment that should be cured for by a doctor.

Here is a treatment that will be a real boon. When you get home remove your shoes and stockings and wash your feet in warm water, using a mild soap. Then put a cup of Epsom salts into a foot bath of hot water and soak your feet for half an hour. Next dry them into very cold water. Do this several times, leaving your feet in the water about a minute each time. Dry them thoroughly and use a sheepskin mitt, and if you are going to be around the house wear some comfortable bedroom slippers or moccasins until you have to put on your shoes. Try to arrange your occupations so that you can wear a different pair of shoes in the evening. This is very restful on your feet.

Week for Parents Advocated

Time Between May 1 and 8 Suggested for Event

By VIRGINIA LEE

THIS YEAR May Day, which has been celebrated as Child Health Day in the United States, comes on Sunday. The following Sunday is Mother's Day, and it is suggested by Clara Savage Littledale, editor of a parents' magazine, that the week should be made Better Parenthood Week.

Such days and weeks of celebrating one thing and another may sadly be—and frequently are—commercialized, says Mrs. Littledale's editorial, but the fact remains that the attention called to the first of May has resulted in realization of the need for "better protection for children against tuberculosis, for widespread support of the campaign against venereal disease, for financial aid to help in discovering the cause and treatment of infantile paralysis and other all-important health measures."

In the same way Mothers' Day has not only called attention to mothers neglected by their adult children, but to the need for measures to make motherhood safer for all women.

"Parent education is sweeping the continent because parents want to learn, are eager, to be better fathers and mothers because they are deeply conscious of their own needs," she asserts.

"All friends of children everywhere," then, are asked to join in making Better Parenthood Week a success.

WORRIED: Your boy friend's mother is right about her son being altogether too young to think of marriage. No man under 21 should marry, and it is not unlike this mother is very much worried at your ardent love affair.

Eight months is not much difference in your ages, and would not matter at all if you were both older, but as the older of the two, my dear girl, why not try to see matters from his mother's point of view and show her that you will not tempt her son to do anything rash? Go to her and tell her that you will give him up if she wants you to, for his sake. If your love is the right kind, you will do what is best for him, you know.

I know it will be very hard for you, and I sympathize with you, but don't go with him against his mother's wishes. It would be most disastrous for both of you if you married.

REULAH W. M. S.

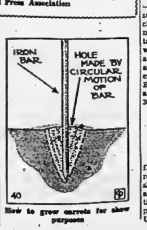
The April meeting of Reulah W. M. S. was held in the church, April 19th.

Mrs. A. Wood, group leader, had charge. The meeting was opened by reading of hymn 340, the theme. The Church, the World-Wide Kingdom. After singing hymn 139, the Lord's prayer was repeated in unison. The Scripture lesson taken from Ephesians 1: 15-23; Phil. 2: 1-13 was read alternately. Minutes of previous meeting were read and approved. Mrs. Lovblond had a reading on temperance. Watch Tower was given by Mrs. James, Mrs. Lockard and Mrs. Wickens. Mrs. Prest gave a short reading entitled "Friendships Corner." The third chapter of the Study Book was explained very fully by Mrs. A. Cooper. Mrs. Wood led by reading from the "Record".

The meeting closed by singing a hymn and prayer by Mrs. Clemens.

That he has drunk over 146,000 pints of beer, an average of 19 a day, in the last 40 years, is the claim of a retail liquor dealer in Uxbridge, England, who is retiring from business, but probably not from drinking.

TODAY'S GARDEN-GRAPH



By DEAN HALLIDAY

Released by Central Press Association

YEARS AGO carrots were only thought of in connection with soups or as a vegetable dish, but today, with their increasing popularity for jams and pies, they should be included in all vegetable gardens.

As shown in this Garden-Graph, if you are planning to grow carrots for exhibition purposes, you will want them long, tapering and smooth, without any deformities from stony soil. After cultivating the land, push an iron bar into the soil for about two feet. Remove the bar and fill this hole with sifted soil. Next place a few seeds in the hole. Later thin the young plants, leaving but one plant in each hole.

Carrot seeds should not be sown if the soil is wet enough to cling to the tools, or just before a rain. If a heavy rain follows sowing it beats the soil down so that the seeds are not apt to sprout.

Ham Provides Delicious Meat for Cleaning Time

By MRS. MARY MORTON

Menu Hint

Baked Ham in a Blanket
Scalloped Potatoes
Stewed Tomatoes Green Salad
Fresh or Stewed Fruit
Cookies Tea, Coffee or Milk

House cleaning time is here and also out-of-door time when one doesn't want to spend so much time indoors cooking. Ham is an excellent meat to cook for a family and to have on hand. Such good sandwiches can be made from home cooked ham, um-m-m! Cold sliced ham is as good with vegetables and a salad, and the scraps may be used in various delicious ways, so a ham is a good buy. Have you baked ham in a blanket? I am giving you the recipe today. A ham is also an excellent meat to serve at a picnic or to a church or club group, for you are busy house cleaning, why not boil the potatoes in their skins, while you are doing the breakfast dishes, and cream instead of scalloping them for dinner? And a good-sized batch of cookies is another time saver. True, a batch of cookies takes time to make, but after they are done they can be served alone as dessert, with stewed fruit, or pudding, with tea in the afternoon, etc. ?

Today's Recipes

BAKED HAM IN A BLANKET

Pour over one flour, one cup brown sugar, two tablespoons ground cinnamon, two tablespoons dry mustard, one teaspoon pepper, cider or water. Mix dry ingredients and add enough cider or water to make a dough. Roll a sheet large enough to cover a ham all over. Bake uncovered for 15 minutes in a 400-degree oven, then reduce to 300 degrees, for three hours.

FACTS AND FANCIES

Simple But Pretty

Prepare strawberry or raspberry flavored gelatine according to directions on package. Chill. Place slices of banana in an attractive arrangement in mold; when gelatine mixture is slightly thickened, pour into mould. Chill until firm. Unmold gelatine. Arrange banana slices in an attractive design around base of mold. Serve with whipped cream.

Cocoa Paste

One cup sugar, one cup cocoa, one cup water, pinch of salt. Combine dry ingredients and add water. Boil about two minutes, then cook 10 double boiler for 30 minutes. Cool. Pour into a jar and keep in a cool place. To make cocoa, add one teaspoon of this cocoa paste to each cup of milk, hot or cold. Good for children and handy when guests come.

Period Lamps—New Furniture

Definitely styled period lamps, designed to harmonize perfectly with furniture, have arrived, and the "independent" lamps that blithely ignore period types are out. So say the style experts who have seen to it that lamps are now offered to the public which will fit in with eighteenth century English and French, Georgian, Chippendale or any other period furniture. These new lamps are in keeping with each period in form, motif, detail, coloring and decoration, and harmonize perfectly with the wood and upholstered furniture of today.

Gravely Ill

Countess of Strathmore, aged mother of Queen Elizabeth, who is reported to be gravely ill at her London home following a heart attack.

By LISBETH

THE SEASON promises wide popularity for lace for both daytime and evening. Paris dress makers are using it extensively, and many of the formal models combine lace with net and other thin materials.

The evening group include many innovations in lace. Paquin, for instance, recently showed a gown of lace in black and green, with the green pattern worked in ribbon effect on the sheer black ground.

Then Maggy Rouff has a dinner dress of petal pink peau d' ange lace draped completely with tone cut neckline and long, slender sleeves.

Another model shown on this side of the water recently, was from Robert Piguet, and was in heavy navy blue lace. It was a two-piece dinner gown with a sweater-like jacket.

A fine white cotton lace by Chantal also was striking, the lace outlined in pale red, with a long loose bolero. Many other prominent couturiers are stunning things with this material.

White and Black Lined

White and black are great favorites in lace as in other fabrics, but exquisite colors are also used, and are never more lovely than when done in lace.

One clever combination of lace and marquisette is shown left, the lace being corded. This dress suggests the perfect type for the bride's young looking mother—or for a young matron. The deep flounce of the skirt is appliqued on to the marquisette, and is edged with footmarks facing to emphasize the fullness of the skirt—a favorite styling for evening dresses this season.

The scalloped edged of the bolero jacket flares into a suggested peplum. As photographed the dress is in misty gray with a huge violet corsage, but it also comes in other pastels and in deep colors.

Black and white, and often black lace and white chiffon, is another favorite under the Paris dressmakers.

Paton, who designed the other gown shown here, has struck a particularly interesting note with his use of black Chantilly lace diagonally banding white chiffon. The dress is gathered completely throughout the molded bodice to the hipline where it jumps out gracefully into the wide waltz skirt.

All in all, it is sheers that are having their innings right now, for evenings particularly.

Spruce tree sap, in the north woods, has two popular uses — as chewing gum and material for patching canoes.

Keep Guns Away From Children

Many Mishaps Occur With Rifles, Says Dr. Myers

By GARRY C. MYERS, PH. D.

Head Department Parent Education, Cleveland College, Western Reserve University.

CRIME PROGRAMS on the air may have good values for adults, but hardly for those who listen most to them—children from five to fourteen. Many parents tell me that these children seem to be sorry for the criminal who is caught and punished. And what of the bad mental hygiene effect on these youngsters from such programs.

Thanks to such programs and scenes of shooting on the screen, there is an epidemic of play with toy guns, by children from 6 to 12. Even on the playground in some public schools. Teachers really could forbid them there. Anyway there seems to be little education-al value from such play. We wish teachers would spend more time on the school playmd. Some while ago I saw two boys emerging from Sunday school of the Society of a Quaker meeting house with toy guns trained on each other. A most unusual sight!

Neighbors banding together might be able to forbid gun play. Certainly parents who exercise control over their children—aren't there still a few?—should be able to train their children never to point a gun at a person—for obvious reasons.

Conducting a forum with a group of about 400 fifth and sixth grade children in a small city, I was asked by a boy how he could keep his baby brother from using his BB gun when he wanted it. When I asked how many of them had a BB gun, exactly 100 hands went up. Consider the eyes that are lost from BB guns. I know an eye surgeon who annually removes a dozen or more eyes a year destroyed by BB guns. It's the innocent bystander rather than the child with the gun that is the victim. If you give your child a BB gun you probably render him a menace to all other children and adults of the neighborhood. Why communities do not outlaw the BB gun more than I can understand.

Supervision Needed

If always an adult will supervise the use of the BB gun or bow and arrow, safety might be guaranteed. But these weapons also must be guarded from other hands. Even an occasional boy or girl might be trained to use them if always under proper guidance of an adult, as at a camp or place remote from a town or city. But the gun had better be locked away or left at home when no place. Although your child might learn to handle a gun safely he probably will be tempted to show this gun to other boys who are less trained. There is where the chief peril lies.

And when adults have a gun about the house it should be under lock and key when not in use by them. Such precautions are more necessary in these days when a gun is so alluring to the growing child and youth.

Yes, I do answer questions personally. Send a envelope of self-addressed envelope with a three-cent stamp on it. Just write me about any human problem which worries you and let me try to help.

PINK IS A FAVORITE COLOR FOR SUMMER

By Central Press

PINK IS tops in color circles this spring. It may be used merely as an accent in trimmings or jewelry, or it may make a whole dress, suit or coat.

Most of us recall a great fondness for pink in our childhood. It seemed to us a beautiful shade. Most of us have never outgrown our fondness for it, either, whether we admit it or not.

Little Ann Rutherford, screen player, is wearing a shell pink dress for an afternoon at a resort, Schnapps, the dachshund, likes to go for a walk with Ann and her pink dress. The dress is made of rough crepe and has a scalloped split at the hemline of her skirt in front.

The scarf she wears is dubonnet with shell pink dots, and the becoming hat is also shell pink with dubonnet blocking.

Deal Sending Mungo to Cards Cold as Last Winter, When Pitching Arm Goes Wrong

Dodger Hurler No Longer Classed as One of "Big Three"

MELTON WINS FIFTH

Indians Pick up Half Game in Win Over A's

By ED FEDER

The boys had a deal all smoked up. Van Mungo's arm was going to St. Louis and Dazzy Vance's big bat would come to Brooklyn. The thing was supposed to be the biggest frery season. All details were settled, trotted out and completed. Then something happened. It was Van's arm.

If there was ever anything to the deal—and its none how it did get so far as the talking stage—the whole thing was cold today because Van's foreboding salary wing has been a regular "coozin" among baseball bankers.

Branch Rickey breathed a sigh of relief that he still has Mauler Medwick and doesn't have to worry about the big wheels at Monsigny flinging.

Yesterday was the day the deal was supposed to reach its head, but when Van dropped his third straight decision, losing a 10-3 affair to Cincinnati Reds, you didn't need a crystal ball to see you how matters stood.

He gave up eight runs in his fourfouring trick on the mound, and, although all were unearned, he couldn't miss seeing those four hits in the first inning whistle past his ears.

No Longer in "Big Three".

From what he has shown up to now this season, Mungo, like Dean, can no longer be ranked with Carl Hubbell on the pitching "big three." In four starts, Van has done the route only once. He has yet to win his first game, has been knocked out for 36 hits and 16 runs in 24 innings.

Meanwhile, since his lumbago let up, Medwick has been carrying right along with the big stick, although he had a comparatively poor day yesterday. However, his rookie teammate, Ross Slaughter, made up for it by whacking a triple that drove home the run that gave the Cardinals a 4-3 victory over the Phillies. This win boosted the Cards into sixth place and dropped the Phillies down to seventh.

New York Giants found their Pittsburgh jinx the same oldfangled outfit as ever, and waltzed away with an 11-7 win over the Pirates. Cliff (Gabe) Melton pitched his fifth straight victory.

Comedy of Errors.

Chicago Cubs got, too, knocking out the Reds 13-9 in a comedy of errors that saw Lonnie Frey, Reds' ace second baseman, and Billy Jurges, Cubs' shortstop, each contribute five miscues. Then something happened. It was Van's arm.

If there was ever anything to the deal—and its none how it did get so far as the talking stage—the whole thing was cold today because Van's foreboding salary wing has been a regular "coozin" among baseball bankers.

Branch Rickey breathed a sigh of relief that he still has Mauler Medwick and doesn't have to worry about the big wheels at Monsigny flinging.

Yesterday was the day the deal was supposed to reach its head, but when Van dropped his third straight decision, losing a 10-3 affair to Cincinnati Reds, you didn't need a crystal ball to see you how matters stood.

He gave up eight runs in his fourfouring trick on the mound, and, although all were unearned, he couldn't miss seeing those four hits in the first inning whistle past his ears.

The second place Yankees and the Detroit Tigers were rained out.

Old Jimmy Dykes, who's been forced back to the team because of his second base problem, collected four hits in six chances, but his White Sox couldn't hold out and dropped a 4-3 decision to Washington in thirteen innings. It was the Nats' second 13-inning win of the week. Buck Newsom's six-hit relief pitching record was broken by the Boston Red Sox, who clubbed him and St. Louis Browns for a 7-3 win.

ELEVEN PLAYERS GIVEN TRYOUT

Napanee And Picton Juniors to Get Chance With Black Hawks

Eleven Ontario hockey players will be given an opportunity to become members of Chicago Black Hawks' team, Bill Tobin stated when he invited four junior hockey players of the Bay of Quinte district to go to Chicago in October for a tryout. The local players who accepted the invitation were Carmen Wickards and Herbert Collyer, defencemen of Picton Juniors; Wall Berow Jr. and Wilbur Lewis, forwards, of Napanee Juniors who won the district championship last year. No contracts were offered, but all players accepted the invitation.

Tobin stated that he was interested in the Port Colborne team and left here for that town. The two Napanee players approached were by a Black Hawks' scout last winter and the two district teams have been playing fine games and were looked over by several scouts, including Dick Irwin of the Maple Leafs.

TWENTY TEAMS IN KI-Y LOOP

Organization Meeting For League Held at "Y"

Twenty teams, including ten juvenile clubs, completed the entries for the Belleville Ki-Y softball leagues at at meeting held in the Y.M.C.A. last evening. All club managers were present while the group rules and regulations were explained by Instructor Harold Pretty. Fred Ricken of the "Y", The Juvenile Leagues club stated it will open on Monday night, however, with the "Y" boys clashing with the Tuf Benders at Queen Alexandra School grounds and the Athletics and C.O.D. kids at Queen Victoria School grounds.

The juvenile and midget groups were divided into two sections, five juvenile clubs to a section. At three games each night the midget clubs entered, two groups of three clubs each were formed, with four games each. Seven teams entered will compete in one group, and the other seven midget groups swinging into action on Tuesday night, with the Juvenile meeting opposite clubs on Monday evening with a double header.

The Belleville Ki-Y league executive is composed of Kiwanian Jim Barclay, honorary president; Fred Ricken of the "Y" secretary; J. E. Shortt, Y. M. C. A. while all grounds supervision are members of the Ki-Y Kiwanis Club and include Sid Howell, Q. A. S. supervisor, Harold V. S. supervisor and Wm. Merklinger. Also on the executive the 20 team captains and 35 players were present to receive final instructions at the league meeting. With an even dozen players composing each team and a total of 20 clubs competing there will be a total of 240 boys playing softball in the local Ki-Y League this season.

The complete schedule for all groups will appear in next issue when the opening dates having been mentioned above.

SEE INCREASES IN REVENUE BY GROWTH OF TEAK

Forests Produce Valuable Wood Under Government Supervision

TAKES 80 YEARS

Port of Spain, Trinidad, May 7.—(CP)—Teak, pride of the rich forests of India and Burma, is being cultivated in this colony and is being made to supplant less valuable natural vegetation.

Producing one of the most durable woods in the world, the trees are being planted under a government-fostered scheme at the rate of 140 acres annually. Proceeds of revenue are seen from the growth of the wood because of its value. Useful in ships' hulls the wood, because of its resistance to decay may also be used in bridges and wharves. It has a price of about $3.12 a cubic foot in England at present.

The plantings are in districts receiving as high as 70 feet present annual rainfall. Natural vegetation wrecked by Caribbean hurricanes. During the storm of 1933 the wood was broken off in a teak plantation where the trees averaged 80 feet in height, through surrounding forests of native vegetation remained intact.

The first trees were planted here in 1913 with seed imported from Burma, and yearly planting under systematic plans only started in 1928. The scheme is to plant 140 acres annually on a rotation of 80 years. At this rate of planting, 11,200 acres will have been planted at the end of the first rotation.

Not only are the most durable, it is the most valuable of all woods. It has a price second only to that of mahogany. For use in tropical countries it has no equal. It is a native of Burma but is also found in the Malay Archipelago.

Leopards are becoming so common in the east Abercorn, Northern Rhodesia, that one walked up the main shopping street to within a few yards of the Government offices, forced the buildings and strolled back to the jungle.

Fighting Fox Will Be Heavy Favorite To Win Derby

Louisville, Ky., May 7 (AP)—Memories of one of the greatest horses in the United States race history will hover over Churchill Downs as ten hand-picked three-year-olds prepared to test speed and stamina in the 64th running of the $50,000 Kentucky Derby late today.

Fighting Fox, flashy bay from the Belair stud of William Woodward, New York banker, the favorite for several at gradually receding odds to match the 1930 performance of the great Gallant Fox—the elder son of Sir Gallahad 3rd-Marguerite—before an expected crowd of 60,000.

Canadian interest in the classic was boosted today when the colors of George Woolf of Cardston, Alta., to ride Brevity, Friend's Co-Sport 2 place of the less-experienced Bobby Doleer. Originally Woolf was slated to pilot The Chief but Trainer Earle Sande turned the Howard colt over to Jack Westrope when Stagehand was withdrawn.

The switch placed two Canadian jockeys in the race, with Alfie Robertson of Toronto up on Mrs. Ethel V. Mars' Mountain Ridge. But a strike by Co-Sport, Mountain Ridge or the other rank outsider, Mrs. William O'Toole's Elooto, would furnish the race with one of the biggest surprises since Donerail won in 1913 and paid $1 to $.

Sports Roundup

By EDDIE BRIETZ

New York, May 7.—(AP)—Francis Ouimet, who is supposed to be a non-playing captain of the United States Walker Cup team may do a real shoulder to shoulder job of it.

Eddie Murphy, Ouimet's golfing partner, says Francis is taking his game more seriously and is "off the hot".

Pitcher Luke Hamlin, who already had one big game for Manager Burleigh Grimes, is suspected he had designs on Van Mungo's job.

Mungo has been entirely too tame lately to suit Burleigh.

Looks like Fighting Fox will be the favorite when they give him "arum" again at Louisville this afternoon.

They now have Lou Gehrig hitting .444 and Tommy Henrich joined the Yankees—which means that the Yanks iron man is only an honorary after the fact of Murderers' Row.

Hammerthrow hero on the Amsterdam and Los Angeles Olympics, will arrive shortly to make a world tour as a professional boxer and wrestler. . . . Old Tom Clarke, Giants' coach, got that old feeling when the Giants arrived in Cincinnati and they assigned him the same locker they had used twenty years ago. Now a active pitching staff is making a mockery of baseball writers say young Don Rose has been in the spark plug of the Detroit Tigers.

BOB SEEDS MAKES BATTING HISTORY IN BUFFALO GAME

Newark Outfielder Hits Homer in Four Consecutive Innings

TORONTO WINS

For Second Time in Two Days Leafs Shutout Jersey City 5-0

Bob Seeds, the rangy 30-year-old outfielder of Newark Bears sent the "bigger fibbetts" of the International League deep in the storm cellars today after his explosion on a load of batting marks in Buffalo.

A pitching duel was in progress between the Bears and the Bisons yesterday until Seeds drove in the first run in the fourth inning. He landed a homer over the left field wall with a man on base and after that things happened.

Before the official scorer could get his breath, Seeds belted out four successive homers in four consecutive innings, a feat that the fans at the game in the storm cellars believe they hadn't heard or seen of before until Seeds drove in seven runs, ten of them with his homers and two with singles, which gave him a perfect day at the plate.

Seeds' prodigious output was one of the few who responded nobly with the bats as the Buffalo pitchers fifteen hits off the 12-5 victory for the league leaders.

The six-foot Texan, who's been up with four major league clubs, remained in the Buffalo outfield for the whole game on in the fifth, sent three ahead of him in the ninth, and wound up with his Ruthian holiday with a two-run circuit clout in the seventh.

A New Record.

The proud major leaguer can't boast of any performance like that. The Texan's mark is held by Lou Gehrig of the Yankees with four homers in seven innings at bat, but not in successive innings, and Johnny Frize, with four in successive times at bat, but spread over two games.

Seeds' one home run proved the undoing of old Pat (Bhubber) Malone, the ex-Yank hurler. Malone, making his first relief job for Baltimore Orioles, was the victim of Jack Stundy's four-baser in the seventh inning which gave Rochester Red Wings an 8-7 win.

International Stundy got Syracuse down in six seventh straight defeat by 10-7 in a dingy ball game that saw 20 pitchers perform for both sides. Among them they issued 14 walks, hit three batsmen and scorched three wild pitches.

In striking contrast to the other games, Toronto Maple Leafs blanked Jersey City Skeeters for the second straight day with only one hurler user for each side. Johnny Allen and Lou Jorgens were hits but had more control than canny Baker who gave six.

Yesterday's Stars

Pete Appleton, Senators—Singled in winning run in thirteenth inning as Nats won Chicago 4-3 after pitching well in relief role.

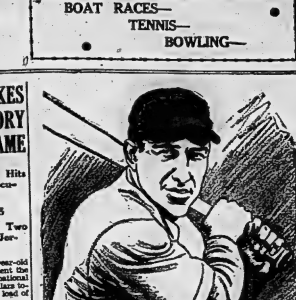
Johnny McCarthy and Hank Leiber, Giants—Each drove in three runs to account for five tallies in 11-7 triumph over Pirates.

Leo Nonnenkamp, Red Sox—As substitute made two hits, driving in one run, spiked Browns, had nine to the bench Athletics 7-1 and was figured in double play.

Enos Slaughter, Cardinals — His triple in ninth helped Cards beat Brown with run that beat Phillies 4-3.

Joe Marty, Cubs—Drove in three runs in 13-9 victory over Bees.

Johnny Allen and Ken Heintzelman, Indians—Allen pitched 7 innings and Heintzelman five to beat Athletics 4-1 as Keltner's homer with one on accounted winning rally.



Frank McCormick, Reds—Clouted triple, double and single, scoring two runs, against Dodgers.

There seems to be somewhat of a paradox surrounding the local softball set-up, which has its ups and in a quandary. For instance Coach "Red" Townsend, of the Aajmah Juniors has a supply of players, while other team managers are begging and pleading for softball material. "Tell me, where have all the softball players disappeared in this city?" asked Chuck Barnett, pulling another hair from his A.C.O. squad, while Hal Kemp of the National Grocers is also in the field for two or three players to fill out his team. In contrast, however, Coach Townsend says he will soon have to commence his weeding out process. — "I just hate to have to cut some of these kids loose, they're real promising," remarked the sorrowful coach over the matter mauling boilers. Of course these extra players will be available for the intermediate clubs, who claim there is a drought on softballers, in answer to Coach Townsend's query, however, we'd suggest Frank Sexton, Point Anne's atom of softball energy, could tell Chuck where most of the softball material is located. Incidentally we hear rumours to the effect, that two or three softballers are being asked for Northern Ontario before long.

The K.C.A.V. "Flyers" of the Royal Canadian Air Force are holding light practices at the Airdrome these nights, but they find the going rough subsequent to four good baseball practices and will adjourn to the local Exhibition Park for the remainder of their pre-season workouts. The Flyers boast of a goodly numbers of their workouts, but have yet to smooth a catcher of pitcher. Manager Sergeant Major Bell is on the lookout for a receiver and we hear Johnnie "Hi-Pockets" Lalonde, the R.C.A.F. basketball mainstay, is labouring on the hilltop for the position. Lalonde hurled junior ball in Ottawa before joining the Royal Force, a law enforcer of Ellis is his battery-mate to date, although Dan Cowley, also of hockey fame, has been given an opportunity to watch the "airmen" practice before the end of the season verses the Belleville club at Queen's.

By a recent letter to his parents George Pepper, Belleville's gift to motorcycle racing, it was learned, he has been named captain of a Canadian racing team of motorcycle riders touring Europe. The Canadian team is one of the best drawing cards around the circuit, we hear, and Pepper, known as Hank Ryan and his Booth and Mc-Crae scribblers are methodically making softball hay at the Q.M.S. grounds.

George will make a better showing, as no doubt the antiquated machine he tried to race with last year were the cause of his ultimate reverse. It should be gratifying to local sportsmen, however, to hear one of our own native boys is apparently making good in the foreign field of sport.

The response to the announcement that the first local interscholastic baseball practice would be held on Monday evening at the Fair Grounds has met with surprising comments. We know of a number of local ballsters, who desired the diamonds game for softball, who are also fans of baseball, now that a good interscholastic league has been assured. Earl Fanning is quite anxious to have a large turn out on Monday night, especially in the ranks of the more seasoned and veteran players. "We have to appoint a coach and naturally we will have to rely on some veteran player for a start pool, but regardless, all positions are vacant and with respect to baseball interscholastic, we feel baseball will boom once more in Belleville," stated Mr. Fanning today as he invited all participants to Monday's work out, which will be light.

Hockey fans would hardly recognize the Bisset Arena these days. A dance floor has been erected at the north end, newly surfaced, while at the south end we see the wrestling ring. Incidentally the Arena dances will be inaugurated this evening with a gala opening.

Fred Ricken tells us there are twenty teams playing Ki-Y softball this season. Ten juvenile, six midget and four junior clubs. The season opens with the juveniles playing a double bill on Monday night, Snow Whites vs. Tuf Benders at Q.A.S. grounds and St. Mikes vs. O.B.D. at Q.V.S. grounds.

HODGE PODGE — The smallest field of horses since 1922 will face the starter in the Kentucky Derby today. . . . Bob Seeds, hard-hitting Newark centre fielder, established something of a record yesterday by hitting four home runs in four consecutive times at bat and added another brace of hits for good measure. . . . Latest hockey jewel—young Walt Atanas and Evans of Napanee, Carman Weldman and Herb Colyer, Picton, slated to try out with the Black Hawks again. What—that story in again? . . . Toronto Leafs seem to have a good home club for a change. . . . While others are talking baseball—Jimmy Hank Ryan and his Booth and Mc-Crae scribblers are methodically making softball hay at the Q.M.S. grounds.

Wrestling Last Night

Newark, N.J.—Dutch Schultz, 182, Germany, threw Elmer Kudis, 173, Japan, 34:33.

Buffalo, N.Y.—Wladislaw Talun, 216, Poland, defeated Jules Strongbow, 261, Tulsa, Okla., two straight falls.

CHAPTER 13

Judy Gets a Commission

In the morning, Barnes' body was taken to the home of his sister in town.

Poor old fellow!—giving his life because of that! But he could no longer keep secret his knowledge of the murder of Elliot Caldwell.

"That is it, wasn't it, Mother?" I said "He knew and he was about to tell."

"And got his mouth shut," mothered Mac. Instead of further involving Norma Caldwell, this just about lets her out, according to my thinking."

"But not in Parker's—he thinks he has her all chained for this last. Oh, Mac—I'm positive now that it's Biddy. And he's almost frantic for fear he is going to be caught." I thought a moment. "It's Biddy or—or that other one."

"What other one, Judy?"

"That other person who is about the house."

Mac did not laugh at me now. For the first time, I think, he faced the fact of that other presence. "Lets see, scandals pushed Elias—somebody went into Mrs. Caldwell's room and wrecked her to make it seem like a bullet graze —several times you have heard strange laughter. And it was not that face at the window of Alcott's garage, real nor of this to the Sheriff, Judy?"

"Yes—a little, not all. It somehow sounds silly."

"That's not your reason."

I slowly shook my head. "Well —deep down—I still have a feeling it's Biddy. He does have these crazy spells and that big sister knows—that she is trying desperately to shield him. Had the only answer I can find to this riddle, Mac, is—I've been over and over it ten times. I'm more convinced since Barnes was killed. Only a crazy person would have shot Barnes."

"I think you are all wrong there Barnes' death just about convinces me it isn't Biddy. Careful thinking back of shoving Barnes off. You see Barnes met the murderer that night—he had appointed with him—promised to say nothing. Might have had to promise or ferfeit his life then and elsewhere—he murdered for hold of that fact." The sheriff sucked in his breath through his discolored teeth. "Blame myself there, girl —blame myself. Should have got him to tell before; but Barnes was a queer old duck, and he'd given his word."

"Perhaps it wasn't that," I suggested. "Perhaps he was threatened."

The sheriff reached down and patted my shoulder. A analytical thought. The eyes flashed swiftly about the little group as we answered the detectives' questions.

"It simmers down," went on Mac, carefully, "to these people. "Lawyer Langford, Miss Lydia and Grace Linnell in the library—let's them out. We know Elias was under the covers—just where she said she was. Mrs. Alcott was there. And now there are left Mrs. Caldwell and Biddy—"

"And an unknown person!" I added breathlessly.

"And—Peter Alcott," said Mac.

I found I had to do most of the work in the kitchen that day, for Elias was absolutely useless I think she was fond of Barnes in her queer, silent way, but now she was terribly frightened and troubled.

"Who next?" she quavered, pulling a dish down with three pulls as it up and carrying it some other place. "Who'll be killed next? There's ways there ain't. Why! Not a very cheerful outlook, to say the least! And when a door slammed behind me, I nearly fainted!

I was writing home every day, trying to make the family understand there was nothing to worry about, but I knew that after today's papers Dad was liable to walk in any day, pick me up bodily and carry me straight to Mother.

I was busy shelling peas on the back porch when Sheriff Whims came around the corner.

Was I ever glad to see him! And when he said he had been looking for me, I was thrilled with excitement.

"Want you to do a little sleuthing. Want you to find a little 32 revolver with one cartridge exploded."

"The gun that killed Barnes!" I cried.

"Ah-ah. Search all the ladies' rooms and downstairs. I don't mean just look around—search!"

"Biddy's room, too?"

He smiled. "Sure—Biddy's room. Go—but I doubt if you'll find it there."

"Please—you don't think Norma Caldwell did this, do you?"

He did not answer for a moment, and then he said slowly: "Mrs. Caldwell left the Alcotts' garage at nine-thirty, Peter was with her. I think they went out to the lighthouse. I don't know they did. He came up here to the house with her, and Barnes was fussing about — looking up — seeing that everything was in order. There was opportunity, motive, and plenty of opportunity. Was there motive? Barnes knew who bumped off Caldwell, and—darn it! I would have got it out of him today, and somehow—the murderer got hold of that fact." The sheriff sucked in his breath through his discolored teeth. "Blame myself there, girl —blame myself. Should have got him to tell before; but Barnes was a queer old duck, and he'd given his word."

"Perhaps it wasn't that," I suggested. "Perhaps he was threatened."

The sheriff reached down and patted my shoulder. A analytical thought. The eyes flashed swiftly about the little group as we answered the detectives' questions.

"It simmers down," went on Mac, carefully, "to these people. "Lawyer Langford, Miss Lydia and Grace Linnell in the library—let's them out. We know Elias was under the covers—just where she said she was. Mrs. Alcott was there. And now there are left Mrs. Caldwell and Biddy—"

An ideal volume for Mothers' Day is written by Anna Curtis Chandler in her book "Famous Mothers and Their Children". In this book of three stories of this relationship between well-known mothers and their children, the author has achieved a tribute to all mothers. Her selection of stories comes from many walks of life, from many countries and periods, ranging from Pica, Bernardone, mother of St. Francis to Marie Curie. Among others included are Mary Arden Shakespeare, Marie Antoinette, Nancy Hanks Lincoln, Mary Peary, Marzeni Carnegie, and Abba May Alcott.

Eugene Lyons, American correspondent in Moscow from 1928 to 1934, writes of his years of growing disillusionment in Russia in his book "Assignment in Utopia." A communist by conviction though not a party member, Mr. Lyons went to Russia with a record of service in the left-wing cause behind him. But in Russia his dream of a socialistic brotherhood became a nightmare. His book is an account of how, and why this change in his attitude came about. The weight of his evidence is overwhelming. It was "class war" in Mr. Lyons' case, and as class war it resembled other wars. He came out of Russia "convinced that defending one dictatorship is in fact defending the principle of tyranny." Mr. Lyons' reason has said of this book "Of all the books on Russia published by Americans thus far, 'Assignment in Utopia' seems to me to be the most important, and the most moving".

The pleasures and penalties of going back to the land are described by Charles Allen Clark in his book "R.F.D." A Book-Of-The-Month Club selection and a best-seller, this book is the story of a man who left New York for a farm in Ohio. Himself growing up on a farm and editor, the author in 1934 inherited a farm near Bellefontaine, Ohio and decided to try his hand at farming. The results of the first three years experience are contained in his book as well as his description of his neighbors, his farm-hands and his philosophy. In "R.F.D., Mr. Smart does not call all men to return to the soil but he makes it clear that he is grateful and deeply humble in the possession of a gift that to many is a secret dream.

A companion to that popular volume of "unwritten history" "The Robber Barons" is presented by Mathew Josephson in "The Politicos, 1865-1896". In his former volume, the author wrote about the men who did 'much and said little. His latest book is of men who did little and who talked much. These "politicos" or key men, played an important part in the affairs of state during the years of professional politicians. Among these were such men as Horace Greeley, Grover Cleveland, William Jennings Bryan, and Mark Hanna. In the words of the author "Their annals are often those of great and petty men, of mean, of minic disasters. But if the politicos were human, they were least they were often profoundly so, in spite of themselves—and human, all too human".

AT THE BELLE

Mark Twain's Classic, 'The Adventures of Tom Sawyer' in Technicolor, is the outstanding feature at the Belle which has been produced by David O. Selznick as a lavish technicolor production and which comes to the Belle Theatre today for a three day run, matinee daily, was, in its essence, an autobiography of the early life of Mark Twain, embellished with anecdotes and exaggerations from the author's fertile imagination.

In preparing the picture, Director Selznick International carried an extensive research into the appearances of the town of Hannibal in 1845 and its people.

None of the principal characters in the book were made up by Mark Twain; they were all people whom he had known. Even those associated during the period from his life to his nineteenth birthday, he spent in Hannibal. And many of the famous incidents in the book occurred in real life almost exactly as he told them.

Tom Sawyer, of course, Mark Twain, or Samuel Langhorne Clemens.

Aunt Polly was Mark Twain's own mother, Jane Lampton Clemens, and he admits in his autobiography to having caused her many of the torments related in the book.

Drawing a parallel as he did from his family and friends, he might well have caused some protest from Orion Clemens, brother of the author, but only one he ever apologized for was Sid Sawyer, Tom's half-brother in the book and a highly unpleasant character. Much of Sid was drawn from his own brother, Henry, but Mark Twain was careful to say, "Henry was a much better and finer boy than Sid ever was".

Among the characters familiar to Huck Finn was Tom Blankenship, Bobby Thatcher was Laura Hawkins and Joe Harper was John Briggs. Becky Thatcher, Douglas was Mrs. Hadikay, and Injun Joe was the actual name of a lowschmeizer. Huck's father, Judge Thatcher, Muff Potter and Dr. Robinson of the earliest were living in Hannibal thirty years before "Tom Sawyer" was written.

Like most boys of his age, Mark Twain had a keen interest during the Tom Sawyer period. She was Laura Hawkins, immortalized in the book as Becky Thatcher.

Long a household citizen of Hannibal, she died on Dec. 26, 1928, in the home of her son, L. E. Fraser. Mrs. Fraser was 78.

In later life Mrs. Fraser got considerable interest out of the fact that she was the original Becky Thatcher. Up to Mark Twain's death in 1910, they corresponded at intervals and in 1902 she went to Stormfield, his home in Redding, Connecticut, to visit him. John Briggs, another child in the prosperous farmer in Hannibal, was perhaps Mark Twain's closest friend as a boy. He was immortalized in the book as Joe Harper, Tom's bosom friend. When Mark Twain visited Hannibal the last time in 1902, he spent an afternoon riding around the town with Briggs, recalling their boyhood escapades together. Both of them died a few months later. Injun Joe in real life it was John Briggs who got lost on the cave, which was the cave purposes of romance Twain made it the setting for much of the story.

All of these characters live again on the screen in the Belle's Technicolor production.

Starring Tommy Kelly, fourteen year-old boy from the Bronx for whom a nation-wide search was conducted, he is said to be the only boy who recreates "Tom Sawyer". Tommy Kelly, Richard Carlson, Ann May Robson is Aunt Polly, Walter Brennan is Muff Potter and Jackie Moran is Becky Thatcher, Injun Joe is played by Victor McLaglen, Henry Hunter is Tom Sawyer's friend Joe Harper, and his half-brother Sid is played by David Holt. A large cast of other well known child and adult players make up the impressive cast.

Why Use A "Sissy" Laxative?

Chronic constipation has to do with the colon or large intestine. Unless the bowels are kept thoroughly emptied from time to time you become a victim of chronic constipation and poisoning of the system which results in colitis or other serious disease.

Mild or "sissy" laxatives merely cause a movement of the bowels without affecting a thorough cleaning out of the colon or large bowel. For this reason you are misled into thinking that you are doing all you can to overcome a complicated and poisoned condition of the system.

Then use Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills appreciate the value of a real medicine which not only effects a thorough cleansing of the colon or large bowel but also arouses the liver and kidneys to activity in filtering poisons from the blood.

Once you have proven the merits of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills you will never return to the use of "sissy" laxatives. Used regularly once a week this medicine ensures pure blood and freedom from constipation and the pains, aches and serious diseases which accompany it.

Trade Mark in Use 40 Years Ruled Invalid

All manufacturers owning trade marks which are descriptive, geographical, the name of a patent applied produce, or the name of a firmer, firm or corporation, may be considering whether their trade marks are valid or not in view of the decision handed down by the Council in the case of The Canadian Shredded Wheat Company Limited vs. Kellogg, wherein the question of descriptive trade marks was discussed.

This decision is of real importance to all trade mark owners who desire to protect their marks, because the trade mark in question which had been used for almost forty years in Canada, was held to be invalid. The Court based its on the decision what is necessary is that trade marks must not only have acquired distinctiveness so as to enable them to prosecute.

It may be that in view of this decision an amendment to the law may be necessary for the protection of such trade marks. Trade mark owners should, at the earliest opportunity, express their views on this point.

Rain Washed Out Show

Rain washed out the big air and artillery show planned today for Hitler and many striking looking for a state dinner at Palazzo Venezia the high spot of the days round of festivities.

Mussolini and Hitler were to speak briefly at the banquet.

During the week, the two Nazi-Fascist chieftains have talked a private of the Rome-Berlin axis, in the light of Hitler's annexation of Austria which put German troops at Italy's back door, and Premier

Defies Aberhart

Lieutenant-Governor J.C. Bowen of Alberta refused to sign the strike at the Alberta government house. Premier Aberhart said that the gas, light, water and telephone services have been disconnected. Bowen, at odds with the provincial government over his refusal to give royal assent to three stringent bank and press control bills passed by the legislature, declared that he would stay in his official residence until provincial authorities decided to show proper "respect" by presenting an order-in-council duly passed and signed.

Mussolini's pact of friendship with Britain.

Hitler and Mussolini motored to Santa Marinella for the aerial show and battle manoeuvres, but turned back when it became apparent the 400 planes in the show could not take off from the sodden airfield.

Yesterday, 11 Duce paraded 30,000 troops, equipped with every device of modern warfare, before Hitler in Rome. These were a part of the 8,-000,000 men Mussolini says he can muster in time of war.

BODY RECOVERED

Taken to Buckingham

Dr. W. J. Costello of Buckingham was notified and went to the river bank near the C.N.R. station on Papineau County. Plans called for removal of the body to a Buckingham undertaking establishment and then it will be taken to Ottawa.

Dr. Costello found Mr. Betts suffered a fractured skull and broken nose. He can also see evidences of foul play and the injuries were not suffered by falling either on the rocky shore or the riverbed.

Examination of Mr. Betts' pockets disclosed $3.25 in cash and watch intact. The watch stopped at 8.25 o'clock.

Grapplers found the body about three-quarters of a mile upstream from a rickety bridge near the spot. Mr. Betts parked his rented car on Papineau County side of the river Thursday and a check with an Ottawa livery led to the search.

Police Cooperate

Deputy Chief and Sergeant Paul Miller of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police cooperated in the search for the missing man. One grappling party conducted an intensive search yesterday and it was augmented by another crew for today's search.

The officers called for suppliers after considering residents and second along the steep shores of the river at Buckingham, known as O'Leary's Bridge, crosses a swift stretch of rapids. Between these rapids and another area of rough water the body was found.

Upper stretches of the river were searched yesterday after officers concluded Mr. Betts lost his footing and tumbled into the swift current. A trip through the rapids by police and newspapermen showed the difficulty of negotiating the trip along the shores even in daylight.

Fishing Rod Not Found

Searchers failed to find Mr. Betts' fishing rod. He wore a sweater, shirt, trousers, leather boots and hook. Whereabouts of a brief case he carried when he left Ottawa with him proved a mystery.

Mrs. Betts, starting with friends for Buckingham on arrival from Hamilton last night, was grief stricken when informed of her husband's death. A nephew, Clive Betts of London, also was in Ottawa.

The flag high atop the Peace Tower at Parliament Buildings was half-masted in tribute to the Canadian Press veteran journalist on lower and had a fine war record.

Served in France

Mr. Betts served in France with the 12th. Battery of the Canadian Field Artillery. He was commissioned a lieutenant in the field and later promoted to captain of the battery. When wounded, he was invalided home. After the war he became a barrister in Hamilton and commanded it from 1924 to 1929.

Graduate of Ridley College, St. Catharines and Osgoode Hall, Toronto, Mr. Betts became a member of the London law firm of Cronyn, Betts, Dawson and Parkinson, now the firm of Cronyn and Betts.

Member of London City Council for 1926 and 1927, Mr. Betts established high rank in legal association. He was a former president of the Middlesex Law Association, and a member of the council of the Dominion Bar Association.

He married Catherine Coleman, daughter of Thomas Coleman of Hamilton, Ont., Dec. 5, 1936.

That he was a former journalist of the Middlesex Law Association, and a member of the council of the Dominion Bar Association.

An effective debater, Mr. Betts took part in many discussions carried in the House of Commons. A. C. Casselman, Ottawa Conservative writer, said him listed as a speaker in the Relief debate Wednesday, October 5, 1932, somewhat puzzled by his absence then and also from the division that night to Hon. C. H. Cahan, veteran Conservative member from Montreal St. Lawrence-St. George.

One of Mr. Betts' latest speeches was in criticism of the military contingent Canada sent to the Coronation last May. He argued there were too many officers and not enough men from the ranks included.

Search for the body started at daybreak when two flat-bottomed boats were pushed from the steep, slippery shores into the stream.

Searchers concentrated on an area near a rickety wooden bridge where Mr. Betts' rented car was found parked Thursday.

Passed as Trout Stream

Famous as a trout stream, the Blanche is dotted with rapids. Grapplers worked in vain for hours yesterday on an upper section of the river known as the "Big Eddy." They had made a tentative search of the lower reaches before moving their operations down the river.

A resident there told mid-week Isaac Laurin last night supplied police with an account of Mr. Betts' movements up to 10.30 o'clock Thursday night. Laurin and his son, Lloyd, lived in a small house on a hilltop above the river, met the London man in the evening.

"I was talking to him at 9.30 o'clock," Laurin said after identifying Betts from a picture. "He said he was going for a rock and he was sitting there smoking. He gave me a cigarette."

Saw Him Fishing

That was near the upper rapids beside a small waterfall known as Casselman. Chief Conservative Duncan Ross bridges requires a difficult journey through tangled brush and over slippery ferns.

He went 100 down the stream towards the bridge," Laurin continued. "He went down and he was still fishing. We went home about 10.30."

About midnight Laurin heard shouts from the direction of the river but paid no attention to them. Later he heard two taxi cries. "I'm sorry I didn't go down," he said last night.

Provincial Police Chief Colonel Thomas Wilson of Ottawa, Provincial Police Commissioner, found on a lost yesterday shouts emanating from the river bank could be heard at the Laurin home despite the roar of the rapids.

Converts Milk Solids

William S. Murray, research chemist, of Utica is pictured working on a process which may solve the problem of what to do with surplus milk. He has been awarded a patent by the United States patent office for his method of converting the solids of milk into a plastic. The invention will permit the use of milk solids as a substitute in automobiles, and for numerous other purposes in which a hard, high finish is desired.

Colombian President

Dr. Ricardo Santos, 50, lawyer and editor, was chosen president of Columbia, South America, without opposition. As a League of Nations delegate he has championed the league's intervention in Columbia's controversy with Peru over the Amazon port of Leticia.

OCEAN COMMUTER

Among the Queen Mary's passengers was William Ellis Scull of Philadelphia, a veteran of many crossings who has witnessed the evolution of ocean liners from the old sidewheel packets up to the craft of the present day. As he descended the gang plank he recalled that he had made his first crossing in 1869 on the Cunarder Scotia, a paddle wheeler. This ship was the pride of the Atlantic in its day.

Mr. Scull had little to say except that he had been crossing year after year and "enjoyed" that was his "only claim to fame." — New York Sun.

MARKET COMMENT

The amount of liquidation that has been effected on the Montreal Stock Exchange in the past year or so is strikingly illustrated in the total of brokerage loans. As at April 30 of this year collateral borrowings of the Montreal Stock Exchange totalled $12.6 millions, a drop of over $500,000 from the previous month and the lowest total since June 1933. Only a year ago, these loans amounted to $41.3 millions.

The drastic drop in brokerage loans both in Canada and in the United States attests to the improved technical position of the markets and indicates that marginal accounts are in the best shape in the last five years. Any decline from current prices is not to be expected to bring about any forced liquidation, a factor which a year ago was causing some uneasiness. The "long" side of the market appears to offer more opportunities than the "short" side.

Powell Rouyn

Powell Rouyn Gold Mines Limited has completed installation of new skips providing additional hoisting facilities designed to speed up the operation of the shaft and increase the tonnage of or shipments being made to the Noranda smelter. From an average of around 375 to 400 tons daily shipments from now on are expected to increase steadily and the objective of 500 tons provided for in the company's agreement with Noranda should be reached within a few weeks, officials anticipate.

TORONTO STOCKS CLOSE

Toronto, May 7 (CP)—A strong market in the senior oils and fluctuations in the gold and western oils marked the Toronto exchange session in the closing session of the week. Trading was quiet on the whole and comparable turnover in the two-hour session was the smallest for a Saturday in a month or more.

British American Oil firmed ¼ to 20¼ and gains of ¼ to ⅛ were boarded by Imperial, International Petroleum and McColl. In the junior oil group narrow gains were showing at the close for Davies, Brown, Anglo-Canadian, Home and Monarch and Royalite firmed ⅛ to 45.

Aside from a loss of 1⅛ for Canada Wire B and a gain of a point for Steel of Canada, the heavy industrials held to an even course. Changes in the utilities involved a point loss for Bell Telephone and a gain of 2 for United Fuel pfd. The Walker issues eased minor fractions and Distillers-Seagrams bettered the previous close by about ¼. Abitibi pfd. was a strong spot in the paper group. Foods held steady to strong.

Changes were narrow in the golds. Lake Shore firmed a small fraction and the entire list gave up 10 cents for Sylvanite, Wright Hargreaves and Criterion. Pickle Crow weakened a few cents and closing prices were off slightly for Hard Rock, Canadian Malartic, East Malartic, Powell-Rouyn and Okhi.

Base metals held fairly steady, especially the seniors. Sudbury Basin gained 15 cents and Wabi Amulet and Pend Oreille dropped a few cents. Elsewhere maintained its position around 2.45.

WALL STREET CLOSE

New York, May 7—(AP)—Trading forces shifted their attentions to aircrafts in today's stock market and cashed profits on the week's climbing utilities.

The Aviation group, apparently responding to another revival of hopes foreign orders for planes would continue to mount, pushed up fractions to a point or more along with an assortment of specialties.

Overnight buying demand for the Power Company stocks, based on signs of a conciliatory move by the administration toward these concerns, and also its form of last most leaders backed away. Brokers said the waning of strong support for the Public Service issues particularly was based on the belief their sharp spring of Friday may have left them somewhat vulnerable, at least for the moment. In addition it was thought speculative contingents were inclined to await more definite assurances from Washington that the hatchet is to be buried.

At that, a few Utilities managed to end on the upside and the majority were no worse than unchanged to slightly in arrears.

Activity was well ahead of many past Saturdays and transfers approximated 500,000 shares.

Luggage Examined.

In Gilbertson's luggage, it was said, were photographs of Japanese warships and street scenes in Osaka.

(Gilbertson's shipmates, in Osaka, learned the Vancouver engineer "just unlucky" in being arrested. They said they all had taken photographs but customs officers who passed them had not been on alert apparently, as the one Gilbertson had up with.

(Lachlan McFayden, third engineer and son of the skipper of Gilbertson's ship, said he himself had taken some of the snapshots found in Gilbertson's album when he was arrested. He said one of them showed something of fortified areas of the inland sea but added the pictures were taken merely as souvenirs.

THE QUALIFIED BOAR

A boar may qualify for Advanced Registration by siring qualifying litters from three different sows.

The system of grading that is practised in the Belleville district offers an excellent opportunity for farmers to check up on the records of the boars they are using. At each shipping station is posted the official grading for months back of the hogs marketed from those boars. Such information often reveals that certain boars are much more productive of select progeny than others. Barrows of maturity may also be influenced by the sire.

Feeding station records show that some pigs reach market weight three or four weeks ahead of others. Now the average farmer keeps two sows from which he may raise 30 to 40 hogs for market each year. If it takes three or four weeks longer to put those hogs on the market, the extra feed required would equal the cost of a boar from a qualified dam.

If farmers experience any difficulty in obtaining their premiums, kindly write to W. M. Gordon, Prof. Oral Agriculture, O. A. College, Canada Packers Limited, Peterborough Plant.

ter only, and that the problem remains to be threshed out more thoroughly when our Ribbentrop returns to Berlin about the middle of next week.

Paris, May 7 (AP)—The French and British governments today instructed their ambassadors at Berlin and Prague to deliver notes to Germany and Czechoslovakia, cautioning against violence in settling the clamor of the German minority in the Sudeten for increased political privileges.

Authoritative Associated Press learned, carries the inference that "rough handling" by Germany of the issue of the 3,500,000 German resident Czechoslovakia almost certainly would cause war.

Sir Nevile Henderson, British Ambassador to Berlin, was to see Acting Chancellor Hermann Goering today to convey the government's views.

The Anglo-French effort was two-pointed, with diplomats hoping first to get Germany's promise to do everything possible for its German Nazi minority, and second to make clear to both the concern lest there be violence.

An Anglo-French effort was also under way to smooth the path to negotiation of Italy's conquest of Ethiopia by the League of Nations Council which meets Monday.

Behind the scenes in this swing away from the government lies the council of action.

This council, of which David Lloyd George is the inspiring spirit, moves independently of regular party organizations. It issues questionnaires to candidates turning largely on their support for collective action by the security under the League of Nations.

Candidates whose replies are considered satisfactory, the council supports. It gives support, for all the assistance of old local Liberals. Its support is not that of the old Liberal role.

The result of this has been a sort of official yet effective popular front working against the government.

Mother's Day Sentiment Big Stimulus to Business

Purchases of Flowers And Candy Reported Good, Lingers Popular

MANY PHONE CALLS

Flowers, candy and intimate gifts held the buying limelight in the city this morning as its residents, young and old, turned to the joyful task of remembering mother on this early approach to annual "Mother's Day."

Florist sales had reached a new high at one shop questioned this morning, while for several days past orders have been continuous and heavy, it was cheerfully announced. Other florist shops of the city reported the same sentimental buying.

Across the candy counters of Frost Street shops a ton or more of the best chocolates in herb-boxed boxes was finding its way to remembrancered customers, cheerfully digging into pockets to pay for the more expensive of the many varieties shown.

Into the notions shops lingerie and ready-to-wear stores the same wave of cheerful buyers wended their way, while other stores felt also the cumulative effect of the day's buying.

Tomorrow telephones will ring, and across the nation over its network a long distance wires today will call mother.

"We can always anticipate good business on Mother's Day," it was reported at the local office of the Bell Telephone exchange.

Roses for mother were one of the main items, but this year the gifts are more diversified and numerous, it was declared by a florist shop manager.

Next least among the gifts will be the presentation of a new cabinet radio to one Belleville mother, according to the statement of a radio salesman who declares the machine waiting for late Saturday night delivery.

Fire Breaks Out in Stored Paper In Adelaide St. Building

Toronto, May 9—(CP)—Three firemen were slightly injured and four families were driven from their homes by a stubborn fire that raged in a warehouse owned by the Curry Foundry Company on Adelaide Street West today.

The fire broke out around midnight in stored paper and was not brought under control until hours later. Firemen confined damage to the building. The roof of the warehouse was completely demolished and damage will amount to more than $10,000.

The families were forced out of their adjacent homes by the heavy smoke.

Mr. Kingsbury, who lived in Rochester, was a nephew of A. B. Kingsbury, of Kingston, Ont.

Why the Weather?

By Major A. H. Thiessen

Science Service Meteorologist

Oxygen! Many of our familiar phenomena of our day were not understood 180 years ago. Oxygen, occupying one-fifth of the air, and constituting its most important element was discovered independently by Scheele in 1773 and by Priestly in 1774. Both were adherents of the phlogistic theory, which assumes that burning substances liberated phlogiston, that is, heated lighter. It remained for Lavoisier to establish the fact that when matter was burned, its weight was increased by the uniting of the burning substance with the oxygen of the air, and that heat was impondérable. After oxygen was discovered in 1773, no one saw evidence of the air was discovered until 1894.

THE WEATHER

Toronto, May 9—(CP)—Synopsis: A moderate depression, centred over the Great Lakes, has caused showers in southern Ontario and light showers have occurred over east Manitoba. Elsewhere in eastern Canada the weather has been fair and rather cool. Temperatures at times somewhat below normal over the Prairie Provinces and light to moderate showers have occurred in Alberta, also light showers in southern districts of Saskatchewan and Manitoba. Pressure continues high over the greater part of northern Canada and the middle western States.

Lake Superior: Fresh northeast and north winds; partly cloudy today and Tuesday with not much change in temperature; probably showers over portions.

Manitoba: Mostly fair today and Tuesday with not much change in temperature.

Saskatchewan: Partly cloudy and cool today and Tuesday with a few scattered showers or snowflurries.

Alberta: Mostly cloudy and cool today and Tuesday with showers or snowflurries in some districts.

Fight For Salvage Rights to Sunken Treasure in Lake Erie Becomes Bitter

Leamington, Ont., May 9—(CP)—Fight for salvage rights to a scow, en treasure in walnut and oak logs which have laid in the bold of a wreck in Lake Erie for more than 70 years spread today with entrance of 9-year-old boy of this Essex county town into the fray.

Branding Mrs. Margaret Campbell Goodman, 65-year-old grandmother and said to be the only woman in the world engaged in salvaging sunken treasure, "a fake", Ley, possessor of a diving suit and search the timber, contended he had a contract with Mrs. Goodman dating back to 1934.

Mrs. Goodman announced last week that she expected to start salvage operations on the tost within a few weeks. She said she held a contract with the original owners of the schooner, the New Brunswick. The boat, which sank during a storm, is said to be lying in 40 feet of water off Wheatley, 10 miles northeast of here.

"Her going out there isn't bothering me a bit because I know she ain't going to find it," Ley said. "She signed a contract with me and if she did find it, wouldn't I jump on her in a hurry. The contract's burned up now, but I could easily prove she signed it. She's only trying to get her hands on some body for a chunk of money."

Ley also disputed estimates of quarter billion dollars for the sunken treasure's worth. It would cost that much to salvage the timber he believes.

"If it's worth a cent, it's worth $800,000," he said.

CORNWALL JAIL GOVERNOR FOUND DEAD IN GARAGE

Shiny New Rifle Found by Side And Foul Play Suspected

ROBBED OF $200

Two Shots Fired And Both Penetrated Body of Victim

Cornwall, Ont., May 9—(CP)—Discovery of a wallet habitually carried by Ralph A. Cook of Cornwall today to suspicions of foul play in the death of the 57-year-old governor of Stormont, Dundas and Glengarry Counties jail here, Police Chief Seymour said today.

Members of his family said Cook, whose body was found with two bullet wounds in the chest early yesterday, was carrying a sum of about $200 shortly before his death. His wallet held only two $1 bills and an identification card when found today by Turnkey Gordon Hamilton and as he supervised garden work being done by prisoners.

The wallet lay 100 feet behind the garage in which the governor's body was found. When a son, Dalton, came on the body in the early morning hours, a shining new 22 calibre rifle, with all identification marks carefully filed off, lay at his feet and a bullet, believed to have contained approximately $200, was missing from his pocket.

Two bullets had been shot into the governor's chest. Post mortem examination disclosed one had pierced his heart and the other had missed it by a fraction. The slugs had entered his body in a downward direction.

SELF-SUFFICIENCY IN ARMAMENTS CANADA'S OBJECT

Defence Only, Not Large Program is Contemplated

BRITISH CONTRACTS

Eight Companies at Work on Aircraft Production

Ottawa, May 8 (CP)—The government desires to create in Canada as far as may be possible, a national self-sufficiency in armaments against the emergency of war, Hon. Ernest Lapointe state. However, this does not mean the beginning of an armaments race, Minister of Justice policy Canada's requirements.

Beyond provision for the current needs of the defence forces, the government does not propose to embark on any large expenditures in armaments, it is learned. It is understood in Canada of munitions orders for the British government is confined, at the present time, to those issued by the defence department relating to the capacity and character of this country's heavy industries that already are available to the war office.

Eight British Contracts.

At present three Canadian concerns are understood to be working on British contracts—Canadian Steel Car, Hamilton, manufacturing a comparatively small quantity of 30-inch shell casings, the John T. Hepburn Company, Toronto, which is engaged in the manufacture of shells, and the John Inglis Company, Ltd., Toronto, recipients this week of an order for 3,000 Bren guns. Coincident with the British contract is one for the Canadian government building of 7,000 rifles.

Boy, Believed Dead, Returns, Mother Moans and Faints

Maxonlown, Pa., May 9—(AP)—Identity of a youth buried in a cemetery near this southwestern Pennsylvania mining community became a mystery today with the return of the 15-year-old Donald Plore from a two-year hitch-hiking trip.

Donald's parents a year ago buried the body of a lad they believed was their son, missing since February, 1936. The body was that of a boy shot accidentally while playing "posteffice" a kissing game—in a darkened room of an Olive Hill, Ky., home.

On a little steel marker above the grave, tender family and over-ed with flowers by a grieving mother, was a card inscribed "Donald Plore, died April 26, 1937."

Donald; a tall lad with a friendly smile, came home Saturday for Mother's Day—a visit he said he had planned as a surprise for his mother for months.

Completing the last 17 miles of the journey home afoot, he stopped first to visit Father Kolb. As he walked into father Kolb's house, the priest looked up from his desk, incredulous.

"Why, I buried you a year ago didn't I?" he exclaimed.

Then Donald heard for the first time of his "death." Donald told the priest he had hitch hiked to the west coast, drifted south, picked oranges in Florida and last worked on a farm in South Carolina.

Then the stepfather, Raymond Plore, operates a tailoring shop with the Plore home in the rear.

Donald walked into the store, the father hurried off to the front, expecting a customer. He stared unbelievingly at the husky youth.

"Hello pop," Donald said.

The father called Mrs. Plore. "Hello mom," Donald greeted her. She moaned and fainted.

SEVENTEEN DEAD BY VIOLENCE IS WEEK-END TOLL

Six of The Deaths Occur in Ontario And One in B. C.

MANY DROWNINGS

By the Canadian Press

Eleven deaths from violence were recorded in Canada today, aftermath of a week-end in which railway trains and lethal weapons took the heaviest toll of life. Ten persons died in Eastern Canada—six of them in Ontario—while a slide on a hillside in the British Columbia took one life.

At least one man, an unidentified transient, was killed when 19 cars of a fast, Canadian National Railways freight train were derailed from the tracks 41 miles west of Ottawa's early today. Many others were injured. Survivors said it was possible from 20 to 25 tramps who had been riding in the debris as only five of from 20 to 25 transients were seen to escape.

CHARGE OF FRAUD LAID AT NAPANEE

Said by Police to be Carman Barbour, Arrested

Napanee, Ont., May 9 (CP)—Carman Barbour, 28, who gave his address as (1558 Willow Ave.) Niagara Falls, N.Y., was arrested here Saturday on a charge of fraud.

In the townships of Ernestown, Fredericksburg, South Lennox and Adolphustown, Ont.

Police alleged Barbour called upon the farmer and induced them a member of the household had won a prize in an automobile contest conducted by a company in contest and that the "winner" could have this or her choice of certain articles. It was explained the names had been entered in the contest by a subscription. Barbour allegedly requested $2.50 to cover the cost of mailing.

One "prize winner" telephoned Barbour who in a short time previously had been informed she also had won a prize. The comparison of experiences led to Barbour's arrest at a farm five miles south here. He will appear in court today.

STRIKE SETTLEMENT MADE

Paris, May 9 (AP)—The government today announced settlement of the metallurgy strike in Paris area which had tied up sailings of the French line for nearly a week.

The announcement which did not state terms of the settlement, came few hours before the arrival of the liner Normandie, whose crew had been among those who walked out.

Trouble began May 4 when the crew of the liner Champlain declared themselves dissatisfied with the color and cut of their uniforms.

PRIEST, NEPHEW KILLED BY TRAIN

Wrecked Machine Dragged More Than Mile by Train

Montreal, May 9 (CP)—Railway authorities and provincial police pressed their investigation today into the fatal crash which took the lives of a priest and his 23-year-old nephew, Rev. Auguste LaPalme, 68, Rector of Saint Jean Des Neiges Parish here, and Pierre Beaudoin, a Montreal student, when their car was struck across the tracks by a train.

The priest and his nephew were driving to Beauharnois to attend the funeral of Rev. Emmanuel Charbonin at Pointe Claire on the Lake shore.

NEW JUSTICE TAKES OFFICE

Toronto, May 9 (CP)—Mr. Justice J. G. Gillanders of London, Ont., was sworn in today as a Supreme Division of the Ontario Supreme Court and assumed last week's duties on the oath of office today at Osgoode Hall.

The new judge was sworn in by Mr. Justice W. A. Middleton before a distinguished audience that included 9-year-old Sir William Mulock, former Chief Justice of Ontario. Judges of the Supreme and Ontario High Courts attended.

THREE HURT IN CRASH

Brockville, Ont., May 9 (CP)—Lorne Good, Prescott, Miss Dorothy Hall and Miss Gertrude Hall, Miss Hazel Ferguson, Maitland, suffered injuries when the automobile driven by Good collided last night on No. 2 highway at Maitland with another car driven by Miss Hall, Littlejohn, Oxford Mills, which was leaving the county highway at that point. Littlejohn is being held by police. The trio were brought to the hospital here.

Dies at Sea on Trip to Scotland, Worked 27 Years to Save for Voyage

Kitchener ,Ont., May 9 (CP) — Twenty-seven years ago, William Fraser, a Scottish immigrant, came to Canada with high hopes, a little money and vigorous youth, prepared to wrest a livelihood from the soil of Canada. For twenty-seven years he worked and saved his money to-ward the day when he could go back to Scotland.

He realized his life's ambition when he stepped aboard the liner Antonia at Halifax last Friday. On Saturday, his son, James Fraser of Kitchener, received a wireless message from the liner. His father had been found dead in his cabin. The ward that day when he could go back to Scotland.

Immediate Operation on Baby Colan is Decision

Chicago, May 9—(AP)—A council of medical specialists decided today an immediate operation should be performed on baby Helaine Colan whose parents faced the dilemma of letting her die in fatal partial blindness or die eventually of cancerous tumor.

The decision, was announced by Attorney Samuel Hoffman, counsel for the family, after the medical experts met in secret conference with the baby's father, Dr. Herman Colan, 30, a dentist.

Attorney Hoffman said the council recommended the operation be performed on the left eye to arrest the glioma threatening Helaine's life.

SIX FISHERMEN NOT REPORTED

Possible Men Have Stopped on Island Until Lake Calms

Amherstburg, Ont., May 9 (CP) —Six fishermen who hired a motor launch here yesterday and set out for Middle Sister Island, 22 miles out on Lake Erie, were reported missing today. Fears of relatives were aroused last night when they did not return.

Those missing are Del Whitney, Gordon Sparling, Frank Bublitz, Roya Allison and James Whitson of Essex, and a brother of Whitson from Detroit. Search was made on the Lake Erie shore in this district today.

Relatives believed if engine trouble had developed the men would have been able to effect repairs as several are mechanics. A storm broke over the district yesterday and one theory was that the party may have decided to remain on the island until the lake calmed.

9 INDIAN GIRLS BACK AT SCHOOL

Simcoe, Ont., May 9 —(CP)— Nine Indian girls who ran away from the Monawk Institute at Brantford Sunday were back in their accustomed places and attending school classes today Three were located by County Constable Clare Trench in Waterford, and Provincial Officers W. R. Caverly and Roy J. Taggart found the other six in Townsend Township.

TROUT-FISHING PARSON FORGIVEN

Several Communicants Also Admit They Were Fishing

Springfield, Vt., May 9.—(AP)—A trout fishing Methodist minister, who left a supply preacher in his pulpit while he went fly-casting on the Sabbath, has been forgiven.

In addition, the Rev. Lawrence Larrowe, 24-year-old pastor of the Springfield Methodist church, knows he was not the only member of the congregation who pursued the piscatorial pastime on the opening day of the trout season.

After Larrowe's confession a special trustees' meeting considering the pastor's conduct asked what other communicants did a week ago Sunday, several replied they also were fishing. Their action unanimously drew a round of chuckles.

A 27 to 1 vote of the trustees, absolving the pastor of misconduct was applauded by the congregation when the decision was announced. The trustees are women.

Larrowe posted a sympathetic note when called upon for an explanation, he said:

"Sorry."

CABINET CHANGES IN BRITISH GOV'T APPEAR LIKELY

Colonial Secretary Elevated to Peerage by Death of Father

7 PEERS IN CABINET

London, May 9.—(CP)—Changes in Prime Minister Chamberlain's government appeared in prospect today.

Accession to the House of Lords of the Colonial Secretary, William Ormsby-Gore, makes some sort of change almost mandatory. Mr. Ormsby-Gore succeeded to the title of his father, Lord Harlech, with the latter's death yesterday, leaving the Under-Secretary for the Colonies, the Marquess of Dufferin, also in the House of Lords. Indeed, so long colonial office now has no direct representation in the House of Commons.

While the new Lord Harlech could retain his cabinet position, this would be open to criticism from the opposition on the grounds

SEE FREE HAND IN CZECHOSLOVAKIA

Belief is Held Italy Will Not Interfere With Hitler's Plan

Rome, May 9 (AP)—Chancellor Hitler of Germany carried away from Rome today fresh assurances of Italian friendship, and high Fascist sources said he included in talks by Premier Mussolini to let him have a free hand in Czechoslovakia in the far as Italy is concerned.

After a brilliant military display, primarily entertainment and intended to show Italy's military might, the Fuehrer's program allowed him ten hours to taste the rich, mediaeval culture of Rome.

The day was a national holiday, second anniversary of the proclamation of the Italo-Ethiopian empire, helping to make the Hitler visit part of his route to the Tuscany capital.

It appeared the major result of the Hitler visit was a strengthening of friendship by application of pressure to possible trouble points in the Rome-Berlin axis.

Democratization of Royal Courts Urged by Beaverbrook Paper

London, May 9—(CP Cable) — Lord Beaverbrook's Daily Express, today urged control for democratization of the royal courts.

The courts are being held this week and the Express stresses that the courts themselves provide a way for democratization. "Let them carry but asks: "Must the hard-working, struggling people be denied the sight of the King and Queen on such occasions simply because they do not know the right people to present them?"

The Express puts but the presenting aspect of the courts, as a field for influence and position, should be put out of cultivation," the paper says. "King George should set that nonsense go. The wage-earning section of the people are as good as the alleged upper crust. The typist at her desk is more useful than the rich many daughter lolling at a cocktail bar.

Get in With "Pat"

In unburdening itself about the royal enclosure at Ascot, the Express said "if you have money, if you have influence, if the officials are afraid of you, in you go; otherwise out you stay."

"Why anybody should want to enter that acre of folly and foppery is a mystery to common people," it said. "If somebody must be kept out, however, the ban would be better applied to those idle young gentry, born with a gold spoon in their mouths, who never get earned a day's keep in a day's work.

"Best of all bans would be to ban the royal enclosure itself, and abolish such nonsense from the face of a fairly good race-course. Why should the King, our admirable, hard-working chief servant of the state, have this ridiculous piece of snobbery put across in his name?

KING GEORGE VI ON AERIAL TOUR R. A. F. STATIONS

Monarch Sees Hawker Hurricanes, Fastest of Fighters

GREETED AT NORTHOLT

Northolt Airdrome, England, May 9 (CP)—The King, in a scarlet and blue plane, started an aerial tour today of four Royal Air Force stations.

At Northolt airdrome, a base for fighting planes, His Majesty saw Hawker Hurricanes—reputedly the world's fastest combat planes.

Other stops on the King's itinerary were the Harwell bomber station, the Upavon training command and Thorney Island, a coastal command near Portsmouth.

Wing-Commander E. H. Fielden, Captain of the King's flight, piloted the plane.

FIELD CROPS IN ENGLAND PARCHED

Livestock Hunger For Green Grass and Fruit Crops Damaged

By I. NORMAN SMITH

London, May 9 (CP) — England is in a bad way for grass. Pastures are parched, live stock is thirsting for green grass, gardens are withering and fruit crops have been damaged by the frost while the south lights are dying for lack of rain.

The Ministry of Agriculture, fearing a black prospect for the harvest, today ordered farmers in every county to make a detailed report within ten days.

The year's yield of wheat, barley, oats, potatoes, and root crops will be reported below average as the droughts, while the fronts of the late February, March and April cold weeks, have extensively damaged fruit crops.

In some districts the land is so hard it cannot be ploughed and much spring-sown corn has not germinated. East coast barley grows

TURGEON REPORT GRAIN MARKETING TABLED IN HOUSE

VOLUNTARY POOLS

With Reasonable Selling Policy Canada Should Have Share of Market

Ottawa, May 9.—(CP)—Development of producer co-operative agencies for the marketing of wheat combined with continuance of the futures trading system of the Winnipeg Grain Exchange are key recommendations in Mr. Justice W. F. Turgeon's report on grain and grain marketing, tabled in the House of Commons today by Prime Minister Euler.

The report is the result of the Turgeon investigation as a royal commission extending over more than a year. It is a lengthy document of 350 typewritten pages.

Findings in the report include the following:

A compulsory government wheat board is not practical.

The futures trading system at the Winnipeg Grain Exchange is not subject to supervision of the grain exchange by a commission under the Board of Grain Commissioners.

Voluntary flexible wheat pools, utilizing to the fullest possible extent existing marketing facilities and with, not against the trade, should be encouraged.

The present Canadian Wheat Board should be continued because of uncertain world factors.

From now on with a reasonable selling policy, Canada should receive the share of the overseas market best the quality system of the wheat deserved.

Canada should have a representative sitting in London, England, whose duty would be to investigate complaints arising out of grain shipments and to report direct to the Board of Grain Commissioners.

TRILLIUM FOUND WITH FOUR PETALS

Another of Mother Nature's novelties was discovered on Sunday afternoon when Miss Betty Goodsir found a white trillium with four petals and four leaves on each of four stems.

The floral novelty was picked in Burton Bushes where many beechnerwille, where the lovely flowers are said to be growing in profusion.

JUSTICE GODFREY PRESIDES OVER NON-JURY COURT

With ten cases on the docket, one of the heaviest in the local court for some time, the non-jury sitting of the Supreme Court of Ontario went into session at one o'clock today with the Honorable Mr. Justice Godfrey presiding.

It being his first visit to Belleville, the Hon. Mr. Godfrey was met at the station and escorted to his chambers in the County Court House by Sheriff J. Ormus.

BURNING GRASS SETS FIRE TO HYDRO POLE

A novel blaze occurred late yesterday afternoon when fire believed to have originated from a cigarette thrown cigarette or lighted match from a passing car ignited grass growing around a Hydro pole on the north end of the Bay Bridge.

Flames licked the wooden hydro pole that apparently had become hollowed out. Firemen responded to an alarm and succeeded in extinguishing the blaze before the pole was seriously damaged.

NO RUBBER TIRES FOR STONE CRUSHER

With rubber tires being classed as "too classy" for such a dignified thing as a stone crusher, members of Sidney Township Council changed their minds and voted for tenders supplying steel tires.

"They are finding it very necessary as the crusher will not be moved very often," Reeve Geo. Bush stated today and there is a difference of a few hundred dollars in the price, all of which is an important item, considering the fact that the Department of Highways has cut the estimated expenditure by\w exactly thirty per cent."

"Steel tires are now construction," added the reeve. "Our present estimate of $12,500 will be spent solely upon road maintenance."

MORE ODD JOBS ARE NEEDED BY LOCAL MEN

Endorsing the Paint-up, Clean-up Campaign of the Belleville Chamber of Commerce that starts this week, D. Bean, city relief and police superintendent, stated that the facilities of his office were at the service of the responsible and general public in this important work.

While odd jobs have been coming in with more regularity the past week than heretofore, we still have a number of applicants available for any kind of work," he stated. The public, however, is asked to make application early so that we can send the right kind of men to do their work."

NO CONTAGIOUS DISEASES REPORTED

The city continues its good record maintaining a clean bill of health, it is reported by the Belleville Health Unit. At the present time no homes are placarded for contagious disease, and no cases are listed. The Isolation Hospital in which one or two cases of communicable disease were under observation was closed during the latter part of last week.

BANCROFT MILL OWNER SUFFERS BROKEN ARM

His arm drawn into the gear of some machinery in his Monteagle Township mill which he was repairing on Saturday, Frank Richards, Bancroft district resident, suffered a fracture of the arm and severe lacerations from wrist to shoulder. Before he could release the machinery started while it was being adjusted, Mr. Richards is a patient in the Bancroft Red Cross Hospital under treatment.

DEER AND FAWN SEEN NEAR FOXBORO

Driving on the road between Corbyville and Foxboro early Saturday evening, Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Mother and fawn, which appeared unafraid of the car and passengers gazed for a moment at the approaching machine, then melted quietly into the roadside

Nurses Are Urged to Grace Their Profession With Dignity and Unselfishness

Dr. Semple Gives Baccalaureate Address For Graduating Nurses' Class

DRESSED IN UNIFORMS

"Service is the crown of womanhood, in yours, one of the noblest of professions," the Rev. Dr. James Semple told the graduating class of Belleville General Hospital, and a large congregation at the Baccalaureate service held in Bridge St. United Church yesterday morning.

"The spirit of Florence Nightingale, 'the lady with the lamp,' still lives. You are charged with the high duty of keeping the profession unsullied, and placing your life at the disposal of and, for the interest of your fellow humans, be patient in it.

"Florence Nightingale dared to be different, and as a result changed the whole nursing system. I have to say to you, as she would say, be different.

"Do not think your education is complete in the hospital," warned the speaker, "for no knowledge is complete without practice. We need trained people who are well prepared.

Declaring that civilization was astraddle the horns of a dilemma, Dr. Semple said that in the end the world's problems is in your hands.

He urged participation in sports, and the "realist cure of bodily health. Make a practice of observing the beautiful things around you. Read good books and above all keep in touch with the revelations that are despoiling the morals of our young people. The community activities of life must be exalure, but never clouded with it like it is today.

Never Forget Kindness

"Avoid false ideas and do not make your best enemy a better one. And above all do not forget kindness," Dr. Semple told the "girls in white."

"Don't will find the invisible salaries in the enjoyment gained through living on behalf of the needy. Shall we be different or indifferent? The world needs different executive men who will get away from the old order. Anyone who aspires to anything can not afford to be anything else.

"I suppose that this city would be like without a hospital?" Dr. Semple asked, urging people to visit the Belleville General Hospital on "Open House Day" on Thursday of this week. "There is no greater institution than the hospital," he said. "There are edifices of Christian hope and understanding."

The nurses in the white uniforms and caps of their calling occupied the pews in front of the altar. A feature of the service was a vocal solo by Mrs. (Dr.) George H. Wright. The platform was decorated with baskets of flowers.

Mr. Hicks has been named as milk tester for the district.

Will. Finkle Lands 14 Pound S. Trout

Maintaining the reputation of being one of the finest fishing grounds in Ontario, waters of one of the North Hastings lakes yielded the first record catch of the season yesterday when Mr. Will H. Finkle, of the city accompanied by Mr. G. A. Morton, landed a fine fourteen pound salmon trout on his initial fishing trip of the season.

The grey beauty put up a stiff twenty-minute battle before it gave up the struggle.

Following not easily the trout might have freed itself, on examination of the line showed a kink a foot above the lure which when tested (the line) broke under a light strain. The fish was taken in deep water on a copper wobbler. It might be added that this is only the second trout ever caught by Mr. Finkle.

County to Spend $75,000 on Roads

Seventy-five thousand dollars will be spent in maintenance of the Hastings County road system this year, according to Chairman James Moore, of the County Roads Committee, that went into special session today at Shire Hall.

While a total of seventeen per cent. ordered by the Department of Highways from the estimated expenditure of $83,000.00, no new construction will be undertaken, Chairman Moore pointed out.

The purchase of a new road grader, ordered some time ago by the committee, has been ordered cancelled by the Department of Highways, it was added. Consideration of prices of oils and other road maintenance supplies provided the main item of the committee meeting today.

KIRK SESSION PRESENTS CANE TO E. V. ILLSEY

Presentation Made at The Close of Service Sunday Morning

GOES TO SEATTLE

Before his departure for Seattle Washington, where he has been promoted to a responsible position in the Canadian Bank of Commerce, E. V. Illsey, Manager in this city for four years and a member of the Kirk-Session of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church was honored by that body at the close of the morning service on Sunday. He was presented with a solid ebony cane with gold carrule, inscribed "Presented to/Mr. E. V. Illsey by the Session of St. Andrew's Church, 1938." The address accompanying the gift was read by W. J. Campbell, Clerk of the Session and Rev. W. J. Walker, pastor of the Church made the presentation, Clarke Campbell, in surprise, Mr. Illsey expressed his grateful appreciation and thanked all for the kindness extended to him and his family while members of the congregation. The address

Dear Mr. Illsey:—

With feelings of regret, tinged however with gladness, your fellow members of the Kirk Session of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church here, have learned of your removal from the city and that it is with regret, as it evidently means a separation from us, where we shall miss the influence you always had in our deliberations, where your counsel was of as much value as any, and where your services to the congregational work of St. Andrew's has the respect and the confidence of the members of the Church. We shall miss you indeed, but these feelings of regret are mitigated by the knowledge that your services in the field of Commerce have been recognized by your head-office in giving you the promotion which you deserve, and where increased responsibility and increased usefulness in the field of finance, they know, as do we, that you can so well meet.

On behalf of the members of the Kirk Session, may we ask you to accept this small token of our esteem as a link in the chain of our mutual remembrance.

May God be with you in your new field of endeavour.

Rev. J. A. Koffend Moderator,
William J. Campbell, Clerk, and Members of Kirk Session.

MRS. ETTA C. WHALEY Thurlow

Mrs. Etta C. Whaley, widow of Sidney Whaley, passed away suddenly at her late residence in the fourth concession of Thurlow Township, on Sunday, May 8th.

The late Mrs. Whaley was born in Sidney Township, her parents being the late Mr. and Mrs. George Rose.

In religion she was a member of the United Church and highly esteemed by all who knew her.

Surviving her are two brothers, Mr. Seymour Rose and Mr. George Rose, both of Halloway.

The funeral announcement is made elsewhere in this paper.

LATE MRS. MARGARET McCONNEL (Lime Lake)

Plainfield, (Special)—The funeral service for the late Margaret Maxwell, widow of the late William McConnel of Lime Lake, who passed away on Wednesday evening, were held from her late residence to Lime Lake United Church on Saturday afternoon and were largely attended. Mrs. Maxwell, daughter of the late Dr. and Mrs. John Maxwell was in her 83rd year and was born near Carlow public school in the township of Tyendinaga, where she was converted over eighty years ago during protracted meetings held in the school. Ever since that time she had lived a consecrated Christian life and was beloved by all who knew her. The beauty and loveliness of her spirit won her a host of endearing friends. She passed away in the home where she had gone as a bride over sixty-six years ago. Her husband predeceased her about thirty-two years.

The service was in charge of her pastor, the Rev. W. E. Mercer, of Rockport, who was assisted by the Rev. J. F. Everson of Plainfield. Rev. Mr. Mercer paid a fitting and warm friend of the family for twenty-four years.

The interment from a distance for the service were Mrs. Ross Steward and son of Toronto, Mr. and Mrs. J. Elmer Dixon and Mrs. Nettie McDonald and Miss Jean of Belleville; Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Leavens of Gilead; Mrs Mitchel McCullough of Lonsdale; Mr. and Mrs. Orland J. Bertrand and wes Mary of Gilead; Mr. and Mrs. Donald Hall, Miss Audrey and Mr. Garfield Hall; Mr. and Mrs. Fred Hall and Mr. Clayton Hall of Latta; Mrs. Maggie Hodgins, Belleville; and Mrs. J. A. Mrs. Peterson, Plainfield.

The bearers were Messrs. Fred all, Hall, Donald Weir, Lewis Fox, Maxwell Marlin and Fred Maxwell.

Interment was made in Bunker Hill Cemetery.

Rebuilt Church at Rossmore Rededicated by Rev. D. Wren

Frank Belsap, Trustee, Presents Key to Rev. W. D. Harrison

MOTHER'S DAY SERVICE

"The time has come for a group of mothers to organize into a Mothers' Society built around the basic principles of Christianity to fight the evils that beset youth today" the Rev. David Wren, Rector pastor fold a crowded audience-um at a brilliant dedicatory Mother's Day Service in the new Rossmore Church yesterday.

"We hope some day that this group of good mothers can solve our problems of social reform", the speaker said, declaring this age to be one "in which temptation is so vicious as to cause alarm to Christianity."

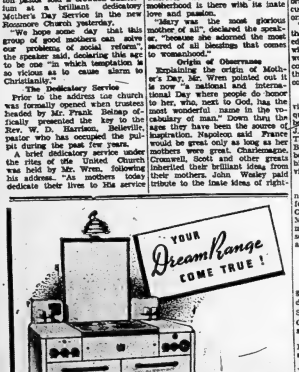
The Dedicatory Service

Prior to the address the church was formally opened when trustees headed by Mr. Frank Belsap officially presented the key to the Rev. W. D. Harrison, Belleville, pastor who has occupied the pulpit during the past few years.

A brief dedicatory service under the rites of the United Church was held by Mr. Wren, following his address. "As mothers today dedicate their lives to His service and endeavor to inculcate the love of Christ in their children, so shall we through this beautiful edifice endeavour to spread the word of His Gospel", Mr. Wren said.

Mothers Enlighted

In a beautiful eulogy to Mothers, the speaker said their heartbeats are heard the world around. "In the Eskimo igloo, the Indian wigwam, the negro's hut, in India, Africa and the frozen northland wherever womanhood is found, motherhood is there with its infinite love and passion.



"Mary was the most glorious mother of all", declared the speaker, "because she adorned the most sacred of all blessings that comes to womanhood."

Origin of Observance

Explaining the origin of Mother's Day, Mr. Wren pointed out it is now a national and international Day where people do honor to her, who, next to God, has the most wonderful name in the vocabulary of man." Down the ages they have been the source of inspiration. Napoleon said The world would be ruled only as long as her mothers were great. Charlemagne, Cromwell, Scott and other great men inherited their brilliant ideas from their mothers. John Wesley paid tribute to the lofte ideas of rightcousness he inherited from his mother" Mr. Wren stated.

Vital Christianity

"It has been said that Christianity is dying, that the Bible is going out", declared the speaker. "But vital Christianity will live long enough to erect a tomb to her defamers. It is the mother of Christianity and it will survive. Its

Melrose

Melrose — Mrs. Russell Maclarlane was hostess to the Women's Missionary Society on Wednesday afternoon which was largely attended. At the close of the meeting the president, Mrs. Bennett, called on Mrs. R. Simpkins to read the following address to Mrs. Clara Jeffrey who recently left to reside with Mrs. F. Buskard, Shannonville.

Dear Clara—

Learning with regret that you are leaving our community to reside at Shannonville, we as friends and a Missionary Society, want to show in some tangible way our deep regard for you, during your life among us a chain of golden friendship has been formed which will never be broken. You have endeared yourself to us. We have always found you willing to do more than your share in the service of the church and community. You have been a faithful member of our W. M. S. and choir all those years. Although you are not going so far away and we hope to have you frequently with us, we will often miss Your cheerful and faithful fellowship. But friends like seasons, come and go, the sun pass on, others take their place, but there will always be a warm spot in our hearts for you, and pleasant memories of times spent in your company. We wish that the change you are making may bring you every happiness and that you may not forget us.

We have seized upon this occasion as a fitting opportunity to show our appreciation and ask you to accept this gift as a slight token of the esteem and regard in which you are held by your Melrose friends.

In life's pathway, whether rough or smooth, may the star of love and trust never grow dim on your horizon, and may God's richest blessings go with you.

Signed on behalf of your friends and neighbors at Melrose.

Roslin

Roslin — On Wednesday evening May 4th, a concert sponsored by the Y.P.U. was held in the United Church. Rev. H. B. Herrington acted as chairman for the varied programme.

The first number was an orchestra selection by members of the Y. P. U. The chairman spoke briefly after which Mrs. Ethel Wells gave a humorous recitation, "There's Nothing to Laugh At". Little Misses Ruth and Eileen Reid sang a duet, "The Royal Telephone." Reading by Mrs. Hamilton. Little Miss Margaret Harrison sang "Jesus Wants Me for a Sunbeam." Miss Helen Welsh gave a recitation, "The Jealousy." Misses Jean and Jean Howes sang a duet, "You Can't play in Our Yard." The chief item in the evening's programme was a short play, "Marrying Bellows."

Miss Lucille Herrington, president of the Y.P.U., introduced the characters and the play as follows:

Herman Lathrope, a wealthy banker, Bellows Heathcote; Anthony Craig, his nephew, Miss Melbourn; Lee Benton, his private secretary, Kenneth Carter; Henry Grey, a fortune hunter, Connell Leslie; daughter, Lorna Maxwell; Marie, a maid, Yvonne Sudden. A selection by the orchestra and the singing of the National Anthem brought the programme to a close. The chairman and the president of the association expressed their thanks, to all those who had contributed in any way towards the success of the evening's entertainment.

The May meeting of the Women's Auxiliary was held on Thursday evening, May 5th at the home of Mrs. Chauncey Sills with an attendance of over thirty.

The president, Mrs. C. Sills, presided, and extended a warm welcome to the ladies of the Guild who were guests at this meeting. The devotional period was opened with the singing of a hymn followed by prayer led by the Rector, Rev. Mr. Seaver, who also read the scripture lesson.

The secretary gave a report of the April meeting and also read the interesting account of the April meeting of the Diocesan Board.

The treasurer gave her report and read a letter from the Diocesan Treasurer asking the branch to accept a larger pledge for the coming year.' Numerous items of business were dealt with.

Mrs. Seaver expressed her pleasure and thanked the ladies for the redecorating of the living room at the Rectory this week.

Mrs. C. J. Seaver acted as chairman for a varied programme.

Little Misses Evelyn and June Sills sang a duet. Misses June Sills and Isabel Bates and Helen Sills gave recitations. Mrs. Slingerland and Mrs. Mr. Seaver sang solos. Mr. Harold Hart recited. Several of the ladies gave readings and Mrs. Seaver gave an interesting report of the 53rd annual meeting of the Toronto Diocesan W.A., which was held last week in Picton, and which she attended as delegate.

Mrs. R. Calder, president of the Ladies Guild, on behalf of the members, expressed their thanks to the W. A. for their kind hospitality. A hymn was sung and Rev. Mr. Seaver closed the meeting with the benediction.

Lunch was served and a social hour enjoyed.

Drove Celebrated '40-Hitch' With T. P. Barnum

Bridgeport, Conn., May 7—(CP)—Tom Lynch, 82, one of the best-known figures in the world who knew P. T. Barnum, died here Thursday. He was 82.

Lynch became famous when he trained and drove the celebrated "40-hitch" in the street parades of the Barnum and Bailey shows. He made the harness and placed the forty big bays for the hook-up. When he retired, Mr. Lynch had full charge of the greatest attraction of the circus, its 700 show and work horses.

A native of Northern Ontario, Lynch ran away from home at the age of 15.

WAKE UP YOUR LIVER BILE—

And You'll Jump Out of Bed in the Morning Rarin' to Go

The liver should pour two pounds of liquid bile into your bowels daily. If this bile is sluggish and not flowing freely, your food may just decay in the bowels. Gas blocks up the system, constipation follows and you feel sour, sunk and the whole world looks punk.

A mere bowel movement is nothing that will get rid of this bile. You need the bile to digest the fats in your food. It's bile that makes you hungry. Get Carter's Little Liver Pills to set these two pounds of bile flowing freely and you will feel "on top of the world." Harmless and purely vegetable. Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills by name. Refuse substitutes. 25c at all druggists.

Keep Your Car Up to In-Built Performance

No good reason why your car should not always render to you the full measure of comfort, safety and performance the manufacturer built into it. Years or miles do not appreciably impair the automobile that is given the attention it deserves.

Believe it or not, it costs far less in the long run to keep your car up to par. That's why so many owners bring their cars here for inspection and any needed adjustments, repairs and replacements. That's why we have staffed our service departments with trained men and provided up-to-date equipment so that we can render intelligent, prompt, low-cost service.

Most often the cost is small and the benefit great. Nowhere else is service so valuable as in a motor car. Drive in and see how we handle service here and what we can do to make your automobile investment pay better dividends

AT THE BELLS

The Adventures of Tom Sawyer

Via the genius of David O. Selznick and the beloved pen of Mark Twain's famous characters stepped from the pages of his immortal story and on to the screen of the Bells Theatre on Saturday where Mr. Selznick's inspired technicolor production, "The Adventures of Tom Sawyer" had its first showing.

Tom Sawyer, Huckleberry Finn, Joe Harper, Becky Thatcher, Aunt Polly, Injun Joe, Muff Potter and all the rest came to vivid life again in the little Missouri town along the Mississippi, a town where Tom and his friends achieved immortality.

David O. Selznick, who has scored outstanding successes with the filming of "David Copperfield", "Copperfield", in which he brought Freddie Bartholomew to fame, "Little Lord Fauntleroy" and the later smash hits, "A Star is Born" and "The Prisoner of Zenda", has surpassed even his own previous record with "The Adventures of Tom Sawyer." It is a triumph of marvellous casting and one of the finest things that has ever been done. In book and while it would be a great picture. In technicolor it is superb. The subject matter is that loved by all—color and some of the spots are breathtakingly magnificent, especially those where Tom and Becky are lost in the cave. It is said to be the first time a cavern has been shown in natural color. Moreover, the pictorial effects of the quaint settings of the small town and the background of the Mississippi against which the colorful and interesting characters play out their yarns are all heightened by the use of color.

"Tom Sawyer" who has come to be the embodiment of all American boyhood and a beloved hero to millions the world over, was recently found in Tommy Kelly, who was chosen by David O. Selznick out of 25,000 for the role.

The entire cast is an interesting one and includes May Robson, who gives one of her finest performances as Aunt Polly; Jackie Moran in the ragged Huckleberry Finn; Becky Thatcher, red hair, blue eyed, freckled and all is Ann Gillis, Walter Brennan is the town derelict, Muff Potter; Victor Jory makes a sinister and menacing Injun Joe; Donnie Dunagan is convincing as Amy Lawrence and David Holt is excellent as Tom's brother, Sid Haskins.

"The Adventures of Tom Sawyer" is glorious, thrilling entertainment and to miss it tonight or Tuesday is to miss one of your rare experiences in a motion picture theatre.

Don't Be Fooled About Constipation!

Many people, when constipation hits them, think they need a purgative that's drastic, does up with a bang, and ought to be powerful like trouble comes back. And some look in their medicine chest for a more often—till you get at it to-day.

If you are that sort you must realize that a bad meal, polaleon-corn, too much rich food, or "nerves" can cause "lack of "tack." And you don't need a "lot of action." It's a kind of food that isn't content to do the job. It is said to be the first time a cavern has been shown in natural color. Moreover, the pictorial effects of the quaint settings of the small town and the background of the Mississippi against which the colorful and interesting characters play out their yarns are all heightened by the use of color.

DISEASES AND EPIDEMICS

Why do certain diseases take on special virulence for a time or change their nature suddenly, producing epidemics and then revert to their original structure? This phenomenon has been studied by Dr. Hobart A. Reimann of Philadelphia who has found a possible clue in the peculiar activities or antics of a small organism, known as micrococcus tetragenus. This germ has turned itself into fifteen distinct forms during a four year period of observation and further study may bring important results.

Dr. Reimann has found that he can hasten the appearance of the mutant varieties by putting the bacterial colonies on a diet, but he cannot predict in order the types of mutation which will appear. He is of the opinion that there must be some hidden factors determining the forms bacteria will take.

By some scientists it is felt that a solution of this problem might explain cancer —why normal body cells change into cancer cells. It is even explained that this evolution may be linked with the evolution of life itself.

THE VISIT TO ROME

Many thousand dollars a day for few days was the cost of the entertainment of Adolf Hitler, dictator of Germany, by Benito Mussolini, the Duce of Italy. For that cost of millions Italy gave itself a magnificent show of what a future conflict might be, the German guest and his party wandered about the historic points of the old Rome, mediaeval Florence and other cities, witnessed army manoeuvres, and held converse with Italy over the Rome-Berlin axis which in many respects was found not inconsistent with Italy's treaty with Britain. Outside world and the Italians too wondered what went on in the inner circles when the two dictators met about the conference table. But, outside of generalities the public knows little of what went on within the more than closed doors.

There was a phrase credited to Hitler, about the sacredness of the Austro-Italic border at the Brenner Pass. It is said that mutual guarantees of lasting friendship were given by the two leaders, the territorial boundaries being set for all time by nature between Italy and Germany, which is the old Austrian boundary.

Der Fuehrer's stress upon the inviolability of the Brenner Pass boundary indicates that the German knew it was necessary to allay any Italian fears that the future extension of power since the incorporation engulfing of Austria, especially because many thousands of Tyrolese who were Austrians became Italian subjects by the peace settlement after the Great War. To these the Germans have more right than to those in the old Bohemia part of Czechoslovakia, where the Sudeten Germans have never been German subjects, unless as onetime subjects of the Austro-Hungarian Empire they might be considered such. What the German intentions are eastward down the Danube, and what Italy will do, seems to be left as it was. Some opinion leans to the view that a four-power pact of France, Britain, Italy and Germany may be possible and that trouble in Central Europe will be unlikely, though Germany may seek a closer relationship within the three and a half million Germans in Czechoslovakia of German racial origin.

Mussolini stated that Germany and Italy had left behind them utopian dreams on which other nations had trusted. This statement was to be expected by the virtual rulers who had climbed to power on Fascism and Nazism. Hitler associated himself in this.

Hitler spoke of natural boundaries which have taught Germany and Italy a lesson after two thousand years of association of Germans and Italians. This assurance would guarantee peace of the two great nations and could possibly lead to the extension of understanding to include other nations.

Mussolini spoke of the acceptance of the elementary rights of peoples to live, work and defend themselves. This we carried out could not but guarantee tranquility and preservation of civilization.

The world can only hope that the several treaties between two powers may bring about the appeasement which is so much to be desired.

CONQUEST OF ETHIOPIA

One of the results of the Anglo-Italian treaty is the front today with the meeting of the Council of the League of Nations which is to consider the question of the recognition of the conquest of Ethiopia by Italy and the recognition of the King of Italy as Emperor of Ethiopia. Early reports today were to the effect that the majority of members of the Council were favorable to such recognition. If the recognition is given, "realistic diplomacy" will have won a victory.

Britain and France are ready to press for the recognition and the belief held before the Council met was that the Council would late today pass a recommendation or make a statement "of fact" giving all league members their freedom to recognize if they choose.

This, it is felt, in British and French circles, will help to friendliness of relations between Britain and France with Italy.

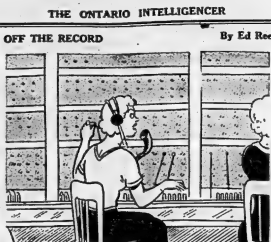
IN THE LAST FEW YEARS THE SPIRIT OF PROGRESS has gripped Belleville as never before and resulted in material improvement from every angle. One outstanding phase of the moving spirit of progress is reflected in the many new and modern store fronts installed in the business section. The face of Business Belleville has been lifted, the wrinkles and cobwebs removed with an astonishing improvement. More can be done in this direction and more is contemplated, plans being prepared for radical changes. As a preliminary to the Chamber of Commerce Clean-Up Campaign the City Council has shown the way with a marvellous improvement along the water front where old and dangerous firetraps have been removed and the ground cleaned up and levelled, making an excellent parking ground for more than two hundred cars. Property owners affected have co-operated with the City Council in making this great improvement possible. Now it is possible to walk or drive almost the entire distance from Bridge street to the upper reaches of the harbor and beyond, while the bank of the Moira has been improved and built up to present an attractive appearance and help resist future spring freshets. It is said that a nation which has no visible means of defence no doubt communities are affected likewise, but the leaders of Belleville are men of large vision inspired by a citizenry of like attainments.

x x x



TRENTON, TWEED, GANANOQUE, and other communities have fallen in line with Belleville with a grand campaign for a spring cleanup to make them more sanitary and healthier communities. It was a happy thought of the Belleville Chamber of Commerce to include in the program of 1938 activities a Paint Up Clean Up Campaign at the beginning. In order to retain and protect our reputation as BELLEVILLE THE BEAUTIFUL considerable can be done in the way of spring community housecleaning with a liberal application of paint a considerable factor. Then there is the cleaning up of grounds, the making and maintaining of smart lawns, boulevards and gardens. In this the Horticultural Society and Parks Board will contribute a large share and the co-operation of all service clubs and community organizations is assured. Pride in Belleville and determination to make this city the brightest star in the constellation of Canadian cities concentrated in united effort to brighten up and beautify the city is all that is needed to make Belleville the most admired and talked about community in Canada and pay rich dividends in health, happiness and increasing material prosperity. All together, now, citizens, join with the Belleville Chamber of Commerce in this Cleanup Campaign and at least BRIGHTEN UP THE CORNER WHERE YOU ARE—Begin now.

NOW IS THE TIME FOR THE HOME OWNER to consider what can be done toward improving the home this season. The Government Home Improvement Loan system was conceived just for this purpose, to help the home owner finance his plans for a better home. This can include painting and fencing and has been utilized to finance the removal and replanting trees. There is no red tape about Home Improvement Loans, not even an endorser is needed. Your credit is good with the Government and the Bank. Consult your banker or your building contractor, building material dealer, master painter, master plumber etc., and find out how easy it is to borrow the money and how easy to pay it back, together with the fact that the improvements will not be subject to taxation during the life of the loan. Homeowners have yet to wake up to the significance of the Home Improvement Loan system and its advantages. It will pay to investigate the Home Improvement Loan system whether immediate advantage is taken of its provisions or no.

A Simple But Satisfying Test of The Strength of the Heart

Although there is now more heart disease than at any previous time in history nevertheless with our more exact methods of measuring the amount of work the heart can now perform safely, many individuals are enabled to live even to old age by keeping within 'safe' limits.

The use of the electrocardiograph which records the power of the heart beats and regularity of the heart's action, the fluoroscope which enables the physician to see the heart as it works, and the measuring of how much extra oxygen the individual uses to get certain amount of work, and how long he will need extra oxygen after he has finished the work, are some of the aid of the physician.

While the electrocardiograph machine and the fluoroscope are not found in the majority of physician's offices, a few functional tests can give valuable information without even the use of complicated apparatus.

The patient simply rests for a few minutes after reaching the physician's office and is then ready for the test. His pulse is taken while still resting, and then he sets a certain amount of definite work such as walking up a number of steps at a certain rate of speed. Usually it is about 120 steps of time at a certain number of inches high. Some persons are apt to touch his toes with knees straight a certain number of times within a certain time.

The physician knows the increased number of heart beats he should have to make in a normal individual to perform the work and exactly how long it will be after the work is done before the heart returns to its normal rate. The rate before the exercise is taken. Usually it is about 70 to the minute before a given amount of work is done—say 60 steps slightly more than 120 in a minute—may go up to 96 due to this exercise and return to normal in 1-4 1-2 minutes. This would be considered normal. If it took longer as an athlete gets take considerable exercise, the heart rate may go up to recruit and may be returned in less than one minute.

The point being that the amount of work the heart can do without causing breathlessness or continue to cause breathlessness or fatigue after the work is done tells the physician how much work the patient can safely do.

THIRTEENTH MAN

It is a good story that comes from Calhoute, N.B. A grand jury was sworn in by Judge Court, to consider a criminal case, and some time after its members had settled down to their serious business, declined there were thirteen men on the jury when the case was to be authorized by law. The jury was discharged forthwith, and proceedings delayed a week.

The solemn legal machinery designed to keep the course of justice and true had slipped a cog, added Mr. Justice Grimmer, that the twelve and every man who ever has made a mistake in his life, or anyone whose life will be permitted a mild chuckle. Sometimes readers—and editors, too—have stationed a misleading (typographical error can slip by a dozen readers and into the newspaper. But how much more unlikely that twelve men could be found, a thirteenth man could be called, sworn, checked, for grand jury duty! And all this in a week!

The human liability to err is one of the things that keeps us in nobody ever questions. The proof of it is the very reason for argument.—Ottawa Journal.

She was very superstitious and when the thunder-clouds came on she always wrapped me and my brother in blankets and put us in cupboards. I have always been afraid of thunder since." Mrs. Chamberlain, who was presiding at the annual concert of the London Caledonian Society said that it was through this same nurse that she received her first knowledge of Scottish history. Mrs. Chamberlain told the choir that she was not Scottish—I am sorry to say." She was born in Edinburgh and was proud, Irish. The Prime Minister has Scottish blood in him," she added, "and not so very far back he was a Scotsman who was called Hamilton and who was a Scottish minister. Very few people know about that."—Glasgow Bulletin.

LION ON RAMPAGE

Since the opening of the Kruger National Park, the great lion has never been known to attack a European there, though visitors approach them quite closely in their cars and obtain astonishing photographs of them.

But this month a lion that lay waiting at a water hole near the park rest camp in the centre of the Park, sprang upon two native women, one on safeguard and badly mauling the other.

The two women were on their way from a beer drink and were walking along a narrow bridging footpath between banks of tall grass.

Both women were knocked sprawling as the lion bounded upon them. Seizing one of the women in its jaws, the lion made for a clump of bushes a hundred yards away. The other woman struggled to her feet and ran screaming back along the path.

Attracted by the movement of the fleeing figure, the lion dropped his native victim and gave chase. In a few bounds he overtook the woman, seized her by the shoulder and threw her to the ground.

A group of natives who came on the scene at this juncture saw the lion drop the second native woman and bound back into the bush.—South African News Letter.

SPRING IN THE EAST

The weather grows warmer and Nova Scotians are beginning to enjoy the best of the Spring season. Anglers are going to the lakes and rivers and others are taking to the open road for a change of scene and air. It is a wonderful season. The sun begins to give some warmth, signs of life are on every hand, and the whole world is filled with anticipation of growth and bloom. The countryside has a beauty peculiar to the season. Sturdy horses draw the plough through the rich earth and blue smoke curls up from the hills as the farmer burns off last year's load of brush.—Halifax Chronicle.

MAYOR OF NEW YORK

Mayor La Guardia of the Italian type from which future Presidents will come, in the opinion of William Allen White, who describes the city boy is bound to have the inside view of the country, for the reason that the whole nation has shifted from rural to urban. Hence the rural sentimentalist like White, would not now accept the "clodhopper type."

"But the odd thing about Mr. La Guardia is that he is not a city boy at all. He was born in New York; to be sure, but his father was in the west with Custer, and he grew up on government reservations where his father was stationed as an army bandmaster. Our Mayor is really an Arizona boy, and spent the newly 1900, when he graduated from the Prescott High School, after he had empty a place as one could find in the United States. The fact is that Mayor La Guardia typifies the wider-open spaces than any farmer boy from Illinois or Nebraska or Lincoln.

"But that matter, we shall have had in 1941 seven Presidents in the forty years since the death of William McKinley, and of these only one can really be described as a farmer-boy President. That was, oddly enough, is Herbert Hoover, whose home in Palm Springs is known as an engineer and business man with international connections. Not Mr. Hoover did spend his childhood on an Iowa farm.

"Of the other six men in the White House since the beginning of the century, Theodore Roosevelt was a New York City boy. Franklin Roosevelt, though born in Hyde Park, may also be classified by family and social status as urban. William H. Taft came of a wealthy Cincinnati family. Woodrow Wilson and Warren Harding and Calvin Coolidge would be country boys, but not really farmer boys, and certainly not of the clodhopper type. Wilson's father was a minister, Harding's father was a farmer-doctor and Coolidge's father was a storekeeper. The father of Mayor La Guardia was nearer to the plebs people than any of them. —New York Times.

The National Coffee Department is proposing to buy and destroy about 30 per cent of the 1938-39 crop, or about 7,500,000 sacks. Of last year's crop 70 per cent has been burned.—Montreal Star.

ICY EVIDENCE

A man famous for his zealous condemnation of the cause of temperance employed a carpenter to make certain alterations in his home. In repairing a corner it was found necessary to remove the wainscot, when some things were brought to light which greatly astonished the employer. Glasses, sundry liquor bottles, a bowl of ice, etc., were cooperating in their snug quarters. The carpenter ran to his employer with the intelligence:

"Well, I declare," exclaimed the man. "That is curious. It must be the children who left those few things there when he occupied the premises thirty years ago."

"Perhaps he did," returned the discoverer, "but the ice in the bowl must have been well frozen to remain unmelted."—Wall St. Journal.

POLITICAL REWARDS

When the writer was a member of the Press Gallery at Ottawa we recall asking Sir Wilfrid Laurier at one time whether it was true that the calibre of the members in the early parliaments were superior to those of to-day.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier replied, "Yes."

We asked him "Why?" Here is his reply.

"In the early days of Canada business was on a small scale. The rewards of politics were comparatively meagre. The chief ideal of an ambitious youth was for politics and law. The ablest men of the country entered political career. Today, on the other hand, with the development of big business in Canada the rewards of commerce and finance are such, the prizes so great, that the very few young men want to risk a political career with the uncertain ending of public life."—A. R. Ford in London Free Press.

SEE CANADA FIRST

The Canadian Travel Bureau, Ottawa, has an attractively illustrated series of fifteen pages of advertisements running in about 50 U. S. magazines and in selected newspapers of 17 states. They emphasize the appeal of fishing, swimming, golf and mountains, and offer to all applicants a new 68-page book about vacationing in Canada. So fascinating are the pictures and so well compared by Butterfield Brown & Co., that if brought to attention of the home folks, through similar channels, a good many more might decide to see Canada this vacation, instead of touring abroad.—Woodstock Sentinel Review.

If you would, you'd like to live the good old days they're always talking about.—Montreal Star.

They'll Do It Every Time :-: By Jimmy Hatlo

TWO ARE KILLED

tals in Hull and Ottawa. Billy Hilton on Westville, N.H., died in Hull hospital from injuries received in the crash.

P. H. Fox, assistant superintendent for the Ottawa division of the C.N.R., said the transients were riding in three open cars. These cars had been hoisted back on the track from the water-filled ditch which bordered it.

32 Transients on Train

Transients said 30 or 25 men were on the train, which previously had stopped at Pembroke, and that at least five escaped injury, leaving the possibility eight to 13 were trapped in the wreckage.

The injured John Green, Westville, N.B.; Garland Oatfield, Westville; John Hilton, Westville; Frank Girolamo, Montreal; Alex Campbell, no address.

By the moonlight and the light of powerful searchlights, the wrecking crews toiled all night in the swampy area. The 18 cars had to be placed on the track and 700 feet of track replaced.

Scene of the wreck, about two miles west of Pontiac station, 10 mine miles west of Quyon, a small settlement near the Ontario Hydro Electric Power dam on the Ottawa river. A few spectators watched the 60-man wrecking crew in action but they had to cover a nine-mile bush trail to reach the spot.

Thrown on Sides

Most of the freight cars strewn along the right-of-way were thrown on their sides. Others were upside down and one was embedded in the ground.

Survivors said they did not think all escaped. They feared others had been buried in the swamp. Fox, however, said the transients scattered after the crash-up.

Members of the train crew said the engineer felt his train jolt forward. Looking back, he saw cars piling into the swamp along the right of way.

The unidentified man killed was said by Fox to be about 25 years old. The body lay beside the track until the arrival of Coroner Dr. J. Renaud of Campbell's Bay. Later it was removed to an undertaking establishment at Campbell's Bay, 30 miles west of Quyon.

Interviewed in Hospital at Hull

Green said it would "be a miracle" if some of the other transients on the train were not pinned under the wreckage." He added "the odds seem long" that all escaped.

One of The Rescuers

Green said he was one of the rescuers of Dr. D. E. Robertson and Alfred Scadding of Toronto in the Mosses River mine accident in April, 1936. He was a miner and did surface work during the rescue.

With Oatfield and Mr. Hilton he left Westville recently to look for work in North Bay. Unsuccessful in finding it, they boarded the freight to ride to Montreal.

"The first thing I knew anything was wrong was when I saw the car in front of me jump three feet in the air," he said. "Then I felt my car jump and the next thing I knew of was being pulled out of a ditch alongside the tracks."

Barbeau and Campbell said they ran into the bush after the wreck, fearing arrest for trespassing on the railway. They walked and crawled in the narrow road and were picked up by a motorist who brought them to Ottawa.

RHEUMATIC VICTIMS

Was there ever a more distressing ailment than Rheumatic aches and pains? Rheumatism, Neuritis, Lumbago, Sciatica—what does it matter what you call them? SEVENTEEN DEAD

Father Auguste LaPalme, Montreal priest, and his nephew, Pierre Beaudin, were killed when an automobile in which they were riding was struck by a Canadian Pacific Railway express train at a crossing 13 miles east of Montreal last night. The demolished motor-car was dragged more than a mile.

Guns Used

Guns were used in three of October's violent deaths and two drownings were reported from Northern sections of that province. One fatality was prosecutive of a manslaughter charge while police investigated one of the shooting of 21-year-old Ralph A. Cook, governor of a county jail in Cornwall was under way.

Two 22 calibre rifle bullets in the chest, the body of Mr. Cook was found in a garage behind his home early Sunday. A bullet believed to have contained a large sum of money was missing. The new, single-shot weapon, all identification marks filed off, was found beside the body.

Charles L. Munroe, 45, died during an altercation near Kirkland Lake Saturday night. William MacDonald, 31, alleged to have struck Munroe, was arrested on a charge of manslaughter. In jail MacDonald said: "When I punched him, he fell on his face and I walked out. I didn't realize I killed him. We were the best of friends."

Body Found in Bedroom

The body of Ernest Black, Pittsburgh, Pa., was found Sunday in a bedroom in his summer home on Cobourg, Ont. A 22-calibre rifle lay upon the bed. The body of James Nicholls, 46 year old farmer, was found hanging from a tree on his farm near Welland. There will be no inquest into either death, authorities announced.

Missing since last Tuesday, 32-year-old Maurice Raymond's body was found in Lake Nosbonsing, not far from North Bay, Sunday. Raymond was rowing on the lake and search for his body got under way when the skiff was found adrift. Cecil Wilson, 37, drowned near Temagami, Northern Ontario, when he fell from a boat while filling the fuel tank.

Bill Fournier, 30, hiking with two companions along the banks of the Capilano River near North Vancouver, B.C., slipped and tumbled 60 feet into river rapids. Harold Kidd, 30, who fell with Fournier, stopped at the water's edge and hauled himself to safety. John Yuzyk, third member of the youthful party of hikers, ran two miles to summon aid.

The eleventh death was that of John Cameron, 40, whose body was found in Glace Bay, N.S., harbor. He last was seen alive late Saturday night.

Vernon Brown was drowned in the Fraser river at New Westminster. Michael Holous was found dead, his body mangled, on railway tracks at Tregarva, Saskatchewan, and at Edson, Alta., H. F. Habel was killed when his car got out of control. Thirteen-year-old Laverne Lepp died from a bullet wound received while hunting at Waldheim, Sask.

CORNWALL JAIL

Cook, an active farmer, was completing a two week's vacation from his duties at the jail when he died. On Saturday afternoon he had travelled to Farrans Point to make arrangements for repairing a garage he owned there. He had been home only a few hours when he went outside to put his car in the garage and failed to return.

Used Only Few Times

Members of his family, becoming anxious at his prolonged absence, went outside to look for him and found him dead. They said they heard no shots after he left the house about 11 o'clock Saturday night. Officers and inmates of the nearby jail also failed to hear any shots.

Police believed the rifle found at his feet was used only a few times. A check-up of stores in the district revealed no rifles of that type had been purchased in the last month. Police marks that erased identification marks from the weapon were clean and sharp, police said, and apparently only a few days old.

Investigators found three extra cartridges for the rifle in the garage about eight feet from the body. They were wrapped in a newspaper. One discharged shell was also on the garage floor and another remained in the rifle.

Carried Large Sums

Cook was known to have been in the habit of carrying large sums of money on his person. A pocket of his suit was inside out when the body was found. His family declared the pocket was not the one in which he carried his wallet.

A native of Osnabruck Township, Cook farmed there until his appointment as jail governor. He was prominent in local politics and had served 17 terms on the township council as councillor. Deputy Reeve and Reeve. He resigned the Reeve's post in 1934 to become jail governor. A widow, two sons and three daughters survive.

Motorists who persist in exceeding the speed limit while driving local streets are finding that doesn't come rather high. Over the week end a number of motorists were given "tickets" for speeding by H.T.O. Doug Ellis.

A 16 year old Shannonville youth was found in charge of a motor car, which is contrary to the Highway Traffic regulations. The owner of the vehicle may face charges. Two inebriates were taken to the police station over the week end, one being a woman.

When he failed to observe the stop sign at the intersection of Pinnacle Street and Victoria Ave., an automobile driven by Leon Covert, Picton, collided with a bicycle ridden by John Mober, 72 Victoria Ave. Although young Mober escaped without serious injury, the bicycle was badly damaged. Mr. Covert agreeing to make restitution in the matter upon the arrival of the police for investigation. Later it was established that Covert was not in possession of an individual driver's licence, police revealed.

The same law . . .

Clubs form a valuable part of our social structure.

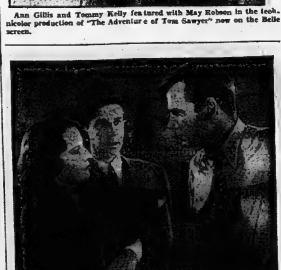
They encourage co-operation and mutual understanding. They promote activities that benefit our social life.

Many of these clubs are granted authority by the Liquor Control Board to serve beer to their members.

To many of them, especially Veteran and Labour Clubs, this provides useful assistance in improving the accommodation in their premises and increasing the scope of their good work.

The opportunity which these clubs provide for relaxation is provided also in hotel beverage rooms to those not fortunate enough to be members of a club—but to whom relaxation is as essential.

The same law provides for both.



The present law permitting Veterans' Clubs to sell beer to their members has been of great assistance in maintaining suitable club rooms and has enabled them to expand their efforts to assist ex-service men and overcome their economic difficulties and physical handicaps. In the past the bootlegger received a large part of this revenue, which now is used in the interests of groups of patriotic citizens bound together by their service for their King and Country. Veterans' Clubs are a great asset to any community as they stand as veritable Gibraltars of patriotism in the midst of unsettled c. tions and foreign "isms."

Shun Discord In A Child's Training

Parents Should Avoid Open Friction When Either Corrects Him

By LISA GRENELLE

WILLIE WAS very difficult, completely undisciplined. He did what he liked, when he knew what he liked. He was impertinent and disobedient to both his parents. He seemed to have no respect for either one; no respect for anyone.

If Father told Willie to do this or that, Willie would stand defiant and say: "Mother didn't say I had to!" Mother would lose his temper and spank him, Willie still would not be convinced. He would run, bowling, to Mother for consolation, which he never failed to receive.

If Mother told Willie, "you must not run right in here," Father would laugh, tell Mother she was making a story of him, and tell Willie not to pay any attention to her, but to go ahead. So Willie would disobey Mother — and go ahead, if he felt like it. But whether he went ahead or whether he didn't, Willie learned early that Mother was foolish, a sissy, and that he needn't pay attention to her if he didn't feel like it.

Thus at an early age Willie learned to play one parent against the other. He learned that each parent preferred to be preferred; that they would even pay for the privilege. In order to get some candy out of Mother, all Willie had to do was show a marked preference for Father for the time being. It worked the other way, too.

Sweet Cash's Sake

Even parents who get on very well together and are very fond of each other, still cannot agree on bringing up their children. Proving it is a sitting too much that any two people should agree consistently as to the bringing up of their child. But for the sake of the child, his future and their future relationship with him, the parents should agree, even if it means compromise on some policy. They should agree, at least, to stand by each other's word.

For how is it possible for a child to learn anything, respect anybody, if when his Father says "no", his mother may say "yes"? How can he know what is expected of him? How can he feel any confidence in the judgment or advice of either parent?

I suppose jealousy is natural to the child who has had smallest or jealousies as to the immediate possible preference of a child's affection. But if occasionally we must feel ill, surely we are grown-up enough by now to hide and control it—not to teach our Jimmie and Janie that their natural preference might earn them a present or a privilege, might soften or divert a punishment, or might be the basis for a new punishment, reproach or withdrawal.

Weddings

WILSON—BOYD

Miss Leona E. Boyd, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Boyd, Township of Markdale, was married on Friday last, May 6th, to Mr. Wilson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Harold B. Wilson of Belleville, at the home of her parents. Mrs. and Mrs. Wilson, Albert Road, Forest Hill, Rev. J. D. Parks Marlton Street Church, officiated.

The bride wore a princess gown of ivory lace and taffeta, with a short train at the back, matching hat, shoulder length veil and carried flowers and lilies of the valley.

A reception held at the Royal York Hotel, Mrs Harold B. Wilson was gowned in green velvet with pink hat of same shade and green and with corsage of violets.

Mr. and Mrs. May made a wedding trip to Miami, Florida. The bride travelled in a black printed dress, with black accessories and wore a silver fox cape.

They will reside at 60 West Bridge Street, and will be at home to friends after May 23rd.

Baker Is Rebel

Jack Stone, of London baker, was one of the three leaders of England's first rebellion. In the 1361, Straw with Wat Tyler and John Ball, a priest, organized an uprising of serfs which eventually won greater liberty for the lower classes. The rebellion was finally put down, 1,500 persons, including Straw and Ball, had been executed.

Sponsors Immigration

A nationalist group of women in Mexico, Accion Femenil Nacionalista, want their government to encourage immigration of "hale and hearty" foreigners that they may help to build up the race.

Learns Dad's Profession

Miss Edith Mabel of Lorain, O, daughter of a prominent surveyor and engineer, is learning her father's profession, and plans to be "out in the field soon."

Ample Time For Beauty Chores

JUNE TRAVIS
Takes plenty of time for her beauty chores

By HELEN FOLLETT

GIRLS WHO are dismayed to find their good looks wilting before the gay party is at an end would do well by themselves if they'd take plenty of time for beauty preparations.

Remove make-up with a liquid cleanser. Get into a warm bath, rest for 10 minutes. The warm water will untie nerve knots, induce circulation and rest your weary tissues. Hold the wash cloth under the hot water faucet; lay hot compresses on the face, neck and chest. Use the bath brush vigorously all over the body surface, then turn on the cold shower.

Have a vigorous rubdown, then use an added body tonic. Flop down on the bed for 15 minutes, holding a cold wet cloth over the eyes. Refrigeration takes away the tired look.

Dress leisurely. When doing your hair, pin down the rolls. Nothing spoils an interesting face more than one's coiffure play out early in the evening. Begin your complexion beautifying with foundation cosmetic. Use eye shadows lightly, and place factory blushes high.

Vanishing cream on the backs of the hands is a grand idea. A bit of perfume on the palms imparts a feeling of elegance and grandeur.

Many women are interested in the color of their eyes. They have heard somewhere or other that exercising the eyes makes them brighter.

An authority on this subject says that the eyes are exercised continually. They look hither and yon have plenty of movement. What most eyes need is rest. To have them sparkling, cover the lids with an ice-cold compress, lie down for half an hour, think about nothing. If eyes are to have special exercise, it should be under the direction of an expert.

Superfluous hair is a "heart-breaking" beauty blemish. There are various means of disposing of the growth. Electrolysis is one method. The needle is inserted in the pore beside the hair, the current turned on and the hair producing papilla is put out of business. Accomplished with skill, the treatment is not painful.

AIKEN'S W. M. S.

3rd Sidney — Aiken's Woman's Missionary Society held their regular meeting on Wednesday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Arthur Saylor, the president, Mrs. Thos. Martin, presiding.

"The Church and World Peace" was the theme of the study meeting and there were nineteen members and also four Little Band members present. Miss Lena Mc-Moon, reported nineteen dollars having been sent in the Branch treasurer, The Easter Thank-of-fering was $187.37. A letter was read from the Dominion Presbyterial President, Mrs. Hooper, with a plea for a greater interest and enthusiasm to meet the needs of the mission fields. Volunteers for work-ers in the various departments are urgently asked for.

The Scripture lesson was given in an interesting way, the first chapter being read by Mrs. Murray Jeffrey and representing the nations among nations? The modern mis-sionary movement affirms the reality of universal brotherhood under God. History has proved Jesus Peace cannot be won by the rattling of swords, but only by good-will and friendly co-operation.

Mrs. Fred Moon gave a reading, "Awareness." Appropriate hymns and a solo, A Starless Crown," by Mrs. Parry Hamilton, added to the impressiveness of this service which was closed with the watch word.

Seeding operations on this line are in full swing, the weather being ideal for sowing grain and gerdening in early crops and gardens. Several new tractors are in the neighborhood.

Mr. and Mrs. Clayton Paul, of Thurlow, spent Sunday evening with Mrs. Paul's brother, Mr. Harry Secker, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Carmen Grills.

Mr. Arthur Bennett, who was a patient at the hospital for a few weeks, is now at his home, Read line. He has been greatly missed at Aiken's Church and Sunday School and his many friends are pleased that his condition is improving.

Rev. H. B. Johnson called on the sick on this line on Monday afternoon.

Mr. M. Paul, 3rd Thurlow, spent Sunday evening with Mr. T. A. Churchill.

Mr. Palmer left on Thursday for Nanaimo where she will spend the next two months.

Mr. Percy Ablett, who is with the C.N.R. survey party, spent Sunday with friends at Canniton.

LITTLE GIRLS WEARSILKS

New Frocks Are Simple, Smart And Washable

By LISSETH

WHAT ARE little girls' dresses made of, made of? Prints in cottons, calico and gingham; organdie, broadcloth, batiste, linen, piqué, sardines, wool, velvet, silk, and all the other materials.

But of them all, I venture to say, that silk and wool are the two favorites. The youngsters like it to feel luxurious as well as their grown-up relatives.

The two dresses shown are fashioned, simple and in good taste, and both are in silk. The young person at the left is going for a bigger ride in a smart navy washable silk crepe afternoon dress with pleats down the sides from the straight shoulder yoke with corded edges. White silk crepe collar and cuffs, bonnet-shaped hat and white gloves complete her best costume.

Princess Dress

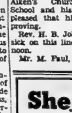
The princess type of dress is popular with the younger generation as well as with its sisters. So here for a Sunday stroll in the park the little girl at the right is wearing a wine and navy blue checked silk frock printed with a design of small leaves.

This little frock has a white collar with a ruffle that extends down the front, has short puffed sleeves, and is tied with a sash in the back.

The pleated skirt is very, very popular, with pleats that are just as fit is a perennial favorite with children, it is in higher favor than ever with the younger set. The dirndl or peasant type of dress, very popular for certain occasions, is another good model for young-sters.

Smocking, and hand embroidery are always good trimmings for such dresses, too, and these modes of trimming are being used extensively by the grown-ups.

Above, green crepe washable silk crepe frock with pleats, white collar and cuffs; right, wine silk paper taffeta princess dress printed in small bouquets.



Mrs. John Davidson Guest Speaker at Women's Con. Club

Those who had the pleasure of hearing an address by Mrs. John I. Davidson in Belleville will welcome the opportunity of greeting her again when she speaks at the annual meeting of the Women's Canadian Club tomorrow evening.

As an interpreter of current events, Mrs. Davidson is unexcelled. She has been described by leading thinkers as not only a well informed woman but one of the best informed persons in Canada.

Her charm as a speaker as well as her sane approach to modern world conditions make her address-es entertaining as well as informative.

She Looks So Young
Is a tribute to health

"Keep happy—Keep the mind young—don't worry." This is the recipe of a famous actress. Worry, irritability and exhaustion of nerves are the greatest menace to feminine beauty.

They bring wrinkles and care lines and make you feel tired and discouraged.

There is nothing like Dr. Chase's Nerve Food to restore pep and vigor to mind and body, to give you control of yourself and to bring the color back to faded cheeks. Charm and personality are based on health. The cheerfulness and vivacity, which add so greatly to woman's attractiveness, can only exist when you are feeling well.

Women everywhere know and appreciate this fine restorative of blood and nerves.

BETHANY Y. P. U.

The regular meeting of the Bethany Y.P.U. was held on Tuesday evening with 24 in attendance. The president, Mrs. Ira Miller, took charge of the Worship Service with hymn 874. Prayer by Mr. Jack Smith and responsive reading of Psalm 23. The minutes were read by the secretary and the offering was taken.

Mr. Mel Treverton then took the remainder of the program. Hymn 205 was sung. The topic, "Co-operation in the Community," was given and Master Roy Treverton favored with an instrumental, "In the Cross." Reading, "The Conversion of John Wesley," by Jack Smith. A duet, "Have You Been in the Garden with Jesus," by Misses Edith and Hazel Walker. A reading, "The Problem of Living," was given by Miss Edith Easton. An instrumental by Miss M. Martin was much appreciated.

Mrs. Arthur Miller then conducted an interesting contest. Hymn 148 was sung and the meeting closed with the League Benediction.

Celebrates Fiftieth Birthday

Western Reserve university, Cleveland, O., celebrated the fiftieth anniversary of the founding of its co-ordinate department for women, Flora Stone Mather college, May 5-7. It is named for its greatest benefactor, the late Mrs. Samuel Mather.

The women's college was started because in the 1880's, the boy students in Adelbert College of Western Reserve, which had been named for Mrs. Mather's brother, refused to speak to the girls who were beginning to attend classes. Today Mather college has over 900 students. When it was started, there was much opposition to the education for women that the president of Western Reserve, the late Dr. Hiram C. Haydn, had to refute with a ruling he drew, Miss Flora M. Smith, is proud of being graduated in one of its early classes, in 1888.

Representatives of co-ordinate colleges and corresponding schools for women from all parts of the United States attended the anniversary. Noticeable among them were Dean Virginia C. Gildersleeve of Barnard college, New York, and Miss Ada L. Comstock of Radcliffe college, Cambridge, Mass., who was among the speakers.

Mather college's most famous alumnus is the Honorable Florence E. Allen, now judge of U.S. circuit court of appeals.

Former Matinee Idol Sues Daughter for Support

Maurice Costello, former matinee idol who once had to push his way through stage doors, through a writer of adoring Semblins fans, declares as he is now "as poor as a church mouse". He has now gone to court to force his daughter, Helena Costello, also of the movies.

Accorded one of the greatest receptions ever tendered to a visiting statesman, Reichsfuehrer, Adolph Hitler is shown as he reviewed a guard of honor on his arrival in Rome. This historic radio photo shows LEFT TO RIGHT: King Victor Emmanuel of Italy and Chancellor Hitler, followed by Premier Mussolini and Count Galeazzo Ciano, Italian foreign minister.

Mel Ott Blasts Two Homers Each Time with Ripple on And Giants Down Cubs 4-2

Schumacher And Danning, However, Out of Lineup For Time

FELLER DEFEATED

Pirate Catcher Hits Homer And Pittsburg Wins Over Reds

By HUGH S. FULLERTON, JR.
Associated Press Sports Writer

Safely past the first barrier that threatened difficulties, Bill Terry's New York Giants appear today to be riding high along the National League pennant road—if they can escape the injury plague that has been afflicting a large number of the other major baseball league clubs.

When the Giants were winning three in straight from eastern rivals, they were warned: "Wait until you meet those Cubs. It won't be so easy then."

They met the Cubs yesterday and beat them just like everybody else 4-2 with a neat three-man performance. Carl Hubbell took care of Chicago batters, scattering nine hits, fanning seven and pulling out of his sad hitting slump. Mel Ott and Jimmy Ripple handled the job of scoring four runs on six hits off Larry French. Ott hit two home runs, each with Ripple on base, and that was all there was to increasing New York's lead to 1-1 games.

Schumacher Resting Sore Arm

While they got past that first and hardest game in Chicago safely, the Giants have come through another mixed by unscathed. Hal Schumacher got by most of the strife in Pittsburgh Saturday and was badly bruised and yesterday catcher Harry Danning split a finger.

They got off easy compared to Chicago White Sox and a few other teams, however. The pale hose lost first baseman Joe Kuhel for a week or so in addition to losing a 7-3 game to New York Yankees yesterday. Kuhel caught his spikes on the bag sliding to second and was carried off with a badly wrenched foot. Saturday Clint Brown, veteran relief pitcher, discovered a chipped bone in his elbow while shortstop Luke Appling has been out with a broken leg since the training season.

Fall to Break Tie

With a makeshift lineup, the Senators didn't do much when Red Ruffing fanned nine of them and Lou Gehrig, Joe DiMaggio and Tommy Henrich belted homers.

The Yanks, however, failed to break their tie with Washington for second place as Cecil Travis knocked in five runs with a homer and two singles to pace the Senators to a 9-7 victory over Ed Cashion Brown. Three of the Senators, with Boston's aid, cut Cleveland Indians' lead to a game. With Jack Wilson pitching four-hit ball and Fanning 12 the Red Sox blanked Cleveland 5-0. A triple by Jimmie Foxx with two on and manager Joe Cronin's homer were too much for Bob Feller.

Home runs and hurt players marked the other major games as well. Bill Werber, who had homered earlier, hit a single with the bases full in the 10th to give Philadelphia's Athletics two runs and a 5-4 decision over Detroit after Hank Greenberg had hit for the circuit in the same frame.

Hit First Pitch

Al Todd, of Pittsburg'h, belted Lou Fette's first pitch of the 12th inning out of the park and helped Boston beat the Johnny Cuccinello duo, with two homers and adouble, and Con Warneke, who pitched seven hits, accounted for St. Louis Cardinals' 4-2 triumph over Brooklyn. Warneke was hit on the hip by Cookie Lavagetto's liner in the sixth but continued to pitch.

Without the aid of homers, the Phillies downed Cincinnati Reds 2-0 as Bucky Walters bested Johnny Vandermeer in a pitchers' duel. But to keep the record intact, Ernie Lombardi, Cincinnati catcher, went out with a split finger in the first inning.

Those Buffalo Bisons are standing up pretty well under the strain of what has been happening to them in the past few days—in fact they're up there in second place in the International League standings—but unless they can figure out some way to belt more drives over their own fences and keep the opposition from using that trick, there's trouble just ahead.

They finally got rid of Newark's Bob Seeds yesterday after he had lofted seven shots over the left field wall in two days and showed all comers just how to beat the Bisons with a mix...ture of effort. Bob broke about every record in sight with four straight homers and a couple of singles Friday and three more ... day.

The Bisons, by way of showing their relief, stepped ... and clouted Baltimore for a 12-6 decision, in the first game of yesterday's double bill. But then Geo... (Pooch) Puccinelli of Baltimore's rollicking St. Paul ... Columbus two games—rain. ... Toledo at Minneapolis — two games—rain.

COMMENTS FROM THE COACH

No Matter How Trivial Don't Neglect Injuries

By Lloyd A. Percival

Neglected injuries have been the downfall of many athletes and have made it the rougher than necessary for as many others. A bruised or sore muscle may not seem important when it happens, but unless care is taken serious complications may develop. Taking care of yourself is not a sign of weakness, but rather an indication of intelligence. To say with a forced smile, "Oh, it's nothing," when asked about an injury during a game is not brave—it's silly and not fair to yourself, the team or anyone concerned. Care given an injury right away can often save a long period of bench warming.

Don't Carry It Too Far

In taking care of yourself there is no need to develop a complex and set too fussy like a lad I know. This fellow has almost made himself a social outcast. He practically walks around with a cloud of liniment vapor encircling his wretched form. Needless to say, most liniments are not needed for their delicate odor. This chap puts one for his hurts above all else and carries the thing too far. There's another chap who got off at heroics until one day after a game, in which he had laughed off an injury, he was coming home with his girl. She noticed he was wincing and asked him if he was hurt. Replying with a brave smile that he was fine he fainted. Though sympathetic the young lady was sensible and when she found out the true state of things she gave him plenty.

In addition to the danger of hurting your own chances you must realize the responsibility to the team and your parents. When an injury occurs see that it gets quick and proper attention. Included in the classification of injuries are colds and drinking and eating at the wrong time. Standing around after you have been perspiring is bad. If you must stand around, make sure you have an extra sweater or coat to put on. This might cause you some inconvenience in the form of kidding but it's well worth a few cracks.

Watch Your Victuals

Drinking and eating heavily just before or after a game not only robs down your efficiency but is dangerous. It is wise to wait until your heart gets back to normal and you stop perspiring before you drink. Wash out your mouth but don't swallow. You've heard that before—and it's still very important. It is best to wait until you are well rested before you eat. If you should indigestion may result. The condition of an athlete's stomach is very important—so watch it.

Keep your eye peeled for the sign of any injury and see that it gets good care. Kidding won't help your body or your ambitions. Painting or developing colds are no ways to build an athletic reputation. Be a soldier in such cases. Watch your injuries!

GOLF FACTS

By Alex Morrison

Number 12

My good friend Charley Mookwith took me to see some jai alai games in Miami recently. It was my first visit to these games and I was thrilled by them. I get a big kick out of any performance wherein co-ordination plays a part and it certainly plays a part in jai alai.

The speed and dexterity with which the players catch and throw the ball is indeed impressive, but the thing that captures my eye is the way the better players use their bodies. Rather than merely catching the ball on the side the player turns his body around just like the golfer or tennis player. The ball forward, sometimes the full length of the court, as terrific speeds the body and arms unwind as they do for the expert golf shot. In other words, what I got out of the game was an excellent example of the body and arms working in harmony to produce a whirling motion which sends the ball forward at great speed. And where this co-ordination was better with these players so the accuracy of their shots improved.

Golfers could learn a great deal about their own game simply by watching this imported sport and I should imagine there'd be a ready demand for it. It is a great spectator's game, affording plenty of thrills.

Jai Alai, Phillies: Whitewashed Reds win eight hits for 2-0.

Johnny Mize, Cardinals: His two homers trounced Dodgers 4-2.

Jackie Wilson, Red Sox: Blanked Indians 5-0 with four hits, fanning 12.

Bucky Walters, Phillies: Whitewashed Reds, allowing only four hits, 2-0.

Lawrin Romps Home Length Winner in The Kentucky Derby

(By Orole Robertson, Associated Press Sports Writer)

New York, May 9 (AP)—Despite the unexpected victory of Herbert M. Woolf's Lawrin in the Kentucky Derby Saturday, the United States three-year-old turf situation remained far from settled today.

The lanky, Kansas City-owned son of Sir Gallahad—Margaret Lawrence is not eligible for another important stake until the $30,000 Arlington Park classic July 23. And then, not thereafter, is the ruling Saratoga on which the is reckoned.

Stagehand, were he sufficiently recovered from the sore shoulder that forced his withdrawal from the Derby two days before the race, would start in the renewal of the $75,000 Preakness at Pimlico next Saturday. But even the star trained by a Earl Sande is not in the $50,000 Belmont Stakes June 4.

All of this means that as far as the three-year-old situation is concerned, the Preakness and Belmont will be just two more rich stakes. The Arlington classic figures to be the race to settle matters.

Lawrin was clocked in 2.04 4-5 for the 1 1-4 Derby mile as he came from behind, took the lead in the stretch and then turned back the challenge of William Dupont Jr.'s Dauber to register a length Lawrin, fourth choice behind Flighting Ace, Bull Lea and Mereo returned $19.20 on a $2 straight ticket.

Can't Wait, a midget alongside Lawrin, and five lengths behind Dauber, finished third, was pocketholding on at the end. The Pat, the 7 to 5 choice, finished a disappointed sixth as Menow took fourth and the Chief fifth.

Sports Roundup

(By Sid Feder, Associated Press Sports Writer)

New York, May 9 (AP)— Joe DiMaggio, who's only batting a measly .500 is picking up plenty points by chasing fly balls to right and centre fields.....Knocked one into right centre Saturday and the Philadelphians don't know where to play for him now.....Latest edition of the Yankee baseball mess rookie Custer Triplette has succeeded in getting off to the quietest player on the club.

Nice case of butterfingers the Yanks had last week.....134 errors in 31 big league games.....And those Yankees, who only fielded 1.000 in the World Series, contributed 13 fumbles.....Mickey Cochrane must be pleased to give up on Schoolboy Rowe.....The big Feller is still around, however, yesterday, and looked strictly N.G.....One of the mysteries of the Red Sox is why Joe Cronin bats in the cleanup slot, when he's got two hitters who can scarcely be outdone as Jimmy Foxx and Joe Vosmik around.

Keep your eye on Onkel Frankie Frisch's family from St. Louis.....They're not all baseball players, but they've taken four or five and climbed from the cellar to fifth place.

Jim Bottomley must think he's back in Sweetwater, Texas.....Latest Syracuse International League Chief just got over a seven-game batting spree.....Baseball Writers' Association of America has again offered the Phillies $75,000 in cash and players for Bucky Walters or Claude Passeau.....But Gerry Nugent mixed the deal.....Mister Bobby Feller learned a valuable lesson yesterday.....He found out that you never throw a curve to Joe Cronin.....who's ... one of the best curve ball hitters in the business.....Bobby hooked one over, and Joe promptly parked it—outa the lot.

Baseball will make its unofficial entrance to this city this evening when local intermediates hold their initial practice of the season. Although there are several good prospects in view, the local management are looking for a pitcher, whose control isn't so good that he'll hit the opponents' bats on every pitch with base hits ringing as loudly as Big Ben tolling the midnight hour, and a catcher, who won't knock the centre fielder's hat off every time he pegs to second base. Then a couple of outfielders, who won't get his on the lop of the noggin every time a fly ball comes their direction, would also be most acceptable. Getting around to the infield, a third baseman, who won't cause the patrons to duck every time he rifles one across the diamond and a pair around the keystone sack, who aren't bowlegged from allowing ground balls to skip between their legs would add much prowess to the club. Couple a trio of apple knockers, who don't create a breeze when going at opposition pitches every time at the plate, and the locals would have a right smart club that shouldn't finish in the second division.

Seriously speaking however we hear there is a wrought of good catchers performing throughout the district this year, unless Walt Gerow's imported receiver can be an exception to the general rule prevailing throughout the circuit. Whether there is a better catcher available than "Pepper" Latchford, we have our doubts, especially in studying opposition batters, which is a great help to any pitcher. Of course Belleville has fared exceptionally well in several standings, only finishing in the cellar position of the C. O. B. once from 1918 until 1936, the latter being the year they were out of the money of the Intermediate O. B. A. Frankly speaking we feel an intermediate team can be fielded sufficient strength to again finish up with the leaders, but this season will naturally be with the fans whose support really makes baseball the game it is. Tonight's initial baseball practice will tell the tale and give the answer to many questions.

Two well known football figures in English soccer circles regained first-league status this season, the Aston Villa "Villains" and Manchester United. Something of a paradox occurred in the first division, however, as Manchester City, last year's winners of the major league, was demoted to the second division for next season being accompanied by West Bromwich Albion, who failed in an eleventh-hour rally to retain top-flight positions. Aston Ville, once a powerful club in the first division, returns to that league after two years in the second while Manchester United was only relegated this season, Millwall and Tranmere Rovers moved up from the Southern and Northern sections of the third division, but only after exciting championship battles. English football now enjoys a vacation until early fall, when the boys set in for another lengthy and strenuous season of soccer.

Do you remember Earl Roberts, rookie hero of the 1937 Stanley Cup hockey finals when he replaced the injured Normie Smith in Detroit Red Wings goal, was sold to New York Americans for $7,500 cash? Well, he's gone back to the New York nets this year.

Herbert M. Woolf's Missouri-bred and owned Lawrin, paying $19.20 for a two-dollar ticket, romped home with ease to win the Kentucky Derby on Saturday with Jockey Eddie Arcaro up over 10,000 people over the running of the 64th American classic. Only a few of those backing the winner, Lawrin, a bad pupil of Sande's, was lightly bet down for nibbishaving at the post and went by the grandstand in sixth position. Coming back stretch, however, the Missouri-bred horse was boxed in by a champion and had not won Florida handicap under rather severe pace, went into the lead at the halfway post and was never headed from then on, with the favorite, under the wire, Dauber came second and in the finish second and Can't Wait was third with the favorites, Flying Fez and Chief's Son behind. Experts now say Stagehand would not have won over the Derby champ under the conditions he raced on Saturday; you and a few others either.

Elsewhere in today's issue are the three K.D.F. softball schedules, which first kicked suggests should be retained by all players. The Kingston Collegiate softball club is double header tonight, the contesting opponents being due to operate in the matter of arriving in time to commence the games on time.

HITHER AND YON—"He's been said—"them that has gets", and oh how true.....It seems Jim Norris, Jr. owner of the Detroit Red Wings is the B. H. Jr. Invested $1,500.00 right on Lawrin's nose to win the Derby away last winter after seeing the Missouri horse run in Florida.....The odds at that time were 40 to 1.....The rest is merely a matter of history and Norris collected a cool $60,000.00 for his investment on Saturday.....Incidentally, Mrs. Jim Norris owns something like 50 thoroughbreds of her own.....The City of Belleville "Villains" and Manchester United.' Something of a paradox occurred in the first division, however, as Manchester City, last year's winners of the major league, was demoted to the second division for next season being accompanied by West Bromwich Albion, who failed in an eleventh-hour rally to retain top-flight positions. Aston Ville, once a powerful club in the first division, returns to that league after two years in the second while Manchester United was only relegated this season, Millwall and

As supplied to Bigger and Crawford Stock Broking Service

As pointed out in these Bulletins of late, the market is in a position at a low level where a steady sizeable recovery could get under way on very short notice. There are no weak accounts existing for day and stocks are in stronger hands than they have been in the last three years.

The action of commodity prices across the line makes it obvious that the Initiation of the recommendations of President Roosevelt's so-called new recovery programme are not being begun to "take effect". While the process of germination may well consume several months, the existence of this factor constitutes one good reason for not becoming too bearish on stock prices even in the face of industrial stagnation. And an upturn in business activity, when it does come, will be materially accelerated by the inflationary background which again is being built up.

Looking at the prospects for business in Canada, cognizance should be taken of the crop prospects, at the moment, conditions in the West are the best in the last ten years and should be reflected in the forecasts in harvesting a bumper crop, business in Canada would receive a most important stimulant.

Respiratory Disease Sufferers Claimed Cured by Machine.

Winnipeg, May 9 (CP) — David Fingard, whose method of treating respiratory diseases will be investigated by the Ontario Health Department, recently opened a clinic in Winnipeg and has announced the sale of the establishing similar clinics in other Canadian cities. Fingard, who developed the treatment along with another Winnipeg man, the late J. J. Duke, achieved prominence in England in 1935 when he answered a call to appear by Sir Ringdal Wood, Minister of Health, for an effective cure for the common colds. Fingard, a chemist, and member of a Winnipeg family, commended the Duke-Fingard treatment for common colds.

Considerable controversy developed over value of the treatment but Fingard opened a clinic in Harley Street and others were opened later in other parts of England by the late Mr. Fingard left England in January, 1937.

The treatment is based on fumigation of a patient's nose and throat, warms air drawn from outdoors and passes it over trays containing certain chemicals, principally iodine, oil of garlic and olbey oils. Sufferers from respiratory diseases are said to be claimed, by breathing the medicated air. Patients attend three hours a day of inhalation a day and increase this gradually to as much as sixteen hours at a stretch.

Prince Edward County Crops Have Good Start

Forerunner of what is generally conceded to be a splendid crop, providing all goes well from the rain support, green peas are showing up in the fields of Prince Edward County farms. Near Wellington travellers noted yesterday a height of from two to three inches in the fields of that district.

There is a general impetus by the rains of the latter part of last week early grains are noting an all round growth.

Evidence that Spring is really here is seen in the gardens of while trillums and violets that are carpeting the floor of the district with a covering of glowing color. Trees are rapidly approaching full leaf, the only regular lapse by barren fields.

In many fields alfalfa was seen to the green splendor of early growth, attaining some inches in height of from four to seven inches. Numerous signs of the well-pleased and in some cases herds of cattle were seen grazing in fields that have been given over to deep clover within a few weeks.

Farmers in Hastings land is seen in the beautiful colorings of trees and woods. Varying shades of green are apparent, while wild flowers intersperse the green with spots of contrasting color.

Seeding is conceded in most districts to be practically finished with the exception of low-lying land. Farmers at the present time are busily preparing for the planting season fitting land for crops of corn and tomatoes, which commenced this morning in the northern part of Prince Edward busily planting cabbage.

Mussolini was believed to have received from Hitler recognition of Italy's economic interests in Central Europe and a promise the Italian port of Trieste would not be cut off by Germany traffic as a consequence of Austria's absorption by Germany.

With the Fuehrer's departure from Rome the Italian people turned to the delayed Italian-French talks on a settlement to end the bitter Italo-British pact. Negotiations probably will be resumed tomorrow.

Hydro Service Charge Discussed by Thurlow Ratepayers Association

At a well attended and enthusiastic meeting of the Thurlow Ratepayers Association held at Prince of Wales School, the session was brief. The meeting opened with the President Mr. W. Proceeding with the meeting, a report was presented by the secretary, Mr. W. C. Belleperio stating that owing to the unusual power district, which have been a source of discussion of late the Association was the first item under discussion. The problem of the service charge was briefly levied on tenanted property, whether occupied or unoccupied, and the discussion which followed falls on the property owner when the dwelling is vacant and consumes no current in the attention of the members by the president. A motion was given by Mr. Belleperio and seconded by Mr. H. Pringle, that in the opinion of this meeting Council can in some laudatory comments when the Township Council can in some laudatory comments when the Township Council can in some laudatory comments when the Township

DANGER IN THE MIST

CHAPTER 14

Grace Linnell's Story

It was the last entry in the book. I glanced through the pages. Only the present year was recorded, and that, most erratically. Oh, wasn't I might be sleuthing, but had I a right to read another person's diary?

No—I couldn't do it! But I could take it to the sheriff. That one sentence justified his seeing it. He would know if it had any bearing on the case.

Luckily, I found the sheriff in the living-room, talking with Miss Lydia and Parker.

The detective was saying: "Sorry to disagree with you, Miss Lydia, but it seems to me everything points toward Mrs. Caldwell. Names and her that night—might have even witnessed the shooting. It's not fond of her—promised not to tell what he knew, but later he felt that he must, and so—she silenced him. She—or that lover of hers. When we find that revolver—"

I beckoned to the sheriff from the hall, and in a moment he came to me in the kitchen.

"Find it?" he whispered a bit excitedly.

"No—not yet. But I came across this in Grace Linnell's room. I read it just saw one line and I'll explain it me important, so I brought it directly to you." I opened the book at that last entry.

He gave a low whistle.

"Umm—Iwas going to have a little confab with this lady. Tell you what—Miss Lydia's got to go into town pretty soon, and when Parker leaves out, tell him that you she's wanted in the library, and you can hang around somewhere and listen in while I ask her some questions. Savvy?"

It sounded mighty interesting to me.

I thought Miss Lydia would never get away, and it was ever later when she finally left. I knew Grace Linnell had taken a book and gone down on the rocks after breakfast.

And it was there I found her. But she was not reading. The book was closed in her lap, and she lay back against a pillow looking out to sea.

She gave a violent start when I came up to her. "Judy! You frightened me! I did not know there was anybody about."

"The sheriff sent me to ask you to come to the house."

A startled expression swept her eyes, but the rest of her face was a mask too made up to show emotion.

"The sheriff wants to see me? Why?"

I shook my head and moved away, and I reached the path before I looked back and saw her slowly following.

"She's coming." I told Sheriff Wilson, and tucked myself out behind the davenport in the living-room.

He came and looked over at me and chuckled. "I'm thinking you kinda like this young lady. I'm like it when the spotlight ain't turned on your precious mistress, hey?"

I simply grinned.

I heard Grace Linnell enter the library. "You wanted me, Mr. Wilson?" she asked in evident suspense.

"Well, you sit down—sit down. I just wanted to ask you a few questions. I guess you know this Caldwell family pretty well—don't you? Sort of a favorite cousin."

"Oh—yes." she answered brightly, and suddenly became coldly denial. "I bet my parents when I was quite young. Mr. Wilson, and Cousin Edgar and Lydia. Our ways been very kind to me. I suppose you didn't quite understand his leaving me so much more money than the other relatives. But that was the reason. I was always had to be on my own, and sometimes a million mighty hard sledding. Eliot was very generous with me, always."

"Umm, I see," mused the sheriff softly. "Handed out quite a bit of money to you off and on didn't he? And Miss Lydia approved — thought that was just what he should do."

"Yes, she has always been very nice about it." Miss Linnell answered, and I thought I detected a sudden note of suspicion in her voice.

"Umm—queer—awful queer —just don't seem to fit, somehow. I heard Miss Lydia tellin' Parker that she just couldn't understand Eliot leaving you ten thousand dollars. Unless—and this is just exactly what she said—Unless Grace had some hold on him. He wasn't treat her here this summer. He made a great fuss about it, and I told him it wasn't necessary at all—she needn't come. But he seemed to think we'd got to have her. And he acted afraid of her. Do you know—I think she was blackmailing him."

"Dangerous! How?"

"Well—it's hidden, isn't it? And whoever hid it doesn't want it found—that's clear. But he came across you about to expose that hiding-place and I'm more and more inclined to think we are dealing with a desperate criminal."

"The unknown person."

"I asked Peter about that garage room," he went on. "He hasn't been up there since he gave it over to Eddy. He said he'd forgotten quite, but he was quite skeptical of anyone else occupying the place I also told the sheriff that we thought we saw someone other than Eddy at the window that evening."

"Oh—what did he say?"

"He seemed mighty interested. He's pretty sore over the murder of Eliot Warren, and I guess he'd think they are rather slow, but I guess he's looking for any and all evidence. Sort of hinges now on that revolver."

"But that revolver may never be found. The person who shot it may have thrown it into the sea."

"That's true."

"Weren't there any foot-prints in the open-prints?"

"You know the sheriff isn't given to that, Parker is rather conceited, I think he's going to make some real fools around. They've got to do something. Barnes' sister is up in arms, as she naturally would be, to have the murder of her brother avenged."

Suddenly I knew that Grace Linnell's story true.

Eliot Warren was on. She doesn't seem to me quite the type to put over a couple of murders. Unless the unknown person had been hitched up with Grace. That's a—"Blackmail—Judy!"

"Did Peter confide in you at all, Miss?" I demanded, bolting out with Mrs. Caldwell last night?"

"No, he's no talker, I guess they have agreed to let it lie this. I rather wonder what Miss Lydia came in again. Something must have happened to stir her up. She's not a nervous person."

I could feel her hesitation. "Yes, I did," she said finally. "He was afraid if anything happened to him, this would leak out, and he promised to remember us in his will if I would promise to always keep it secret."

"That's all right with me," answered the sheriff. "I never broadcast how Mr's a good principle. I suppose you ain't got a suspicion as to who did kill your cousin Eliot?" His voice was very gentle.

CHAPTER 15

Moonlight on the Beach

"Suspicion?" Grace Linnell tittered a cynical laugh. "Why—his sweet wife did it, of course. She's used to living with, and among the neighbor, and she wanted her freedom and the money. Doesn't every single thing point to her?

I think you are quite daring to pardon my saying so. She pulled a clever confession and she thinks she doesn't have to explain last night. You and Parker just sit around and mean at her. I tell you—it takes a charming woman! Why don't you arrest her? You needn't worry—the judge will fall for her big, soulful eyes."

I had all I could do not to rush in! I wanted to slap her in the face—to tell blackmailing to shut up. And I didn't believe one darn word of her story.

I told the sheriff that, later "She was too glib—I'll bet she made up the whole thing. Or—he wouldn't pay her enough and she bumped him off to get it. I just believe that when we find that revolver it will have 'O. L' engraved on the handle."

The sheriff shook his head. "Barnes would have tried to protect her—neither would he have buried her sweet heart. Guess his sister's soft spot in his heart for Eddy and Eddy's sister."

Eddy! I dropped down to new again.

The sheriff moved toward the door. "You've done some good work today, Keep right on searching for that revolver. Have you looked in the room over? Some those books now—splendid place to hide a gun. Better make it a point to do some dustin' in here. Miss—our friend Parker's back again."

I caught my breath for as we came out of the library there in the living-room stood the detective. I felt sure he had overheard the last words of the sheriff.

Of course it didn't make much difference who found that revolver but I did hate to see one triumph of victory fall on Parker's plate.

I didn't have time to do any more searching that afternoon. And I was busy in the kitchen until after the clearing away of dinner.

I had hardly seen Norma Caldwell all that day but she had appeared at dinner quite calm and collected. Grace Linnell too was less nervous and more inclined to be talkative. They discussed books and plays and movies—even Miss Lydia occasionally adding an opinion.

Barnes' death was not mentioned.

I could not help thinking how, under this smooth, veneered surface, each of those women was doubtless deep in thought of the events of the last few days. Each with her own separate knowledge of those events. If only I might have seen into those minds, I certainly would have been log wiser than I was.

Mac and I walked away out to the end of Piney Point that evening and sat on the beach in the moonlight.

I told him about Grace Linnell, but when I spoke of my search for the revolver, he was quite upset. "Too dangerous! Don't do it, Judy. Let the sheriff do his own snooping."

"Dangerous! How?"

"Well—it's hidden, isn't it? And whoever hid it doesn't want it found—that's clear. And if he came across you about to expose that hiding-place and I'm more and more inclined to think we are dealing with a desperate criminal."

"The unknown person."

"I asked Peter about that garage room," he went on. "He hasn't been up there since he gave it over to Eddy. He said he'd forgotten quite, but he was quite skeptical of anyone else occupying the place I also told the sheriff that we thought we saw someone other than Eddy at the window that evening."

"Oh—what did he say?"

"He seemed mighty interested. He's pretty sore over the murder of Eliot Warren, and I guess he'd think they are rather slow, but I guess he's looking for any and all evidence. Sort of hinges now on that revolver."

"But that revolver may never be found. The person who shot it may have thrown it into the sea."

"That's true."

"Weren't there any foot-prints in the open-prints?"

"You know the sheriff isn't given to that, Parker is rather conceited, I think he's going to make some real fools around. They've got to do something. Barnes' sister is up in arms, as she naturally would be, to have the murder of her brother avenged."

Suddenly I knew that Grace Linnell's story true.

Eliot Warren was on. She doesn't seem to me quite the type to put over a couple of murders. Unless the unknown person had been hitched up with Grace. That's a—"Blackmail—Judy!"

"Did Peter confide in you at all, Miss?" I demanded, bolting out with Mrs. Caldwell last night?"

"No, he's no talker, I guess they have agreed to let it lie this. I rather wonder what Miss Lydia came in again. Something must have happened to stir her up. She's not a nervous person."

I could feel her hesitation. "Yes, I did," she said finally. "He was afraid if anything happened to him, this would leak out, and he promised to remember us in his will if I would promise to always keep it secret."

"That's all right with me," answered the sheriff. "I never broadcast how Mr's a good principle. I suppose you ain't got a suspicion as to who did kill your cousin Eliot?" His voice was very gentle.

CHAPTER 16

Moonlight on the Beach

"Suspicion?" Grace Linnell tittered a cynical laugh. "Why—his sweet wife did it, of course. She's used to living with, and among the neighbor, and she wanted her freedom and the money. Doesn't every single thing point to her?

I think you are quite daring to pardon my saying so. She pulled a clever confession and she thinks she doesn't have to explain last night. You and Parker just sit around and mean at her. I tell you—it takes a charming woman! Why don't you arrest her? You needn't worry—the judge will fall for her big, soulful eyes."

Why women prefer Lifebuoy

NO one can have real glamour and "B.O." at the same time. Wise women depend on Lifebuoy to keep them safe . . . More Canadian and American women—men and children, too— use it for the bath than any other soap. This fact was revealed when 11 leading magazines questioned 1,000 women . . . Millions use Lifebuoy for complexion, too. It freshens, helps refine dull skin. And it's only 20% milder than many so-called "beauty" and "baby soaps."

SCOTT'S SCRAP BOOK

by R. J. SCOTT

Little Benny's Note Book

Me and Puds Simkins we was walking to school slow on account of feeling tyrannical it, and the sun was shining like the middle of summer, and I said, G, there ought to be a law against having to go to school in swell weather like this.

Listen to all those birds in that tree, they sound as if they're glad they aint going to any school, Puds said. G, look, Boy Wanted, he said.

Meaning a sine in a grocer store window, and we stopped and looked at it, me saying, if we went in and got a job we wouldn't have to go to school.

No, but we'd have to work, Puds said and I said Sure but a lot of it, and we'd work all day Saturday too, gosh, we'd hardly have time to spend our money. Oh well, maybe they'd think we wasn't old enough, let's not even give them the satisfaction of asking us.

With we didn't, asking some man what time it was and finding out we just had exactly 3 minutes to be early for school.

With we got exactly was, making us feel lucky.

It mite be out in the open air where we could be selling or whistling or anything we wanted at the same time.

G, that's nite, and we'd get payed for it too, so we'd have money to spend, he said, Sure with more coming after we spent it. Hot is dont say Boy Wanted, all it says is Boy Wanted, so probably they only want one boy when they get one they took would have to work all along, I said.

Well maybe if we offered to work for half price they'd take both of us, it wouldn't cost them any more and we could be helping each other and making it twice as easy, Puds said, and I said, Why do you think it mite be hard.

Well there's a lot of heavy boxes and things to hit around a grocer store, Puds said, and I said, That's fever, headache, prostration, nausea and irritability, all lasting between 18 and 24 hours. Pain in muscles of joints follow with pains in neck or back, rigidity of spine and stiffness of neck.

Dr. William A. Hawley warned that children recovering from the disease must not receive too much attention but should be left alone for a time each day. They were subject to tantrums but should not be humored in them.

Dr. H. R. Hyland told of early medical treatment and urged careful examination of the patients and early use of the respirator if it were found necessary. Massage and heat were valuable aids in treatment.

POLIO IS EXPECTED AGAIN THIS YEAR

Doctors State it Will Likely Reappear in Eight Weeks

Toronto, May 7—(CP)—Rank and file members of the Ontario Medical Association today had a mass of technical information to consider and put into practice. It was given them in various addresses during their convention here this week.

Yesterday's closing session heard the report of Toronto doctors concerning their study of the infantile paralysis epidemic which swept Ontario and many other Canadian provinces last year. This disease runs in cycles and is expected to reappear again within seven to eight weeks.

Imminence of another outbreak lent urgency to the remarks of Beverley Hannah said his investigations failed to disclose any system which would enable doctors to tell during the early stages whether paralysis would be an after-effect.

NAVAL CAIRN IS UNVEILED

Short Impressive Ceremony Held Before Concourse of Citizens

Kingston, Ont., May 7—(CP)—In a ceremony attended by military, naval and civic officials, military units of the local Garrison, cadets of the Royal Military College, and a huge concourse of citizens, the Naval Cairn at Barriefield, situated at the entrance to the roadway leading to Fort Henry was unveiled today by Brigadier-General E. A. Cruickshank, Chairman of the Historic Sites and Monuments Board of Canada, which erected the Cairn.

The program was not a lengthy one but was very interesting, recalling to mind the exploits of the officers and men of the Royal Navy and Provincial Marine and officers and ladies of the Royal Marine, Royal Newfoundland Regts. 5th and 102nd Regiments who served on Lake Ontario in defence of Canada during the war of 1812-14, and who took part in the historic capture of Oswego.

Dr. R. O. Trotter introduced the chief speaker, C. H. J. Snider, one of the publishers of the Evening Telegram of Toronto and a noted naval historian. He gave a most comprehensive account of the troublesome days of 1813-14 with particular reference to those men in whose memory this Cairn was being unveiled.

County Forest Is Officially Opened

Owen Sound, Ont., May 7 (CP) —Bruce County yesterday officially opened its county forest on a 750 acre plot seven miles north west of Heywerth. Warden Lazels of Garrick Township planted the first tree. Members of the reforestation committee of the council also taking part in the ceremonies. More than 300 perscns, including school children from the rural schools, were present.

HUNDREDS INDIAN SKELETONS FOUND ON VERONA FARM

Verona, Ont., May 7 (CP)— Hundreds of Indian skeletons and relics apparently of a great Indian battle, is just below the surface of the ground on Thomas Whitham's farm two miles west of here. He has collected hundreds of tomahawks, knives, and arrow points, all made of black flint rock.

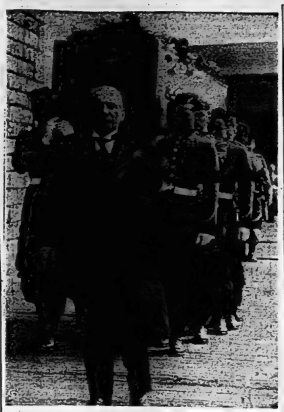
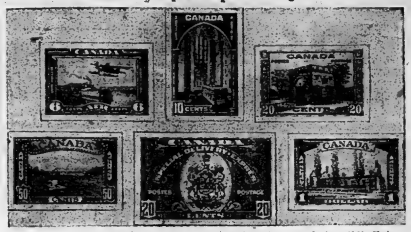
NEWS OF THE WORLD AS TOLD IN PICTURES

Militiawomen in May Day Parade



In marked contrast to previous Mexican May Day parades, 70,000 men and women marched through the streets of Mexico City without any disturbance. Instead of carrying guns as in previous years the workers carried shovels and pitchforks. A detachment of the women's militia is shown ABOVE taking part in the parade.

BAITING THE HOOK



After a busy fortnight which saw his government sign friendship pacts with Italy and Ireland, Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain decided he deserved a rest. So he hied himself to the North of Scotland where he forgot political issues for fleecy ones. This interesting character close-up of Chamberlain was made as he gave all his attention to the proper baiting of his hook.

DEAD R. M. C. STUDENT ACCORDED MILITARY HONORS

Gentleman Cadet Rowland D. Smith, who died suddenly following a friendly scuffle with chums in a dormitory of the Royal Military College, Kingston, was accorded full military honors by students of R.M.C. who escorted the body to the Kingston station from which it was sent to Toronto. Fellow students and college officials are shown accompanying the casket from the college chapel following a brief service.

New Canadian Stamps Complete George VI Issue

The issue of six new stamps, which will complete the George VI regular issue, will be made on June 15, it has been announced at Ottawa. These stamps shown ABOVE, will all be pictorials. The 10-cents bears a picture of the Memorial chamber, Peace Tower; 20-cents, Fort Garry Gate, Winnipeg; 50-cents, entrance to Vancouver harbor; $1.00 Chateau de Ramezay, Montreal; 6-cents, air mail, scene on the Mackenzie River, Northwest Territories; 20-cents, special delivery, Canadian coat of arms.

King and Sister Go Riding

FAMOUS DOGS BANISHED FROM RESCUE WORK

Banished from their rescue work of generations amid the Alpine snows, the pack of St. Bernard dogs from the famous Swiss monastery of the same name, have been sent to Tibet where they will continue their rescue work amid the Himalayas. Following an accident last year when a little girl was killed by the dogs, they had been condemned to a life of inactivity in their Swiss homeland and were no longer allowed to roam freely, carrying food and help to lost mountain travellers.

These wrecked fire trucks were overturned by a street explosion in different sections of New York when they collided outright and five injured. Gasoline explosions shot flames 30 feet in the air.

Gives Science "Cheap" Radium

Wallace Louis Minto, Jr., 16-year-old high school senior, of Jersey City, N. J., is pictured at work in his laboratory. The boy has given medical science one of its greatest finds in years—he has discovered a method of artificially producing radium and other radio-active minerals from native ore far below the present high cost—$250 a gram instead of $25,000 for the same amount.

PREFERS MAH-JONGG

Mah-Jongg was all the rage with the ladies around 1928. It is still the rage with Mme. Alexander Troyanovsky, wife of the Soviet ambassador to the United States, who is shown here at her favorite hobby. Mme. Troyanovsky prefers Mah-Jongg to bridge, which is her husband's favorite indoor sport. Incidentally, Mah-Jongg is making a comeback in society drawing rooms.

DUKE DIES

The Duke of Devonshire, governor-general of Canada from 1916 to 1921, who died at his home in London, Eng. The duke had been failing in health for several months.

ANOTHER BROWNING INVENTION

Jonathan Edmund Browning, half-brother of John M. Browning, inventor of 35 small-bore firearms, and son of Jonathan Browning, inventor of the repeating rifle, is shown at Ogden, Utah, testing a newly invented semi-automatic .30 caliber rifle. The U. S. ordnance department may replace the present heavy automatic arms with this lightweight weapon.

EX-KAISER'S GRANDSON WEDS RUSSIAN PRINCESS

TORONTO FIRM TO MANUFACTURE MACHINE GUNS

The department of national defense in Ottawa, has announced that the Bren machine gun, shown ABOVE, with which the British army is now being equipped, will be manufactured in Toronto by the John Inglis Co. Reports, which could not be confirmed, stated that the Toronto firm's contract would reach $6,000,000 and included guns destined for England as well as Canada. Major James Hahn, president of the John Inglis Co., (inset), refused to discuss the contract other than to say "it will materially increase employment at our plant."

Fourth Disaster Takes Place Near Lincoln Today

London, May 10—(CP-Havas)—Six Royal Air Force fliers were killed and two injured today in three airplane crackups near Lincoln, in a field close to Hilton, Huntingdonshire, and the Wyton aviation school airdrome.

The worst accident was at the Wyton airdrome where a Blenheim bomber crashed at the take-off and burst into flames. Pilot Officer Douglas Perry was buried out of the plane and Aircraftsmen John J. G. Rice and Frederick Grimes, respectively observer and wireless operator in the ship, were burned to death.

At School Aldrome

A biplane attached to the Wyton aviation school plummeted to earth in a field near Hilton. Pilot Officer Ivor J. Pawsey and Pilot Officer Colin J. C. Lee of Aircraft Squadron 139 were killed.

Pilot Officer Richard D. H. Max well was killed and Corporal David R. Wyatt and Aircraftsman White field Dodds were injured in the crash of a ship attached to the 54th squadron near Lincoln.

Lyon, France, May 10—(CP-Havas)—Five French army fliers were killed when a military plane crashed near here today.

Why the Weather?

By Major A. H. Thiessen

Science Service Meteorologist

Ocean travel? Then you're thinking about crossing the Atlantic can pick out no better month than June. A voyage during that month is not likely to be attended by weather discomfort. In the North Atlantic the weather will be generally quiet and pleasant; gales are rare in June. Few over the Grand Banks, off Newfoundland, may be expected about 20 days out of the month. In the South Atlantic, June marks the beginning of the hurricane season. However, hurricanes do not occur very often in June but also not severe, as a rule, until ten inimical hurricanes have been recorded in June from 1887 to 1936.

THE WEATHER

Toronto, May 9—(CP)—Synopsis: A shallow low covers the prairies and part of eastern Canada and the northeast States, while pressure is high in the Hudson Bay region and over the middle western States. Light to moderate showers have occurred in many parts of Ontario and light showers in a few districts of Quebec and the Maritimes. It is now comparatively cool over eastern Canada but it has been the most part fair with a tendency to higher temperatures over the Prairie Provinces.

Lake Superior—Moderate to fresh northeast winds; fair and rather cool today and Wednesday.

Manitoba—Moderate easterly winds; fair and moderately warm today and Wednesday.

Saskatchewan—Mostly fair and moderately warm today and Wednesday.

Alberta—Fair today and Wednesday and becoming a little warmer.

Shot Self to Save Lawrence, Was She the Woman He Loved?

London, May 10—(CP)— The theory Lawrence of Arabia shunned women has been challenged.

A red-haired British agent, Sara Aaronsohn, who shot herself rather than disclose Lawrence's identity to the Germans during the Great War, is now thought to have been the "B. A." to whom his famous book "Seven Pillars of Wisdom" was dedicated.

His dedication reads:

"I loved you, so I drew these tides of men into my hands

"And wrote my will across the sky in stars

"To earn you freedom, the seven pillared worthy house.

"That your eyes might be shining for me

"When we came."

During the war a group of young Palestinian Jews, including Sara Aaronsohn, formed their own secret service behind the Turkish lines. They crossed the Sinai desert into Cairo where, it is believed, Sara first met Lawrence. She became head of a secret service outside Jerusalem which was his clearing-house.

In March, 1918, German agents discovered the office and tracked Sara to her home at Zichron. She confronted a three-day grilling in which they tried to pry from her the name of the mysterious English. man who was said to call her Anti-Ghrit, was harassing the Turks.

At last she went to a room where a revolver had been concealed and after writing a letter to Lawrence she shot herself. The letter was never delivered.

PIONEER FESTIVAL OF 'CALICO DAYS' TO RECALL 'RUSH'

'Death Valley Scotty' Remembers Days of 1883 And Later

'MYSTERY MAN'

Barstow, Calif., May 10—(AP)— Death Valley Scotty sent word he was leaving tonight for the desert to see if he could get down here Saturday "to see if any of the other desert rats are out in the open."

There will be a pioneer festival, "Calico Days" recalling the gold rush when mines flourished in the Calico Mountains, between here and Death Valley.

Scotty first came to Barstow in 1883. He was nine years old and a mule swamper. Some 30 years later, when he had left Buffalo Bill's Wild West show as a champion cowboy, and had become known as the mystery baron of the desert with only a heavy supply of gold, he cooked up plans for his record-shattering chartered train dash to Chicago, in June 1905.

Old Jail Remembered

"I want to see if that old stone jailhouse is here, with the cobbed up the train plans," the 82-year-old prospector wrote in a 500-word letter. He had rented the small, rarely used cell-house during gold-rush days to keep his packs and supplies for the eight day trek to Death Valley, across Wingale Pass.

BEVERAGE ROOMS BLIGHT ON YOUTH BISHOP ASSERTS

Present Day Room Bot Modernized Bar Room in Claim

SYNOD OPENS

Kingston, Ont., May 10—(CP)— Ontario's beverage rooms are "exciting a blight upon the manhood of youth" and are a "menace to the virility of our nation," Bishop Donald Ireland told the Ontario Synod of the Church of England today in his annual charge.

"The present day beverage room is but a modernized bar room," Bishop Lyons said. "It is an attempt not only to legalize, but to cover with the cloak of respectability the sale and use of spirituous liquors."

Bishop Lyons said he had made a policy of refraining from rushing into print or embarking on a course of action likely to be misconstrued by some persons serving the "noblest purpose" in the world. The church always had taught that true temperance beckoned a "normal personality."

But Don Russell Loses Line And Fish

END OF BIG CATCH

Despite the fact that nineteen speckled beauties, part of the thirty-five that ultimately constituted the day's bag, lay on the floor of Don Russell's Bancroft youth, plunged waist deep into the waters of Burd's Creek, two miles north of the village when the "Big One" tore the line from the elderly fisherman's hand and made off.

Russell lost his line and the fish, likewise his temper but not his love of the sport. Wringing out his trousers, he soon replaced them and hiked off to the creek to further get another line. Then resuming his fishing, the company's friend, Leslie Martin, 214 Church Street, Belleville, the pair garnered another additional quantity of the speckled beauties.

Martin, looking like the first crop of mosquitoes," Martin said last night. "Although we got quite a mess of bait, we easily caught well over fifty if you count those that we threw back in the water. They were below the prescribed size."

Bennett Charges Public Works in Kingston on Pure Political Basis

Ottawa, May 10—(CP)—With a blast on political expenditures from opposition leader Bennett and a declaration from Labor Minister Rogers, that no country had solved its unemployment problem, the house of forced labor and increased military forces, the 1938-39 relief measures was given third reading in the house of commons last night. It still has to pass the Senate.

Third reading brought a brief debate in which Mr. Bennett pointed his charges that the taxpayers money had been wasted for political purposes on labor projects, particularly in Kingston, Ont., district represented by the Minister. He declared he would have more to say on the estimates.

Mr. Bennett arose particularly to explain that earlier in the relief debate he had erroneously described A. E. Stansbury, President of the Kingston Labor Association as one whose name had appeared in answers to questions as having employed men on various relief jobs, as an official of the Frid Construction Company.

SPEEDY METHOD OF ABANDONMENT RAIL LINES URGED

'Horse-Trading' in Lines Referred to Before Committee

INCREASED OUTLAYS

Canadian National Has 1,800 Miles of Line It May Decide to Abandon

Ottawa, May 10—(CP)—Methods by which officials of the Canadian National and Canadian Pacific Railways arrive at agreements for the abandonment of lines under the co-operation provisions of the Canadian National-Canadian Pacific Act of 1933 were explained to the special senate committee on the railway condition of Canada today by S. W. Fairweather, director of the C.N.R. Bureau of Economics.

Delay in reaching agreements, he said, was due to the time involved studies necessary to determine the advantages and disadvantages to result from each abandonment and divide them equitably between the two railways.

Speedier System

In his opinion a speedier system would be used whereby certain lines of one company might be abandoned to leave the territory to the other company in exchange for the abandonment of groups of equal value by the other.

This method of "horse-trading" in railway lines might involve the rich of one company getting the better of the other. However there were certain conditions which should be effected in the interest of the nation and he did not believe they should be delayed while the railways bargained over a few dollars.

May Abandon 1,800

Answering a question from Senator Gideon Robertson, the George P. Graham (Lib. Brockville), Mr. Fairweather said the railway kept the public interest in railway service in mind.

The Canadian National had decided it had 1,800 miles of line which might be abandoned for financial reasons on its own account apart from co-operation.

Having regard to the needs of the public served by the lines, however, they considered only 400 miles could be abandoned with justice and of this number the Board of Railway Commissioners for reasons of public interest refused permission

Attack Concentrated On Coastal Approaches

Hendaye, France, May 10—(AP)— Spanish insurgents concentrated the main force of their attack today on the coastal approaches to Castellon de La Plana and Valencia.

The fighting on the eastern front centred about Cuevas De Vinroma, 30 miles to the north of Castellon, and the insurgents drive on Spain an area they lost yesterday.

The insurgent strategy was to force the government fighters' right flank in full back eastward, thereby widening the narrow strip which the General Franco holds along the Mediterranean.

Insurgent Galician troops fought slowly forward amid a rolling barrage from 75 millimetre guns and 155 millimetre "long rifles" and howitzers.

HITLER IS ON WAY TO HIS HOMELAND

Telegraphs His Thanks to King And Queen And Mussolini

Bremer Pass, May 10—(AP)— Chancellor Hitler's special train carrying him homeward from Italy nine-day visit to Italy, crossed into Germany shortly after Governor of Austria, Arthur Seyss-Inquart, welcomed Il Duce at the frontier.

On reaching German soil, Hitler telegraphed his thanks to King Victor Emmanuel and Queen Elena for their hospitality.

Another telegram will be sent to Premier Mussolini.

He assured Il Duce in a message that the "ideologies of the Fascist and National Socialist movements are guarantees that the true comradeship existing up until the latter carried into our nations."

HAILE SELASSIE MAY NOT PROCEED TO COUNCIL MEET

Leaves Bath Today For London, Unlikely to go to Geneva

HALIFAX AT GENEVA

Wellington Coy Charges Japan Using Gas in China

London, May 10—(AP)—Haile Selassie, exiled Emperor of Ethiopia, arrived in London today from Bath in rural at Bath, but it was indicated he would not proceed to Geneva for the League of Nations council decision concerning his country's fate.

The Emperor Menen, and his son, have arrived in France. They came from Jerusalem aboard the liner Marietta Pacha, docking at Marseille. As they entrained for Paris it was announced that they did not know whether they would go to Geneva.

In London Haile Selassie's attaches said if he decided whether he would go to Geneva, since Italy, Ethiopia already has representatives and additional.

Halifax Before League

Geneva, May 10—(AP)—Viscount Halifax, Foreign Secretary of Great Britain, will represent the British council today the recent Anglo-Italian agreement was a contribution to world peace, thereby aiding the cause for which the League was set up.

Lord Halifax was followed by the French Foreign Minister, Georges Bonnet, who echoed his words in defending the Franco-Italian agreement now under consideration

International Peace

Lord Halifax said the fact Great Britain and Italy were able to reach an agreement enabled both to claim a contribution "to the cause of international peace, thereby strengthening the cause which this great society exists to serve."

Among the facts Lord Halifax cited in defence of the agreement was President Roosevelt's communication on the subject which the Foreign Secretary said "is a powerful contribution to His Majesty's government."

Dr. Wellington Coo, for China, charged that Japanese troops were using poison gas in the war against China.

Gold Bullion Valued Up to $25,000,000 Stored in Canada

Ottawa, May 10—(CP)—Gold bullion from France, understood to be about $25,000,000, arrived in Ottawa last night and was placed in the vaults of the Bank of Canada, the Ottawa Journal said today in a dispatch.

"Believed to be the first gold for safe keeping from France, reputable ever to be received in Canada, the shipment is understood to be intended as a reserve in Canada for the purchase of munitions for France," the Journal said.

Packed in Boxes

The bullion arrived by ordinary express boxes and all in one regular consignment, it is said, by train from Montreal. In addition to the regular express staff, the bullion was accompanied by a Canadian Pacific Canadian Railway policeman, heavily armed.

Graham Towers, governor of the Bank of Canada, would not confirm or deny that the gold bullion had arrived and was stored in the banks vaults, but said: "I have no desire to comment."

Recent dispatches from London, England, quoted the News Chronicle as saying that two shipments of gold of a total value of £25,000,000 had been arranged by France for Canada.

May Establish Canada-N. Z. Air Route Service

London, May 10—(AP)—The government announced in the House of Commons today it was considering establishment of an air service across the Pacific Ocean from Canada to New Zealand.

Negotiations already are under way with the Dominions concerned, and also with the United States over ownership of certain Pacific islands along the proposed route.

Lt.-Colonel J. J. Muirhead, under-secretary for Air, announced.

Churchill Urges Rallying of Nations To Prevent European Aggression

Manchester, May 10—(CP)— Winston Churchill today called for the rallying of nations, headed by Great Britain and France and backed by the League of Nations, to prevent aggression in Europe.

The veteran Conservative, member of wartime cabinets, made the call at a mass meeting here last night. He said the "British and French peoples numbering 90,000,000 should be supported by Yugoslavia, Rumania, Hungary, Czechoslovakia, Turkey, Greece and Turkey in an effort to keep the peace.

"The way to build left open to Soviet Russia to aid in the event of war but 'we should not go cap in hand' to that nation. Italy eventually might cooperate in such an alliance, he argued.

Through this means Europe would get a breathing spell. "We ask no security for ourselves that we are not prepared to extend to Germany," he said. "If German ambitions no aggressive designs she had better join the club too, and resume membership of League of Nations."

He opened a series of addresses under the auspices of the League of Nations Union's "defence of freedom and peace" movement.

"Stand by the covenant (of the League)" he challeged a large audience. "In this alone lies assurance of safety, defence and freedom, and hope of peace."

Britain should enter no pact with Germany which would return colonies or result in rounding of the empire. He did not object to a pact but "I want to know what the pact is going to be and what power stands it is to be made."

Mr. Churchill said he would like to see France and Great Britain "go to all the smaller states that are menaced, that are going to be devoured one by one by Nazi tyranny, and say to them: 'We aren't going to help you if you aren't going to help yourselves. Are you prepared to take special service in defence of the covenant?'"

Formation of a combination of nations "for mutual defence against aggression" would be "the path, and a highest moral duty and virtue."

NO SOCIAL ORDER WORTHY OF BEING CALLED CHRISTIAN

Bishop Seager of London Deals With World Affairs

ORDER FROM CHAOS

London, Ont., May 10—(CP)— World unrest, its prevalence and the part the church and individual must play in removing it and bringing order out of chaos featured the charge of Bishop Charles A. Seager, read at the opening of the 80th session of the Synod of the Anglican Diocese of Huron today.

His Worship declared:

"This question is of the deepest concern to Christianity and the church; for there can be no social order worthy of the name Christian.

Two Reasons

"There are two reasons beside the fact that our democracies shrink from exercising just authority. They fear to trust the approval of the ul-

Will Urge Gov't to Take Over Belleville - Whitney Highway

City And County Delegation to Visit Minister of Highways

TOURIST ATTRACTION

Envisaging the tourist possibilities such a trunk road would have for this district, efforts are being made by the Belleville Board of Commerce and the city council, in co-operation with Hastings County Council to have the Ontario Department of Highways take over and reconstruct that section of highway leading from this city to Whitney.

Representing city council, Aldermen A. Kennedy, Harry Rollins and E. Logan, and in addition the Secretaries Inions and Secretary J. O. Herity of the Chamber, yesterday interviewed members of the Roads and Bridges Committee of Hastings County Council with a view to having this road constructed to its ultimate completion.

The object of the construction was reportedly viewed with favor by the Roads and Bridges Committee and it was agreed that assistance in the naming of a delegation to interview the Minister of Highways with this request for road construction would be given.

Physicians May Preserve Vision Of Baby Helaine Colan's Right Eye

Chicago, May 10—(AP)— Baby Helaine Colan's left eyeball, removed in an effort to save her life, went under the microscope today and physicians said they hoped to preserve the vision in her other eye.

The 20-week-old infant spent a comfortable night after the surgical operation which a council of medical experts decreed as the only recourse against death from glioma of the retina.

They were asked to make a decision after Helaine's parents were unable to decide whether she should undergo an operation to risk total blindness or be allowed to die.

The cancerous growth had destroyed the vision in the left eye and was impaired that in the right. Medical experts said the disease would be fatal if it reached the brain, through the optic nerve.

Reacted Favorably

Dr. Robert H. Good, who performed the operation, said the baby reacted favorably, experienced no pain, and lost less than a half a teaspoon of blood.

He reported the eyeball was considerably enlarged by the tumor but that the optic nerve, an area in which was removed, appeared normal. The eyeball, nerve, and tumor were sent to pathologists for examination and laboratory tests.

Dr. Good said a laboratory study of tissues removed would help him check the malignant tumor in the right eye and save what vision remained.

The child's mother, Mrs. Estelle Colan, 22, was near collapse at her friend's home where she sought seclusion. Her husband, Dr. Herman Colan, a dentist, expressed gratitude to the physicians for their decision to save Helaine. "I am grateful that our baby may retain the sight of one eye," the father said. "But my wife said she will love our baby just as much if not more, without her sight—and I feel the same

41 SERIOUSLY HURT IN EXPLOSIONS AT DUCKMANTON

27 Bodies Burned And Mangled Are Recovered

45 MINERS TRAPPED

Half Hour After Blasts Message Comes up, 'We Can Hold On'

Duckmanton, Derbyshire, England May 10—(CP)—Seventy-two miners were killed or missing and 41 others seriously injured in disastrous explosions in the Markham pits here today, it was announced officially tonight.

Twenty-seven burned and mangled bodies have been recovered and 45 miners trapped nearly half-a-mile below the surface still are unaccounted for.

Telephone Line Becomes Silent

Late today the telephone line to the entombed men suddenly became silent, which led rescuers to believe the men dead.

Half an hour previously the following message had come from the depths: "Some of us are not badly hurt. Others have been injured by falling roof. We can hang on."

One of the rescuers who staggered from the pit mouth said: "Conditions down there are pretty bad. I fell headlong over bodies on the ground and there must be many others."

Clothing Torn Off

Many of the victims were brought to the surface with their clothing torn off by the force of the explosions, which sent flames roaring through the mine. Many were mutilated beyond recognition.

LIGHT RAINFALL CHECKS DROUGHT IN GT. BRITAIN

Over Much of British Isles Sun Burns Crops

SHORTAGE OF FEED

London, May 10—(AP)—Rains in scattered sections checked drought somewhat today, but over much of the British Isles the burning sun continued to spread its wreckage.

The sun scorched the prairie west Newcastle and Durham where a 72-day spell was ended by heavy rainfall. There also were light showers in some sections of Scotland and some fell in the Midlands and Wales.

Most heavily damaged were the northwest Midlands and southeast England. The green of Ireland was patched with dusty brown scars.

Grass crops have suffered. So did livestock is being sold by many farmers because of shortage of feed. A perennial issue of a five-cent 1845 stamp of Baldissera, Mal., brought $5238.

MONEY TAKEN FROM CITY MILK BOTTLES

Sneak thieves were again active in Belleville, stealing money from milk bottles left by housewives for collection. This continued practice has not only caused police anxiety, but proved embarrassing to citizens and milk men alike. The "phone call" thieves operate at night and it is hard to apprehend them, but if court investigations prove successful, an example will be made of these "carparts," local police authorities warned today. Residents on Canniffon Road and Mary street reported such thefts last night.

BOY AND DOG PAL SHARE SLICE OF BREAD AND SUGAR

Hygienists would have shuddered at the sight, but to the two principal actors concerned, the little play was apparently all right.

Seated on the doorstep of a lower apartment house on Front street this morning, a little boy of three or four sat contentedly enjoying a spread of bread and butter, liberally sprinkled with brown sugar.

Beside him sat a dog, a large animal of undefined breed, whose tongue lolled in anticipation.

Between licks at the bread, the youngster surrendered the bread to the dog who dutifully took turns at the licking operation. Both boy and dog were oblivious to outside attractions in their enjoyment.

HUMANE SOCIETY PLANS TO EXTEND LOCAL ACTIVITIES

May Form Junior Societies in Schools—to Hold Tag Day

COMPLAINTS WANTED

Animal lovers of the city have responded eagerly to the invitation to join and co-operate in one local organization for the welfare and protection of dumb animals when Belleville and the immediate district, it was revealed by a report of the secretary of the Belleville Humane Society at its meeting held in the Chamber of Commerce rooms last evening, that to date, barely a week or so following the first announcement of organization, a total of over one hundred paid-up members has been listed.

Most enthusiastic was the meeting featured by the first preliminary work of organization and the mapping of the coming year's program. It was presided over by President Dr. R. W. Tennent, assisted by Hon. President Wallace Reeves and the newly appointed board of directors and officers.

In opening the meeting, Dr. Tennent welcomed the many present and cited the need for such an active organization devoted in the interests of all dumb animals and the first of the complaints received by this Society have been received and investigated, and I am happy to state that progress has been made," he added.

"One of the better things in this city has come lately in the formation of the Humane Society", agreed Hon. President Wallace Reeves, "and I feel sure that by this group, notably among the work horses and dogs of the city, cruelties to animals, members or outsiders are asked, when they see abuses, of any sort, to make complaint to the officer of this society, and you may rest assured that the case will be looked into.

"I sincerely congratulate the officers of this group upon such a good start made."

It was the decision of the meeting to approach Mr. C. A. Payne, K.C., of the city solicitor, to ask his help to accept the appointment of solicitor of the local group.

As a means of further educating the general public of the city in the matter of care for the pets of the city, the pupils of the city's schools will be invited by the Society to help in the work of the drive for membership, and in the arrangements which are to be made for Tag Day of the Society, for which a date is to be set by the executive committee. The organization composed of Hon. President Wallace Reeves, co-Mayor G. A. Hubbell and the Rev. A. B. Payne approached city council with this request last evening. The possibility of the formation of Junior Humane Societies in the schools of one which will be pursued further, it was generally agreed.

Study Duties of Inspector

Other municipalities in which active Humane Societies are located will be communicated with by the secretary of the local group. Miss Helen Fralick with a request for information on the manner in which the affairs of their branches are conducted, whether only the urban areas of the county are to be affected by the formation of a Humane Society, or if the activities of the group are to be limited only to the municipality. The duties of an inspector appointed will also be studied.

Plans to promote the first Tag Day the Belleville group, an entertainment committee which named Mrs. Roger Porter, chairman, with Mrs. E. E. Freeland; Mrs. W. D. Reeve; Miss Alison Cherry; Miss Lorraine McGinnis; Mrs. G. L. Jenkins; Mrs. Jos. Ryan; and Mrs. Harold Godwin, was formed at last evening's meeting.

The constituted Board of Directors now Sole-Mayor G. A. Hubbell; Mr. H. E. Fairfield; Mrs. Roger Porter; Mrs. Stuart Lasier; Mr. T. D. Ramsay; Dr. Rose McGinnis; Dr. D. H. Ackertil; Dr. H. P. Residents of the district are also invited to take advantage of the opportunity to visit the local institution.

Relief Recipients Ask Council To Restore Able Bodied Men To Rolls, Give Open Voucher

Advised to Appoint Committee to Meet Welfare Chairman

WIDEN CURVE

Highway at Devils Elbow Will be Widened at Cost of $130

Protesting the cutting off of all able bodied men on May 1 and requesting an open voucher, a large delegation of these men appointed their claims before the City Council at their regular meeting on Monday evening and after considerable discussion the matter was referred by Alderman J. W. Barlow, Chairman of Welfare, the Mayor, Jamieson Bone, empowered to interview a committee of three to meet the Chairman of Welfare and talk the matter over. The delegation was led by Mr. Worship that the position the city finds itself in with regard to relief is not their own making but that of the provincial government and that if pressure is required it is there about their requests to that body. The meeting was quite lengthy and as soon as the claims were presented, the delegation withdrew to the council chamber and the business of the session began.

Special Meeting Called.

The matter of selecting a garbage collector for the coming year was not taken up at the meeting although the tenders have been received and thoroughly inspected by the committee and a special meeting of the council will be held on Thursday night at 8 o'clock when the tender will be awarded and it is rumored that some arrangement will be reached other than the one that has been in force for some years. There was no discussion on the question at the session on Monday night. The council received a petition from St. Catharines city council asking this council to concur in holding Victoria Day on Monday, May 23, instead of May 24. The council considered the matter in committee and held that nothing could be done contrary to the wish of the Dominion government and that they were willing to abide by any decision that body might make.

Traffic Amendment Passed

Angle parking on Front street will into effect as soon as the lines are on the pavement can be drawn for at the session last evening the by-law amending the traffic by-law was given its third reading and passed after approval had been obtained from the Department of Highways to make the change from parallel to angle parking. In considering the by-law, Ald. Ranger brought to the attention of the members that no mention was made of angle parking to be in effect for Bridge street from the lower bridge to Pinnacle street and from Front street to Pinnacle street on Victoria avenue. The members were agreed that provision be made for the by-law to have to be sent to Toronto again for approval by a vote in favor of the by-law as now drawn was accepted. The council also passed a recommendation for the purchase of some paint to paint the traffic lanes and the by-law will soon be in operation when angle parking will be the order on Front street.

Spokesman Heard.

When the delegation appeared before the council, one of the spokesmen stated it was unfair to cut off the men from relief as it was impossible for them to go out and get another job and still work for their vouchers to supply the wife and children of the family. He also stated that the relief men would appreciate the return to the open voucher so they would not be held up by the grocers and made to pay the high price.

Alderman Barlow told the delegation that council that the department was only carrying out the instructions issued by council at a previous meeting. "The wives and children of these men are also on relief," said Ald. Barlow, "but a number of men have refused to work for what they have been getting. It is not the fault of the municipal council and it is the fault of the provincial government as they have been cut down from month to month on our allowances by the government and if the cut continues the ratepayers will be paying nearly one hundred per cent of the relief costs and it is a sure thing the municipality can't stand that drain."

A spokesman: "If we go out of the city to work and don't work for our vouchers the whole family is cut off and what are we going to do? There is no work in the city."

Open Voucher Refused

Alderman Barlow: "I will read you the last clause in the first of May letter received from the Minister, dated 2, 26; May 2, 31; May 4, 30; May 5, 29; May 6, 31; May 7, 31; May 9, 7.

Mayor Bone: "I would advise a committee be formed being formed from your ranks to meet the Chairman of Welfare and you could talk the situation over with him.

"The government pays 75 per cent of the relief and the city the other 25 per cent but this rule has been changed from the first of April and the government has been paying 80 per cent but I believe the 25 per cent but this rule has been changed from the first of April and the government has been paying 80 per cent but I believe the last of the municipality but I believe the municipality and provincial governments are shirking their duties with respect to relief."

Ald. Barlow: "On March 30 we did not know what the cut was going to be and we were notified that at the end of April we were paying 20 per cent of the relief cost. The government has also cut our yearly appropriation from $1,500,000 to $1,000,000."

A spokesman: "We are willing to go out when we get a job we have to take the food that is obtained for the wife and children or be unable to sustain us and that is not fair. We are not asking anything from the relief, office yet we have to go out to get our vouchers."

Tag Day Given.

Ex-Mayor George A. Hennett, Rev. A. Beauchamp Payne and William Reeves appeared as a delegation requesting that a Humane Society be formed which was granted, the date to be set later.

A committee of Mayor Bone, Aldermen Barlow and Hollins was appointed to get the details of the estimates, receipts and expenditures of the Board of Education and that the clerk be instructed to request the board to appoint a committee to meet this committee for discussion. A sum of $500 was granted the Parks Board until the estimates are passed and the council also authorized the printing of a number of folders for publicity purposes at a cost of $85.00.

Mayor Bone, Aldermen Haig and Barager will form a committee to join with committees from the countries interested and the Chamber of Commerce in inspecting a new road to Algonquin Park. W. Reynolds of Hamilton was granted the right to connect with the Geddes street sewer his property on the north side of College street at a cost of approximately $300, the sum to be borne by Mr. Reynolds and he will pay at the rate of $30 per house all connections that are made to the sewer. The offer of Thurlow Township to take care of Ald. Edmond Thompson approved of this work being done on the Bell road was figured. It was decided to advertise the sewer for Dufferin avenue from Lot 14 to Victoria avenue, a septic tank at a cost of $50 will be installed for Messrs. Collins and Bell on Dundas street east. The Treasurer was instructed to hire an employe in the treasurer's office for a time at $90. Ald. Gilmour Cushing was in the chair for the committee of the whole, while Aldermen T. W. Wills acted as Mayor when His Worship was called from the council chamber. Those present were Mayor Bone, Aldermen Wills, Thompson, Gilmour, Barager, Haig, Marshall, Rollins, Cushing, Barlow, Jennings and Lewis.

FAMILY HISTORY BEING SOUGHT

Local Historical Society Seeks Information

The historical background and history of a family named Nugent, who settled in Prince Edward County about the year 1797 is being sought by H. G. Miller, secretary of the London and Middlesex Historical Society.

According to that Society John Nugent, who was a United Empire Loyalist, settled in the Township of North Marysburg, Prince Edward County, about the year 1797 or 1798. Records show he married there a Miss Ann Dee and after her death her sister, Miss Margaret Carson. A large family is believed to have been the result of these marriages.

According to further records Mr. Nugent died Nov. 23, 1851, at the age of 91 years. One of his sons, Thomas Nugent, founded the village of Belmont, near London, Ont., and also the town of Ontario, California and it is through the former connection Mr. Miller is interested in the life of John Nugent, including a copy of his obituary and a sketch of his life.

Persons being acquainted with such facts are requested to communicate Mr. Miller or through the Ontario Intelligencer, supply what historical data available. Older residents of North Marysburg Township in Prince Edward County may be in possession of the information sought.

Obituary

LATE MRS. FREDERICK WHITE

Many friends were present at the funeral of Mrs. Frederick White which took place Monday afternoon from her late residence, 138 Pine Avenue. The service in the home and at the graveside in Belleville Cemetery was conducted by the Rev. A. G. Sinclair, pastor of Victoria Avenue Baptist church, assisted by the Rev. Dr. James Scoppie, Pastor of Centenary United church.

The bearers were Messrs. Fred Bell, Percy Bell, Harry Bell, Fritz Bell, George Foster, G. H. Jerome and Joseph Tilley.

The floral tributes were beautiful and many in number.

LATE ALBERT STAPLEY

The funeral of Albert Stapley took place Monday afternoon, May 9, from his late residence in the second concession of Ameliasburg Township, to Rose Hill Cemetery. The service in the home and at the graveside was conducted by Rev. T. A. Smith of Ameliasburg.

The bearers were Messrs. J. Duvall, Lorne Sine, Wm. Sine, Lucas, Wilbur Lucas and W. Vitler.

LATE MRS. GEORGE N. MORRIS

Monday afternoon, May 9, the funeral of Mrs. George N. Morris took place from her late residence in the second concession of Ameliasburg Township, to Rose Hill Cemetery. The service in the home and at the graveside in Glenwood Cemetery, Picton, was conducted by the Rev. T. A. Smith of Ameliasburg, assisted by the Rev. Lorne Burr of Crofton. During the service in the home a solo entitled "City Four Square" was sung by Mrs. Lorne Burr.

The bearers were Messrs. D. Fox, A. Calnan, H. Thompson, C. Johnson, W. Fralick and W. Way.

W. G. McCLELLAN

Following a two-months' illness, William G. McClelland, 64, retired farmer and resident of Bloomfield a Skoia at Windsor died in hospital there a few days after undergoing an operation. Windsor financial circles before retirement to farming. Mr. McClelland began his banking career as a junior clerk in the Bank of Ottawa and was later manager at Wellington, Picton, Brockville, and Windsor. He was a native of Picton. Surviving are a son, Douglas John, of Toronto; and two brothers, Arthur Peterborough, and Herbert, Montreal.

Mr. McClelland was born in Picton in October, 1900, to become manager of the branch of the Canada Metropolitan Bank and remained as his manager after absorption by the Bank of Ottawa, continuing in charge until May, 1925, when he was transferred to Wellington, and a branch in that city. During that period he took an active part in community affairs and was associated with many institutions there. He was an active member of St. Peter's Church, serving as a church warden, and was a member of Sussex Lodge, No. 5, A.F. and A.M.

Mrs. McClelland, formerly Miss Mc-Alpine, of Lindsay, Ont., a niece of the late Sir Sandford Fleming, died last year in Windsor.

Police Blotter

Two men were arrested on charges of intoxication yesterday, a transient who gave his name as John Connors, Toronto, and a local citizen who was causing an alleged disturbance at Boonberg's second-hand store, where the inebriate is said to have broken dishes. The pair were remanded to the custody of the County jail until Friday's police court proceedings.

Other activities were quiet and serious, with the cell block available for nine transients, who sought shelter at the police station last night.

Breezy Speaker From The West Inspires Rotarians

Canada Can Support Population of One Hundred Million in Comfort, Happiness, and Prosperity, If Canadians Will Only Wake up to Opportunities, Says Rotarian Bedwell Speaker; Sounds Highways from Coast to Coast, and North and South to Attract Tourists — Vision of Canadians Greatness

Canadians need a larger, wider vision in order to grasp the possibilities of this land so wonderfully endowed by Nature and develop a national unity which will work hand in hand carrying on the work that the Fathers of Confederation, backed by the worthy pioneers of the period, began with such limited means and against such super-human obstructions. Canada has everything needed, the most highly favored nation in the world, and can support easily more than one hundred million people in comfort and happiness instead of the ten million now occupying this vast domain. A continent bestrewed from coast to coast with scenic highways, from east to west and from north to south connected with splendid motoring roads, a country teeming with employment created by employment creating industries, public works, etc., a Canada prosperous and happy, most likely among the nations with riches of natural resources Canada can come into her own if the people only have the vision.

Such was the picture in brief presented to an Inter-City gathering of Rotarians, guests of Belleville Rotary Club at the Hotel Quinte Monday evening by G. O. (Jerry) McCleery, K. C. M. P., representative of Vancouver-Burrard in the Dominion Parliament. Big, breezy as his beloved Rockies and full of energy and enthusiasm he illuminated by a wonderful vision of the vast possibilities of Canada's future in the development of Nature's rich resources and in the building and extension of scenic highways to bring the world tourist traffic here to spend millions, his address to the guest speaker of the evening was inspiring and interesting. Eloquent and forceful Mr. McCleery held his audience in close attention and every moment was entertaining and instructive.

Born Member Because Lawyer

Introduced by C. A. Cameron, M. P., Mr. McCleer was presented as a self-made man, born in Wiltshire, England, where he attended Public and High Schools, then learned the trade of iron moulder. Nights he studied and in due time entered Dalhousie University at Halifax, for the study of law. Called to the bar he began his legal practice in Vancouver where he became known as "The Man Who Laid the Rocky Mountains", referring to his long and successful fight to have the Dominion Railway Commission lower the freight rates on wheat so that Vancouver could become an ocean shipping port of importance. He served as Mayor of Vancouver and later entered the Provincial Legislature. Then leading his wings still further he aspired to the Dominion Parliament and the people of Vancouver-Burrard sent him there. In the smaller field he was a big man, always planning and accomplishing big things for the benefit of the people. In the larger field he has made himself felt as a firm believer in the destiny of Canada as a great and prosperous nation. He thinks for himself, said Mr. Cameron, "wears no man's collar and is thoroughly unorthodox, his sole purpose in life seemingly being to promote the best welfare of Canada and make the people of that there are wonderful possibilities for expansion and progress if all will listen to the call of Destiny and envision the possibilities.

After Mr. McGeer's splendid and inspiring address which compelled the close attention and admiration of all present, appreciation of the large number present about two hundred in all, a very entertaining program was presented, with Sandy Burrows acting as song leader and putting all kinds of pep into the proceedings; Lee Riggs presiding at the piano, Jack Deacon contributing a vocal solos which literally brought down the house, and brought from the speaker of the evening the prophesy that Rotarian Jack Deacon would carry the name of song all the world to fame, honor which is within the sphere of his voice. Jack Elder, "That Scottsman", of Kingston, contributed his version of Sweet Adeline with company chorus, assisted by Sandy Burrows; Jack Thomson and his Pirate song made a decided hit and Harry Moorman's collection of negro spiritual selections in delightful manner, earning several encores. The Belleville Octette composed of Harry Moorman, Jack Thomson, Alfred Evans, Gardiner Duff, Bert Houston, Harold Howard, Wm. Morris, James Bankier, Chas. Spalding.

Visitors present included P. W. Danby, H. B. Proctor, Kingston; Mack Gordon, Peterborough; Fraser Skinner, Kingston; Col. Sims, Frank Tarbush, Barrie; Cliff Weston, Campbellford; Dr. Gibson, Lethbridge, Alberta; R. Cliff Nash, Kingston; F. Linton, Campbellford; H. B. Stock, F. G. Chamberlain, Vern Smith, George Griffin, Belleville. W. A. Fraser, M. P., Wing Commander A. E. Godfrey, R. C. A. F. Station, Trenton.

Absentee With Variation

A feature bit of the evening, an extra, not on the original program was contributed by Rotarian Ellis Brunnelle, of the Canadian Packing Abouette with variations and the assistance of the entire company, making a real bit.

At the head table were seated the following: Dr. F. H. Hurd, Kingston, District Governor; President Fred Douglas, Belleville Rotary Club; Charles Davidson, President Campbellford Club; P. W. Danby, President Kingston Rotary Club; P. W. Laidley, President Napanee Rotary Club; Ben. F. Joyce, President Trenton Rotary Club.

Canada Calling

Beginning his address by brief reference to the achievements of the British Empire and the trade route round the world connecting the various dominions, the problems facing the leaders in diplomacy and the challenge to democracy and its conditions which has developed in Europe and elsewhere, Mr. McGeer plunged into his subject of the Greater Canada which is to be, of the possibilities before us if we but realize them and the courage to seize them and the promotion of enterprise to build up a defence against the draw of the United States of Canadian money, the winter resorts, the great Pairs and many other attractions offered the lure of Uncle Sam. Tourist travel affords an opportunity to bring millions of American dollars to this country to admire the most wonderful scenery in the world, the old world atmosphere of Quebec where a different language is spoken, a foreign land in effect; Canada's mighty mountains, lakes and rivers, all inviting the curious and the bored of the great cities to the south, where the aggregate wealth is amazing in its billions.

Ontario's super-highway in the making from Windsor to the sea through Ontario, Quebec and the Maritimes, is an object lesson of what can be done. Ontario points the way. Three decades of a super-highway from coast to coast and from north to south to make all Canada accessible to tourists and others. Mexico is challenging for the tourist traffic of the world with highways the length and breadth of that land, and a recent conference of Pacific Coast cities, Canadian and American, discussed this threat very seriously and took measures to combat it.

Going into detail as to the millions involved in the tourist traffic and the necessity of expanding this through good highways and meeting and overcoming competition, Mr. McGeer's arguments were very convincing and inspiring.

Employment creating industries should be inaugurated and from coast to coast an awakening and constructive period of good roads, public works and other progressive measures would snap Canada out of the lethargy which threatens its life and progress.

Outlining briefly the stupendous program of public works now in progress in the United States including highways, waterpower projects, the largest power dams in the world—and even the more tentative program of public works to create employment and add to the nation's potential wealth, the speaker pointed to the necessity of Canada being alive to the forward movement of the times, to be up and doing and develop the latent possibilities of this land.

Pointing out that with the development of the automobile, people were travelling as never before Mr. McGeer urged all Canadians to wake up to the possibilities of the tourist traffic and not let other nations take away what can be ours if we have the vision, the initiative, and progressiveness coupled with courage.

GROUP STRANDED FOR THIRTY HOURS

Fishermen Take Refuge on Island And Brought to Land

Amherstburg, Ont., May 10 (CP)—Arthur (Mudcat) Laframboise, one of a party of seven fishermen, awaited today on lonely Middle Sister Island, 24 miles out in Lake Erie off this Essex County port, the subsiding of the storm-tossed waters that left the group stranded for thirty hours.

Laframboise stayed with his 23-foot motor launch when a rescue tug picked up six of the men and brought them here early last night. The party, on a fishing trip, was unable to return to Amherstburg when a storm blew up on the lake Sunday. So roughly was the craft tossed all crockery aboard was broken.

"How they went through the attacks, potatoes, ham and other stuff we had!" Captain J. Earl McQueen of the tug Patricia McQueen said when he brought the six men to port. "The only food they had eaten was fish and there was no salt to make it palatable. The first thing they did when we got them aboard was to make a bee-line for the food."

Stayed With Launch

Gordon Sharalier, Frank Buhler, Roy Allison, James Whitson, Elmer (Cap) Whitney and Walter Cokel were aboard the Patricia Queen, Laframboise, known as "Mudcat" in many a dock party, stayed with the launch until the seas calmed. Only Allison, who suffered from seasickness, showed any ill effects.

The seven men left here early Sunday. Search got under way when they failed to return and the craft sheltered in a cove on the lee side of the island, was sighted yesterday by the pilot of two airplanes. Trolling put out to the rescue a short time later.

The Patricia McQueen ran into her shore of refuge in reaching the scene. Heavy waves broke over the ship and water lay two inches deep in the wheel-house at times. A heavy iron stove in the galley, lashed to the floor with steel bands, was uprooted and smashed to pieces. Several pieces of furniture broken and three passengers on the rescue trip suffered from seasickness.

41 SERIOUSLY HURT

London, May 10—(CP-Havas) — More than 70 miners were believed killed in the Marihaus Colliery today, Reuter's Information, Derbyshire, Captain Harry Crookshank, Minister for Mines, announced in the House of Commons today.

Through grim coincidence, the question of danger from explosions in mines was the result of the Cooner Hill pit disaster in Flint, Wales, in July at the Brynpo Coal Mine in which over 250 miners lost their lives.

49 Injured Rescuers Out

Duckmanton, Derbyshire, England May 10—Gas explosions killed many miners in the Markham Colliery today. Rescue crews brought 49 injured men out of the workings and others still were entombed.

Bobbing women gathered around the pithead as the dead and injured were brought to the surface. Scenes were particularly grievous in the little mortuary where wives and relatives sought to identify the bodies, marked by yellow tags.

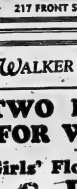
4 Members of Family Entombed

One woman found that four members of her family were still in the blasted workings, their fate undetermined.

Scores of rescuers, stripped to the waist, fought through roof falls toward the trapped men. Police broadcast a call for oxygen.

The majority of the trapped men were believed uninjured, but their way was blocked by fallen debris. Rescuers, with gas masks, sealed up one section of the pit to prevent gas from seeping through to the trapped miners.

Second Explosion Occurred



The second explosion occurred shortly after 9 a.m. while injured from the first blast were being brought out.

"The Germans are the more dangerous today because they are fighting not for the preservation, but for the restoration of what they call their honor."—Emil Ludwig.

Increased Outlay

Considerable interchange ensued between Col. O. M. Biggar, counsel, and Senator Arthur Meighen when the former sought to analyse memoranda from the railways which set forth the reasons for increased expenditures in the first two months of 1938. This was $894,000 for the C.P.R. and $2,794,000 for the C.N.R.

Details indicated that if wage increases had not been effective, the C.P.R. operating loss would have been improved to the extent of $300,000. For the C.N.R. the figures showed that additional to wage increases of $1,752,000, other expenses rose approximately $500,000.

Mayor Favors May 23 as Holiday

Celebration of Victoria Day on Monday, the 23rd, instead of Tuesday, May 24th, as favored by Mayor Ralph Day of Toronto, who is to urge Premier Mackenzie King to have the Dominion name this earlier date for the observance of the proverbial holiday also finds favor with Mayor Bone of this city.

"I believe that all holidays which fall in the middle or about the beginning of the week should be observed on Monday. It would give workers of every class that much better chance to enjoy themselves. There doesn't seem to be any regular work so important that it can't be delayed or put ahead a day. Shop keepers, shop workers, all should benefit by the longer week-end holiday.

"I am in complete sympathy with Mayor Day in his effort to have the date of 23rd named as a Dominion holiday, and Belleville, I believe, would be glad to fall in line with this suggestion," stated Mayor Bone.

AT THE BEACH

On a large portion of the extensive shore line of the Quinte Bay Beaches is to be found sand washed up from the bay, quite different from the sand which has been placed on the shore to make the beach.

It looks as if nature has provided somewhere off shore a bar of sand and as if she is ready to help those who have helped to make the beach.

If this is true, this sand bar may be located and steps taken to release it by dynamite or some other means so that it may be washed ashore and make the finest bottom or bed for the beach.

This is one of the favorable things about the beach and the entire project. Another is the wholehearted support given the concert put on by the committee last Friday at the collegiate theatre. It was an excellent step to have the children of the schools take part for they will be the best advocates of a beach such as the officers of the Quinte Bay Beaches Association are endeavoring to give Belleville for all time.

Another happy augury is that on the first appeal for money to assist operations and for filling or waste material for levelling the grounds, a sympathetic reaction was noticed as offers of material came in and work were delivered at the beach and park. Much help of this kind is necessary and every example of cooperation speeds forward the beach project that much more rapidly.

The officials who have kept the hope oglimmer of the finest of beaches and parks now see their hopes certain of realization. The near fifteen thousand dwellers in Belleville can surely help the small committee to the finish.

The securing of the charter of the association makes it possible for the directors to enter into contracts as to use of land and other agreements which the situation calls for.

Here is a non-profit organization, established for the benefit of the community. The men with the vision of such a park and beach deserve the unending thanks of the citizens of Belleville for they are going to give Belleville with cooperation what fortunes could not ordinarily buy if nature had not laid out the shoreline and the scene.

IN THE SHOW BUSINESS

One who knew P. T. Barnum as an associate and a man who has spent 62 seasons under canvas, Tom Lynch is dead. Few would recall when he trained and drove the celebrated "40-hitch" in street parades. He made the harness and picked the forty big bays for that hook-up himself. He was heralded as "Tom Lynch the champion driver of the world."

Those were days when no movie camera caught and left records for future generations. Such a scene would have to be made up at a modern studio street set and it is doubtful if a like driver could be found.

But this man was more than that. He was in charge of all the 700 horses of the Barnum circus. Fred Pfening, this obituary says: "In the darkest hours before down it was his voice these creatures heard and obeyed and despite his advanced years he moved swiftly from one vantage point to another to "keep 'em rolling." Lynch was the last but one of the Barnum and Bailey key men when the circus was taken over by Ringling Brothers.

Lynch was also associated with the horse-drawn circuses of Al. Ringling, his employer being the late John (Pogey) O'Brien.

Lynch's life had enough of the romance to satisfy the most unsettled boy of today. He ran away from home at the age of 15 to work for a tradesman in Ottawa. Later he persuaded him he took a train for Philadelphia, then the headquarters of all circuses. He became assistant hostler for Rice, Ryanand Shaulding Shows and then he joined O'Brien and later Barnum.

THE ATTACK ON EVEREST

The tallest mountain in the world is to be attacked for the fifth time by a British expedition. Twelve miles and more than Mount Everest they have made their camp. Seven men compose this daring party, men who have been trained in climbing and who know what it is to have mountain sickness, the sore throat of "Everest throat," double vision, sudden temporary blindness, wastage of muscle, breathlessness, dilatation of the heart, the weariness and physical weakening at heights of over 21,000 feet.

They are veterans of the mountains, know blizzards from actual experience, and trust to oxygen when they come to make the snail's pace for the last one thousand feet of the climb. They know all the dangers, death in so many forms, they are scientists aware of the monsoon and its sudden snows which will close the season's attempt.

The history of the monsoon is an interesting one. It seems to have a period from between May 25th and July 7th.

To many such daring in the battle for the peak of Everest seems most futile as so many lives pay the price of daring in the climbing of such heights. But if mountain-climbing were any less dangerous, it would mean nothing to these intrepid men. They risk all for the highest. Once climbed it may be that no one will attempt to scale it for many years or it may be that like ocean crossings in airplanes there may be more climbing than ever.

Besides mountain-climbers, so scientifically trained as these men are, expect to add to the store of scientific knowledge which may be gathered at the awful peak of Everest where never man has yet trod.

CANADA, MY HOME
By Arthur L. Burke

On earth, in sky, beneath the sea,
There is no place so dear to me
No land I treasure more,
Than Canada, Dominion fair,
Where men are men, who do and dare,
As in the days of yore.

Her fields of golden grain that gleams
As do her rivers, lakes and streams
In outlet to the sea.
Her forest wealth and minerals rare,
No land with this can I compare,
No people quite so free.

There is no flag that takes the breeze
Or floats upon the seven seas
That means so much to me
As does the old red, white and blue,
That speaks of justice, freedom too,
No matter where we be.

This is the land that gave me birth,
No brighter, better land on earth
Than Canada, my home
No other land can e'er instill share,
It matters not however fair,
Or cause my feet to roam.

No land so perfect in it's parts,
Where men acknowledge in their hearts
An Architect Divine.
O, may this land that speaks of Thee
Receive in all equality
The blessings that are Thine.

- WHERE VISION IS LACKING THE COMMUNITY MAY NOT PERISH but it is in for a tough time; the grass is apt to grow on its streets and the spiders weave cobwebs across the entrances to business places. Fortunately Belleville is full of the spirit of progress and the visions of the men at the port of its citizens with the result that each year improvements are made to business property and private homes of substantial character. When it is considered that Belleville's business centre for a population of more than fifty thousand well-to-do people who live within the city of Belleville or within easy motoring distance is it any wonder that the business men of this city are always up on their toes and in the front rank of the business parade — no cobwebs here or six-day checker games in the back room. Apparently every place can not make good the boast of Belleville for the Lindsay Warder in another column to "keep 'em rolling." Lynch was the last but one of the Barnum and Bailey key men when the circus was taken over by Ringling Brothers.

Later he persuaded him he took a train for Philadelphia, then the headquarters of all circuses. AFTER FORGING NEW ANGLO-FRENCH BOND

Well pleased are Premier Edouard Daladier (front) of France and his foreign minister, Georges Bonnet as they are pictured leaving 10 Downing St., after an all-day conference with Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain and his ministers. The days conclave brought forth most powerful military pact of modern times, virtually cinching the armed forces of France and England to stand shoulder to shoulder against aggression. Land forces of both countries would be under command of the French general staff; sea and air forces under orders of the British high command.

More About the New Insulin For Diabetics

When Drs. Banting and Best, of Toronto, discovered Insulin, and Dr. Collip, now of Montreal, made it safer to use, it was felt that all had been learned about insulin for the treatment of diabetes. Many research workers then began experimenting with insulin in the treatment of other ailments such as lack of appetite, dementia praecox (persistent dream state) and others.

In the treatment of diabetes however, research workers sought to prepare insulin in such a way that it could be taken without needle three times a day. While no method of preparing insulin so that it will be effective taken by mouth has been discovered what is helping the situation to some extent is the new treatment by protamine zinc insulin. I have spoken before of this treatment and its advantages, disadvantages and recorded by physicians doing special work in diabetes.

What would at the first sight, be considered a most unfavorable result from the use of this zinc protamine insulin compound is the apparent increase in the number of cases of diabetes. Dr. Allen Gullin, formerly whose name has been associated with diabetes for many years before insulin was discovered—points out in the Michigan State Medical Journal that protamine zinc insulin has probably increased the number of diabetic patients using insulin by 70,000. This is due almost entirely to the fact that protamine insulin is injected but once a day whereas the original insulin is injected three times a day. A regulation that many diabetics would not or could not follow.

Dr. Joslin also answers the criticism of some unthinking individuals that it is believed there are now more diabetics than before the discovery of insulin. The apparent increase in numbers is due to (a) a more systematic search for diabetics and the use of medical supervision of the population in general, (b) there are more people much beyond the age of 40 years when the speed of diabetes is often most frequent, as it is up to the age of 40, and (c) diabetics live longer and in better health.

One of the mistakes made in the use of insulin, Dr. Joslin says, is that it too often or in doses that are too large, because it seems to act so slowly. Many busy people in a diabetic patient has twenty years at the end of him and one need not hurry."

TRAFFIC SATURDAY NIGHT

Saturdays and Saturday nights in the big cities. Traffic and Saturday night a survey made by the Whig-Standard disclosed the fact that between 7 and 11 o'clock there was hardly a place to park a car on any street in the area bounded by Queen Street, Wellington Street and Sergy. Late shoppers are encouraging, for it indicates that a lot of business is being done at that time, however, when many motorists were searching for places to park their cars there were few left vacant, because of the "No Parking" regulation. We would like to see the time these "No Parking" privileges, were taken away from the retail shops, but when they are a "Police Order" they become a law.

We have no doubt that every business man would like to see in front of his store free from parked cars in order that customers could drive up and conveniently step out of a car into his store. Is it quite fair, therefore, to give these privileges to one and not to all? If there are certain days when it is necessary that the theatres and some places of business be kept free from parked cars, for the convenience of the general public, could not the "No Parking" restrictions be limited to these definite periods? If every business man who has demanded "No Parking" privileges the people of Belleville and who come here to shop would turn with disgust to our neighboring towns if we tried to limit these privileges were curtailed.

There has been another feature of the increased automobile traffic that has been causing considerable worry during the past few months and that has been the practice of many motorists in the residential section parking their cars in front of their residences where the streets are comparitively narrow and on which the traffic is heaviest. It is almost with fear and trembling that one drives up East Street on long parts of Tuesday evening during the day. Cars are parked on both sides of the street and one is almost led to corkscrew down these streets to get through unscathed.

In the interests of safety and of business, some action in relation should be taken in this matter of parking, both as regards business sections and the residential sections. It would certainly result in fewer traffic tangles and in more convenience for the buying public.—Kingston Whig-Standard.

ROYAL FAMILY ATTENDS WEDDING

China, The War Prize

One-tenth of the world's population has come under the paralyzer's sword in recent months. The rich and fertile plains of the Yangtze Delta are home to 200,000,000 Chinese, the last great bloc of cheap labor in the world.

Mulberry trees about silvery green leaves for the silk worms in February. The showers of April flood the paddy fields for the rice planting. In August, wheat, barley and millet are planted for harvest in November. Cotton is another big cash crop easily transported to market over the hundreds of canals.

But fertile farms and cheap labor are not the only war prizes. Nanking, Soochow, Hangchow and Wusih are important not only for their own wealth but because of the taxes they will yield Nanking as the greatest city in the world long before the birth of Christ. Eight times it has been the capital of China. The tombs of the Mings and Dr. Sun Yat Sen are here. This section is the China of modern highways, sanitary systems and water supply.

"Heaven above, Soochow and Hangchow below," is a saying of the Chinese which shows their love and respect for these cities. Here the colleges of China are in the conquered area.

Cultured silk worms produce the finest white silk in the world on this plain. Marco Polo, jaded by his years of travel, found real beauty and served as a lesser magistrate near Nanking. The population is patient, delighting at work from childhood to old age. And the citizen's nature is reflected in a fervent proverb; "It is a little thing to starve; it is serious to lose one's face."

Fifteen per cent of the area is covered by lakes, canals or rivers. The simple hulls of the farmers are built somewhat brick ovens which hatch the silk worms. Chinese families live in the incubators. Eggs are stored in their bosoms and dipped in salt solutions in March, April, May, June and February. Between dippings the eggs are wrapped in rice paper and kept in stone jars.

The oven is stoked with cow dung and mulberry wood in December. Late in March the fuel is lighted and after the first month has cleared, it burns slowly without smoke or flame for a month. During this period of incubation the farmer puts the eggs in his bed so rising in the morning, and covers them with his cotton-padded clothing which he has worn through the day when he retires at night.

Not only body heat is transmitted in the eggs but also disease which the plodding farmer regards as regrettable but impossible of prevention. If the season is right the leaves of the mulberry are full size of the bowl of a tea spoon when they hatch between 2 and 10 p.m. on April 15th each year.

Thousands of worms must be fed until the sixth day of the farmer and his family is spent in cutting leaves so tiny the worms may eat them.

Disaster is upon the farmer if the supply of mulberry leaves fails as the silk worms are hatched. He has only a few days and watch his worms die of starvation or he may pawn everything he owns in an effort to obtain food to keep the high-priced leaves for his hungry army.

Suddenly, with the spring floods the rice season is with the farmer. He has three tools, a hoe, a woodcutter's knife with a saw and a spade. His bent of burden is a water buffalo, which depends for its grazing on the grave mounds scattered about the countryside.

The farmers food is rice and pickled carrots, three meals a day. His family is large and hungry. This is the life of the farmer, the first prize in the war games today.

Salt duck is the principal export of Nanking, although it is world-renowned for its porcelains, as well as the damask, and brocades made there. A million women and children live in Nanking and before the 22 miles of wall that held back the Tartar hoi fell before the Japanese artillery fire.

During the third, fourth and fifth centuries it was the capital of the nation. Its fortunes brought it back to prominence and in 1911 Dr. Sun Yat Sen established the National Government within its walls. Ten years ago a $20,000,000 building program was launched. Parks, highways, a stadium were added to the modern refractory telescope in the Orient is here.

Many of the old games are the smaller cities and seaports the 75 cotton mills, 45 silk mills, 30 flour mills and 20 factories on the plains.

But the natives accept the invader with age-old philosophy. Renting their boats and their homes to him, they say: "They are not good fits that fight; they are bad as rising in the morning, and covers them with his cotton-pad-

MOTHER AND SON IMPLICATED IN MURDER

Mrs. Mary Smith, 72, in a sensational statement to police, named her son Decastro Earl Mayer as the slayer of James Eugene Bassett, former Annapolis naval officer, who disappeared 10 years ago. The mother and son, shown above, were found in possession of Bassett's car and sentenced for car theft. Mayer is now serving a life sentence in Walla Walla, Wash., as an habitual criminal. Mrs. Smith claimed that her son killed Bassett with a hammer and then dissected his body while she looked on.

JUDGE DISMISSES ACTION AGAINST BROCKVILLE MAN

F. R. Pratt Not Held Responsible For Debt Contracted by Furniture Co.

COMPANY MUST PAY

Declaring that a promissory note sent by plaintiffs to defendant was a clever draftsman's trick and a trap into which defendant did not fall, Mr. Justice Godfrey in Supreme Court non-jury sittings today, dismissed an action against F. R. Pratt of Brockville, for payment of note, brought by the Stewart-Warner Alemite Company, Belleville.

His Lordship, however, awarded judgment for plaintiffs against the Pratt Home Furniture Company, Brockville, for $1510.97 with interest and costs.

In his summary His Lordship stated that he believed F. R. Pratt to be a truthful man and accepted his evidence.

"He took all precautions to avoid personal liability and did not according to evidence, personally guarantee payment of the account."

The action arose from a claim for $1,200 and interest on a promissory note signed by F. R. Pratt, Brockville, defendant, beneath the business stamp of the Pratt Home Furnishing Company of that town, in favor of the Stewart-Warner Alemite Corporation of Belleville, plaintiffs.

Chas. A. Payne K.C., represented the plaintiffs and F. Pratt, Brockville, appearing for the defendant.

Examination of several witnesses elicited the fact that a verbal agreement existed between Salesman W. E. Rowsome general manager of the Stewart-Warner Alemite Co., and defendant, to the effect the latter would see that payment would be made by the Pratt Home Furnishing Co., at the rate of $25 per week with interest on the unpaid balance.

On the witness stand, defendant told the court that he was not an original member of the Pratt Home Furnishing Company. He learned of the poor financial position at the beginning of 1937 and had advanced them money. Previous to that date he had invested $5,000 in the company, and had only received the firm in an advisory capacity after he had discovered its financial standing.

He had called on Mr. Rowsome at his cottage at West Lake to endeavour to make some arrangement to ward off a threatened action, the news of which he had received in a letter from the Stewart-Warner Company a day previous.

"Rowsome told me, that he was not satisfied with the way the accounts were being made, and asked if some other arrangement could be made. I told him that the $35 weekly and interest was paid he would be satisfied. I told him, that I would see that it was done and would go back and give the firm instructions to that effect", witness testified.

"Mr. Rowsome asked me if I could guarantee the money, and I told him 'No', witness added. He then asked me to see that the firm forwarded the money to the Stewart-Warner Company."

Signed Note

Witness here told the court he had signed a note sent him by the Stewart-Warner Company and had affixed the company stamp to it believe himself of personal obligation.

Further evidence brought out the fact that to personal cheques signed by F. R. Pratt had been received by plaintiffs, cancelled cheques were produced as evidence, none of which bore the signature of witness.

Mr. Nickle —"Did you attend a meeting of the Furniture Manufacturers Association representing your creditors in Toronto".

Witness—"Yes, I called Mr. Row. from Toronto because he had not filled his claim. He told me he had not done that there was an arrangement he made with me was satisfactory. I told him about the meeting of the creditors and he asserted it was satisfactory."

Witness again admitted signing the letter sent by Mr. Rowsome. "I put the stamp on it in order not to make myself personally liable," he told the court. "I exercised no influence to have the firm send the payment, cheque, but did one send any of my personal ones", he added.

Cross-examined by Mr. Payne, witness admitted investing $5,000 in the company. He denied being aware of the assets and liabilities of the company in August, but admitted being cognizant of the fact that it could not meet its obligations.

Mr. Payne—"In August the company made a definite agreement to pay as the rate of $100 per month, and again at which object had you in giving undertaking to the Stewart-Warner Company if the company could not pay?"

Witness—"I merely promised Mr. Rowsome by personal guarantee that the firm would send the money."

Knew of Meeting

A. E. Millman, member of the firm of Pratt Home Furnishing Co. admitted that he knew of the Pratt-Rowsome meeting in August. He also testified that the next weekly company was formed at the request of its creditors. He admitted that the firm had been given notice and exchange to plaintiffs from time to time.

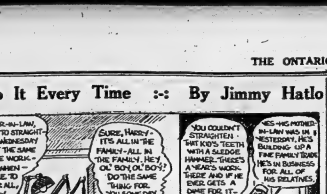
Evelyn Coulter, private secretary to the late W. E. Rowsome testified that she had listened on a telephone conversation between defendants and her employer. The circular letter sent out by the Furniture Manufacturers was mentioned, she said, but she did not know the contents. Mr. Rowsome mentioned the letter had been received but did not see how it applied in view of the arrangement made between himself and defendant. Witness denied knowledge of the contents of the letter, but admitted having seen a note signed by F. R. Pratt. His Lordship intervened at this point "There is no such a thing' as a note of F. R. Pratt's, as far as this case is concerned", he said.

Mrs. W. E. Rowsome, wife of the late general manager of the Stewart-Warner Alemite Corporation testified that she had received from the Rowsome summer home a; West Lake Picton, when F. R. Pratt called there on business. She told the court that she had been in the room when the conversation took place.

In her own words at the request of plaintiff's counsel, witness stated that she had heard her husband say that the money must be forthcoming and that Pratt had replied "I will see that you get the money at the rate of $25 per week until the account is settled."

Cross-examined by Mr. Nickle, witness said she did not remember having made a definite statement that he was taking an active interest in the business and that he helm in regard to the financial administration of the Pratt Home Furnishing Co.

Went With Intent—Godfrey



His Lordship: "It seems clear that Pratt went there with intent to make some arrangement."

Mr. Nickle—"Did Mr. Pratt assure your husband that he would endeavour to raise $25 per month was sent to your husband's company."

Witness—"Yes."

Gordon Murray, salesman for the Big "A" Company of Belleville, testified, that he had had several interviews with the defendant with regard to payment of the account. "He told me he could not look after the matter personally rather than see the business go under," witness stated. He added that he did not regard defendant as a senior partner of the firm "until after he had assumed responsibility for the finances of the company".

Rev. W. R. Tristram made several calls in the neighborhood on Friday and spent the dinner hour at Mr. and Mrs. Will Stapley's. The afternoon he spent with Mr. and Mrs. George Eggleton's.

Mrs. Warren Harlow, Mrs. Pidgeon and Miss Marion McMullen spent Friday in Belleville.

Friday was Arbor Day and after tidying the yards Mr. Kenneth Stapley and the school pupils enjoyed a long walk in the woods. The children returned with arms full of wild flowers.

Minto

Minto, May 10.—On Tuesday evening of last week a large number of friends gathered at the home of Mr. Leo Farrell and presented the newlyweds, Mr. and Mrs. Manson Farrell, with a miscellaneous shower. They received many beautiful and useful gifts including a silver pie knife, fork in silver and a butter knife from the chairvari gang. About 9.30 the chairman, Mr. Alex Donahue called the gathering to order and Mr. and Mrs. Farrell were called and presented with the gifts and Miss Margaret Danford read the following address:

Harold, Ont., May 3, 1938.

Mr. and Mrs. Manson Farrell,

Harold, Ont.

Dear Friends: We, your friends and neighbors have gathered here this evening to wish you every happiness, best wishes on your new venture of life ... that of matrimony. Manson, we just Manse to most of us, we wish you every good luck in whatever you and your bride undertake. You have chosen from some to school and worked among us, so you are no stranger. We have always found you a willing helper in whatever task you undertook. We only hope that you will find the special and good-natured to your new partner as you have been toward us.

To Lenora, who is probably a stranger to some, to become a real friend, we wish health, happiness and good cheer. May you never have a sad or regretful day in your new voyage of life.

We ask you to accept these gifts and each time you use them we ask you to think of the several donors when you are here or many miles away.

Signed on behalf of the community: George Yanney, Leora Marlatt, Ivan Sarles, Edna McMaster, Mrs. W. Pitchett.

Friends of the bride and groom opened the parcels and Mr. and Mrs. Farrell expressed their thanks and invited all to visit them. All joined in singing "For They Are Jolly Good Fellows". Lunch was served and dancing was enjoyed until the wee sma' hours.

Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Sine, Muriel and Doris spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. Mowat Sine.

Miss Evelyn Cook spent the week-end at her home here.

Mr. and Mrs. Ira Bristol were Sunday guests of Mr. and Mrs. E. Wannamaker at Stirling.

Miss Helen Clements of Toronto spent the week-end with her parents Mr. and Mrs. Richard Clements.

A large crowd attended Mother's Day service on Sunday.

Mrs. Perry Sine has returned home from Belleville.

Picton

Picton, May 10.—The lovely flowers on the altar of St. Mary Magdalene's Church on Mother's Day were in memory of Mrs. Fred Butford and were placed there by the family.

Mr. and Mrs. Archie Cole are settling in their new home on Paul street.

The friends regret the serious illness of Mrs. John Williams at her home. Her daughter, Mrs. Herman Harrison of Waupoos is with her.

The May meeting of the H. and S. Club was held in the Legion Rooms on Thursday evening May 5. With the president, Mrs. Ern Ward in the chair. The meeting opened with community singing with Mrs. Clair Wallers at the piano. Prayer, minutes of the last meeting and the treasurer's report were then given. Mrs. Ward read a report of a recent club council meeting in Toronto, that reported the members of H. and S. Clubs in Toronto alone. As the balance in the treasury was only $27.41, it was decided to hold a food sale later in the month. A piano duet by Mrs. Ward and Miss Doris Lloyd was greatly enjoyed. Roll call by Mrs. Bowen answered by members of the Picton Club. The April Reading Circle, under the leadership of Mrs. Gordon Walmsley reported most interestingly on their study of the book "Management of Young Children" by Dr. Louise Bates. Mrs. G. Cannon read a splendid review of the book written by Mrs. Walmsley. Mrs. W. S. Lane dealt with chapter one, "Authority in the Modern Home", showing that fixed rules can no longer be used, but the parent must act as a guide. Chapter two, "Discipline and Freedom" was reviewed by Mrs. C. Ruttan who pointed out that freedom with discipline was the aim of parenting.

Chapter three, "Nature of Control" was given in Mrs. Walmsley's paper which pointed out that responsibility on the child usually solves the difficulty. Individual problems of each child was advised. Mrs. Skillicorn dealt with the "Brown Sugar Problem" in which Bowen gave the remedy. Mrs. H. Carter discussed many problems that arise in a home concerning child management. Mrs. G. Colgrove and Mrs. H. Knapman also gave splendid papers, reviewing parts of the study book. The National Anthem closed the meeting.

Mrs. Howard Hogle spent a few days last week in Toronto.

The scenic highway to Glenora was thronged with cars on Sunday. Many visited Lake on the Mountain while others took advantage of the free ferry across, and continued their trip on the other side of the bay, where the scenery along the water at this season is very lovely.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

(Copyright, 1937, King Features Syndicate, Inc.)
Famous Authority on Problems of Love and Marriage.

An Unacknowledged Valentine

Dear Miss Fairfax: @

If I had consulted my own pleasure, I would have sent her something very handsome as a valentine because I am really desperately in love with this girl. She comes to the store where I am employed two or three times a week and is very polite when I wait on her, but our acquaintance has never progressed beyond this point.

I didn't dare send her a Valentine, but I did send her a very lovely card, which set me back $1.00, and on the card I wrote a little sentiment about my pleasure in waiting on her, and said I hoped to wait on her for life. I signed my name, which she knew perfectly well, and I waited. The next time she came into the store she read my card, but never referred to the card. I thought she seemed a little distant.

Doubtful

Don't you think it would be well not to send this young lady any more expensive cards till she puts your acquaintance on a little more personal footing. I think you will know better before long if you dare try to rush things. The sentiment expressed on your card comes pretty close to a proposal.

Wife Irked by "Always Right" Husband

Dear Miss Fairfax:

Whenever I say anything while anyone is around my husband immediately insists that what I've said is wrong, and then hands out his version. If I would stick to my point, he would argue forever. Now this weakness is one of his, but it has happened so many times that it's nerve-racking and makes me appear either a fool or as a moron. If I'm wrong, I'd be glad to admit it. My husband is never wrong about anything, and will argue till everyone in the room will scream. Strangers can escape, but I'm married to him.

Puzzled

The trouble with persons of your husband's type is that they are unconscious of the mental weakness upon which makes them insist things "unimportant if true".

An extreme case of this lack of mental stability is mentioned in the biography of a very famous woman. Her father belong to the "Mark, right" type. On one occasion his wife said something about his being Saturday morning. The husband insisted it was Sunday morning, drove the children to church, sat in the empty church for the usual duration of the service, and swore the minister and the congregation had been wrong about the day of the week.

It must be maddening to have to put up with a person of this type, and, knowing of taking him seriously, why not try a little good-natured razzing.

He Got in With the Wrong Crowd

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I used to know a boy, and always liked him very much. He got in with the wrong crowd when very young, and developed a habit of drinking fast. He is a decent sort of boy and sometimes gets a job, but never keeps them. I'd like to get him back. If only as a friend, but I think my mother has inclined to think we are better than he is, and imagines my interest in him is going to be that of a mother.

My mother is very careful of my friends, as I am the only girl. I have a very lovely mother; she lets me bring all my friends to the house, so you see he has the wrong impression of her. We both have high ideals, and I would like him to be a friend at least. Should I write to him and tell this matter of friendship, as I see mine occasionally round about.

Dixie

You are more than fortunate in my dear, in having such a mother, and I wish more were like that. They all should be. I don't see that daughters' friends well. If you are allowed to bring them home and on, I can't see why any special offer of friendship is necessary. That seems to be understood.

You might say casually somewhere, "Oh, Or. I'm so interested of Mother; she really likes you".

GOOD MANNERS

By MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

(Copyright, 1937, King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

Helping the Hostess

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1—When a lady invites a few friends to dinner and dancing in order to celebrate some occasion, would it be the correct thing for the hostess to give her enough money in order to take care of the ball? Personally, I dislike the idea very much, although it would look tactless for one of the ladies at the table to pay the waiter. If you have any suggestions to make, I certainly would appreciate them.

2—When introducing two women to a gentleman is it correct to say, "Mrs Smith, Mr. Jones." then "Mrs. Johnson, Mr. Jones"? Should the man's name be mentioned each time?

3—When having guests to dinner, is it all right to serve a fruit cocktail with just a salad plate underneath. instead of including a service plate too?

M.

I wish you had explained why you do not like the idea of having the hostess ask a man guest whom she knows will call to take care of the restaurant check. I have seen this done many times by hostesses who were either unmarried women or widows, and it has seemed to me to be a simple and graceful solution of the problem. Certainly it is less awkward than having one of the women guests given this responsibility. . . . this should definitely be considered.

The very best way, of course, is for the hostess to consult with the restaurant management before the party and establish either a charge account or a temporary arrangement for this one occasion. A restaurant management will usually be glad to do this, and will, if requested, add to the bill the fees for the waiters, the per cent suggested by the hostess.

2—Yes, it is very and more gracious to mention the man's name each time. If you wish to avoid the repetition on introduction, you may say, "Mrs. Smith, may I present Mr. Jones . . . and Mrs. Johnson, Mr. Jones".

3—As an informal dinner you may serve the salad plate beneath the under-plate of the fruit cocktail glass. Or, it is a question of not having service plates, you may correctly use a dinner plate.

Seats at Table

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Can you please help me out on seating arrangements at a dinner party? Suppose, for instance, I have seven Sunday guests of guests at a dinner party. I presume the hostess sits at the head of the table so that the woman honored guest would be served first?

S.

1—Yes, this is correct. . . . the woman guest of honor at the right of the host, the man guest of honor at the right of the hostess.

2—No, the best form of service is for the woman guest of honor to be served first.

3—The hostess sits at the head of the table, and for her place she chooses the end of the table which she considers most convenient for directing the service . . . . usually the seat facing the serving entrance.

4—The host sits opposite the hostess at the foot of the table. In the convenience of the service . . . the woman guest of honor to be served first . . . there is no difference.

Entertain for Bride-Elect

Picton, (Special)— One hundred friends from Toronto, Cornwall, Kingston, Belleville, Trenton and Picton were guests of Mr. and Mrs. Alex. Lipson, King Street on Sunday evening, May 8th. Mr. and Mrs. Lipson entertained at a beautifully arranged miscellaneous shower in honor of the approaching marriage of their niece, Miss Edith Katz of Toronto, and Mr. Allan Diamond of Belleville.

The guests were received by Mrs. Lipson wearing a black crepe gown trimmed with silver, and silver slippers.

Miss Katz wore a wine taffeta frock with green slippers, and flowers in her hair.

Little Miss Barbara Lipson admitted the guests, wearing a long green frock of pink taffeta trimmed with rosebuds.

The spacious drawing room was effectively decorated with jabapor, goldenrod and daffodils. The guest of honor received a big cardboard bell filled with flowers and showered by Misses Barbara Lipson and Joyce Spencer of Belleville. Bridge was played at fifteen tables in the sunroom.

At twelve a buffet supper was served. The dining-room table was covered with a lace cloth, with a centre piece, topped by a miniature bride and groom. It was decorated with daffodils and yellow candles in silver sticks.

Assisting in serving were Misses Rose Yanover and Mary Katz and Mrs. A. Katz of Picton and Mrs. Irvine Cooper; Mrs. Gertzel; Mrs. Harry Yanover and Mrs. Ben Herman of Belleville.

After supper the bride-to-be was seated in a gaily decorated chair and assisted by Mr. Sam Kroch of Belleville, opened the many beautiful gifts. These consisted of cheques, pieces of furniture, silver, china, crystal and linen as well as taffeta comforters and satin spreads. Miss Katz expressed her deep appreciation for the lovely gifts. Mr. Lipson and Mrs. Lipson each made short addresses, and the guests departed after spending a very happy evening.

4th Sidney

Fourth of Sidney, May 10.—Quite a number attended Mother's Day service at the supplemented on Sunday morning.

Mrs. C. Vermilyea and daughters spent Tuesday of last week in Toronto.

Miss Reta Woods spent the week-end with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. G. Woods.

Arbor Day was observed by the school children. After assembling at the school they journeyed to the woods on the Hatchery Side, Mrs. Ingold and enjoyed picking flowers.

Mr. and Mrs. D. Pound and son Ross, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Langabaugh and children, Mrs. Mrs. Lafford, Mrs. S. Phillips and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. S. Phillips and daughter were Sunday guests of Mr. and Mrs. P. Harris.

Miss Margaret Johnston has completed her work at Kingston University and is home for the summer.

Master Ralph Hannah spent last week with his grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. J. Hannah.

The farmers are still busy putting in their spring seed and the recent showers are making the grass and fall wheat grow.

TODAY'S GARDEN-GRAPH

By DEAN HALLIDAY

Released by Central Press Association

SPRING IS THE best time to take cuttings from your delphiniums, for at this time they root most vigorous. Only take cuttings from healthy stock, for if the plants are diseased or infected in the way the results will be disappointing.

Each cutting should have a piece of the crown attached to it, as shown in this Garden-Graph. Take cuttings which are from three to six inches long and remove the opened leaves.

Plant the cuttings in a flat or frame outdoors and use clean, sharp, slightly acid sand. The cuttings will require shading at first from direct sunlight. As the roots begin to form, however, more sunlight can gradually be allowed until they finally are growing in full sun.

In about a month's time the cuttings will have rooted, and they can then be transplanted into small flower pots and later set out in the garden.

* * *

Dormant, cold storage lily bulbs or pot grown plants of certain kinds may be secured and planted outdoors. A warm, sunny and well fertilized soil should be chosen for the first plantings of gladiolus corms or any of the summer bulbs. Violas, pansies and English daisies may be set out in the borders, provided soil and weather conditions are favorable.

Farewell Party For Popular Residents

Mr. and Mrs. Lee Ketcheson, who left today to take up residence in Kingston were honored last night by neighbors, and by members of St. Andrew's Church at a gathering held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. George Bonisteel, Highland Avenue.

About fifty were present and spent a delightful evening. Mr. Waddell presented Mrs. Ketcheson with an electric iron, and Mr. Ketcheson with a pipe and cigars, on behalf of the neighbors. He spoke of the long years of friendship and the loss the neighborhood would suffer in the departure of Mr. and Mrs. Ketcheson.

Representatives of the W.M.S. and St. Andrew's Guild were present and on their behalf, Mrs. J. Boyd, treasurer of the Guild, presented Mrs. Ketcheson with a purse of money. Mrs. Boyd expressed the regret all felt at Mrs. Ketcheson's leaving. She was a true worker in the different departments of the church and would be keenly missed. Her friends were glad however, that she was going to Kingston to be with her family. The good wishes and friendship of her neighbors would follow her wherever she went and they would welcome her return any time.

Mr. W. J. Walker also spoke, referring to Mrs. Ketcheson's activities in the church and extended regrets at her departure.

Mrs. Ketcheson, who was greatly taken by surprise, spoke in feeling terms in appreciation of the kindly remembrance and kindly sentiment of her friends and associates.

A very enjoyable time was then brought to a close with dainty refreshments.

SHANNONVILLE W. M. S.

The monthly meeting of the W. M. S. of the Union Church, of Shannonville, was held at the home of Mrs. Charles Boulstridge on Thursday afternoon, May 5th, with Mrs. Percy MacFarlane, group leader in charge. Scripture lesson, using hymn all repeated the Lord's Prayer. The Scripture lesson was read by Mrs. C. Boulstridge. The devotional leaflet, "Christ Church World Peace," was taken by Miss Ina Liddle assisted by Miss Florence Perry. Several of the ladies asked questions on this subject which were answered by the leaders.

Prayer was offered by Mrs. Perry and minutes were called by the secretary and brought forth a good report. Current events during the word "Mother." Minutes of the Trumbler conference read by the secretary and adopted. The president, Mrs. Everett Stratton, read a letter from Mrs. Wilfrid Smith, of the Mispah benediction. Collection was $3.20 and the hour for next meeting. The hostess and assistants served a delicious lunch and a social half hour was enjoyed together.

Trim Eyebrows Carefully

EYEBROWS SHOULD be considered when modeling the eyebrows. Heavy, thick lids call for a normally-outlined eyebrow. If the lids are thin have a way of tucking themselves out of sight like a window shade, the little furrows should be weeded on the under side so that the lids look higher. Reflect will be glorifying to the soul windows.

For round, full eyes, create the arched brow with both ends drooping but don't curtail it with either terminal. A careful shoulder be curved to match the eyes. When eyes have a serious, studious appearance, tweeze from the upper line so as to lower the eyebrows slightly. By deforesting the growth from the under side, there appears an expression of astonishment that does not spill the face of the heavy lids. It belongs to the baby doll who would be strictly modern.

The eyebrow that lifts upward at the inner end and sweeps down like the wing of a bird-in flight gives piquancy to a young face, character to one that is not so young. To the there is the somber slanting, mysterious eyebrow which belongs to the exotic lady who dislikes the Paris colors and wears robes that are figure-tight and of lovely lines.

When the facial surface is rough, it is desirable to foundation a skin pressentable make-up effects without a foundation cosmetic. These toiletries come in liquid and cream form. They must be frictioned into the skin with the fingertips.

Their purpose is to produce a shading that will make powder stick to one like a friend and a brother. They come in various tints, and it is desirable to use a foundation to enclose a tint of deeper shade. Delicacy is imperative but it need not be strenuous.

For those crisp summer frocks you are planning to get, you will need new nail veneers. The newest colors among them are grape shades. It's exciting to get away from the vivid reds, to paint talons with colors that are easier on the eye. Wistaria is a new hue, so is red banana. Nasturtium had a big following last season; it will come back when hands get tossed in the sun.

Screen Stars Tell of Beauty Secrets Which Are Helpful to All Women

By JULIET SHELBY

Central Press Writer on Beauty

WALTER WINCHELL in a recent article debunked a popular fallacy: "Actresses are more beautiful than the average woman. (They merely spend more time beautifying themselves.)"

Perhaps that's right as far as it goes; though it would be a great idea to do a column on some of the beauty secrets of our modern beauty aids! They could make a million dollars, so their secrets should be good.

Katharine Hepburn pushes back the cuticle of her nails with a softening cream every night. She forgets to do it. She says that this method of nail care performs a two-fold service: it is relaxing and soothing to the nerves to massage the fingertips.

Irene Dunne suggests this remedy for that pain in the back that comes from a stiff neck from a strenuous day, whether it is rehearsing, riding, or playing with your head high, as though you were trying to keep a violin playing three or four rows ahead of you. Then pivot your head around as far as it will go in big circles. This is worth mastering because you can relax with it any time of the day, no matter where you happen to be.

Irene Dunne
Gives remedy for nerve pain

Ann Sheridan tells of a simple way to keep the eyebrows trimmed and shaped. Comb them upward with a clean mascara brush, then trim off the hairs that extend beyond the natural line.

Joan Crawford, living in the midst of the feet that get best attention and having a pedicure regularly, You can give them to yourself at home, or have professional treatments. She advises using a cuticle remover, and applying cuticle oil freely. She likes her toenails filed slightly rounded.

To make your hair seem lighter, Lucille Ball uses a rinse of the darker mahogy, a powder that is slightly darker than your own skin tone.

The length of the fingernails should be decided by a person's occupation, declares Lily Pons. If you are a working girl, a typist, or do anything where the fingers are constantly used, your nails should be fairly short. "Leave the long nails to the girls whose hands are generally idle or not in use," suggests the coloratura.

According to Joan Fontaine the best assurance for a healthy-looking skin is a thorough morning and night. If you feel you must use a cleaning cream, she advises it after the washing.

FISHERMAN PASTOR

Rev. Lawrence Larrowe, Methodist minister of Springfield, Vt., has considerable success from his sessions when he hired a supply preacher to take his pulpit while he went fishing. A meeting of the trustees of the church was called and approval was given to the Rev. Larrowe's Sunday fishing by a vote of 37-1. Now service is being held early on Sunday so the congregation, as well as the minister, can go fishing.

U.S.-CANADA BRIDGE SYSTEM TO BE OPENED THIS SUMMER

Claimed to be the shortest overwater international bridge in the world this bridge, TOP, crosses International Park, a 90-foot span between Canada and the United States. It is one of the five spans of the Thousand Islands International Bridge system, crossing the St. Lawrence river between Collins Landing, N.Y., and Ivy Lea, Ont. A workman is shown BOTTOM, tying cable strand to anchorage on one of the five spans which are now being built. President Roosevelt has been invited to officially open the bridge system on August 11.

HEAVENS PREPARING FOR TWO SPECTACULAR SHOWS THIS MONTH

Diagram shows the moon throwing a cone-shaped shadow on the earth during a total eclipse.

Grandest spectacle the sky can offer is an eclipse. There will be two of them, a lunar and a solar eclipse in May. The total lunar eclipse is scheduled for May 14, the solar May 28. The beginning of the lunar eclipse will be visible from North America generally, but the ending only from central and western parts. The solar eclipse will be seen only by a few in the southern hemisphere. During a lunar eclipse the moon enters the earth's shadow. During a solar eclipse the moon passes between the sun and the earth.

BOSTON FOURTH

St. Louis Candinals Coming Fast With Medwick in Hero Role

(By Hugh S. Fullerton, Jr.)
(Associated Press Sports Writer)

One of the most interesting angles in the American League scramble this season, regardless of its outcome, is likely to be the race between the teams owned by the man who tried to buy a pennant and failed and that owned by the "Old Fox" who doesn't spend much cash but gets some good ball players by trading.

Tom Yawkey's gold-plated Boston Red Sox appear all set to produce a real return on the Club owner's big investment, but to get to the world championship the New York Yankees and the highly-vaited Cleveland Indians, but also Clark Griffith's Indestructible Washington Senators, current leaders of the pennant parade.

Senators in Front

Washington took over the lead yesterday by whipping St. Louis Browns 7-1 while Boston gave a demonstration of strength by batting over Cleveland 15-3 and knocking the Indians off top. As the other American League Clubs were rained out, Cleveland and the Yankees remained in a second place tie a half-game behind the Senators with the Red Sockers and other game back.

It was a bargain counter pitcher, Emil (Dutch) Leonard who sent the Senators to the top. Picked up from Atlanta this season after one major league failure, the 30-year-old knuckle ball expert has won three of his five starts. He allowed only seven singles yesterday and drove in three tallies himself with a triple and single.

Go to Town For Rugby

The Red Sox, who have been getting along well on the excellent pitching of the veteran Lefty Grove and John (Foozie) Marcum, really came to town for young Jim Bagby yesterday when the Rookie faced his Dad's old Club for the first time. Young Jim pitched six-hit ball, although he passed seven, to get his second victory. Behind him the Sox added 11 blows to a dozen walks off three Cleveland flingers.

The "comeback" of St. Louis' Cardinals again featured the National League's season as rain eliminated the second Giants-Cubs clash. The Cards, who have won five and tied one of their last seven games and have climbed from seventh place to fifth, belted over Brooklyn Dodgers 9-7. Joe Medwick's big bat, knifed the helpers of a 30-hit game when he came up with a triple with two aboard and the score tied in the eighth. It was his fourth hit of the game.

Red Keep Pace

The fourth-place Cincinnati Reds kept pace with the Cards by pounding out a 9-4 decision over the Phillies as Ray Davis's steady hit hurling made up for the fact that his teammates left 13 men stranded on the sacks. Boston Bees, who had lost two straight before yesterday's game, came back with one in the tenth. They beat Pittsburgh's Pirates 7-6 when Debs Garms scored for a pinch single with two out and the bases full.

MONTREALROYALS ARE ON WARPATH

Defeat Jersey City And Win Third Game in a Row

By the Associated Press

Montreal Royals, who have been kicking around in the International League's lower depths almost since the start of the season, are on the warpath and it's pretty hard on Jersey City Giants.

The Royals drove a big factor in the International's only real battle to-date for undisputed places until they reached Montreal. The Royals made it three straight yesterday in the League's only game when Gus Dugas held the Jersey to the ninth with a home run for the defeat dropped Travis Jackson's belongings in the cellar with an even split in 20 games.

The Giants are fourth in the standing while the Royals are sixth and have their longest winning streak of the season, three straight, to talk about.

Although he allowed 12 hits, Ed Chapman scored his first victory of the year for the Royals. His teammates drove Rollie Stiles from the mound with a three run attack in the first. Mike Radon, who relieved him, was charged with the defeat.

Tom Winsett, the Jersey's new outfielder, struck the most telling blow in their cause, a triple, and drove in two runs.

Newark's game at Toronto and Syracuse's at Rochester were postponed because of rain. The game scheduled between Baltimore and Buffalo was played as part of Sunday's doubleheader at Buffalo.

Yesterday's Stars.

By the Associated Press

Ducky Medwick, Cardinals—His triple drove in winning runs in 9-7 defeat of Dodgers; also clouted four hits and two singles.

Dutch Leonard, Senators—Held Browns to seven hits, all singles, and batted in three runs with triple and single in beating Browns 7-1.

Jimmy Foxx, Red Sox—Belted two home runs to drive in five runs and lead 13-3 slaughter of Indians.

Peachy Davis, Reds—Shut out Phils for seven of nine innings and gave up seven hits as mates pounded out 9-4 decision.

Four Teams Will Compose Bay of Quinte League

Schedule Accepted And Playoff Series Arranged

UMPIRE FEES SET

With four clubs in the fold the Bay of Quinte Baseball League adopted its 1938 schedule, that opened with the R.C.A.F. "Flyers" at Belleville on May 24th, a morning fixture, and Napanee at Picton in the afternoon of the same day when the league executive met at the Y.M.C.A. last evening.

Entrance fees were accepted and each O.B.A. certificate afforded each club. An application from the Canadian Locomotive Company A.C. of Kingston for affiliation into the league was refused, as the clubs composing the loop felt their league was too compact to include a Kingston club this year.

In the matter of league play-offs it was decided to have the second and third clubs meet-in a best two in three series, with the ultimate second placed club passing the choice of grounds for the first and possible third games. The winner of this semi-final round will then meet the first place club which shall have the same play-off rights, namely the choice of the first and possibly third game.

The matter of umpires brought some discussion with the league adopting the home and home system with a maximum fee of $4.00 per umpire, the clubs to transport and pay all expenses of umpires, however.

Squadron Leader T. A. Lawrence of the R.C.A.F. entry announced the "Flyers" would play their home games in Belleville and make the local Exhibition Park their home grounds for the season. The league will meet to pass playing certificates at a subsequent date.

With President K. J. Colling in the chair the league executive sat with the following represented: Napanee, G. E. Gibbard, W. Geroy; Picton, Mayor McGibbon, Tom Church and H. Doyle; Belleville, G. Clapp and I. McDougall; R.C.A.F. Squadron Leader T. A. Lawrence.

Dave Castillour is Featherweight Champ

Montreal, May 10.—(CP)—Dave Castillour, Toronto Provincial-Canadian fighter, today wore the Canadian featherweight boxing crown, wrested from Jackie Culhurs of Hamilton, Ont., by unanimous decision of the judges after ten rounds of wearing battle.

Culhurs was shorn of the championship he won from Montreal's Frankie Martin at Toronto last year after carrying the fight to Castillour for all but two rounds last night.

Outweighed by 13½ 1-4 pounds to 122 1-2, Culhurs showed superior speed, but Castillour gave him few opportunities to land a clean punch.

Sports Roundup

(By Eddie Brietz)

New York, May 10.—(AP)—Max Schmeling looks great. . . . Joe McCarthy doesn't appear on the ball field an overake of a dozen times a year, yet always directs the Yankees from the bench clad in golf clothes. . . . That was St. Louis fans gave Leo Durocher was the third such gift Leo has received from his fans. . . . The first Eddie Neil Golf tournament, in memory of the late sports writer, will be played Sunday at Barney Ross' Ferndale training camp. . . . Only four of the 22 race pickers we followed Saturday picked Lawrin in the first three; only one put him in front. . . . Prof. Paul Mickelson picked Lawrin . . . Has there been a Gehringer who was as great, too finish beauty so slip?

He admits he's a better boxer than he was ten years ago. . . Max Schmeling has made 19 trips across the Atlantic via the Hindenburg; since he first began to walk the decks . . . Larry Mac Phail is quoted in a western paper as saying this year's Dodgers will finish fourth.

Joe Dimaggio told a reporter he could "chop" enough base hits to win the American League championship but the fans like home runs and "I like 'em, too. When you get that big one coming along with all you've got," he said.

New York scribes with the Giants in Chicago say a strongly outfielding Dizzy Dean is greeting visitors to the Cub bench in their dugout. . . . Larry Mac and Glen Lee puts Ceferino Garcia right back in the fistic spotlight now. . . . Hard to see how Barney Ross can dodge him if Barney beats Henry Armstrong.

You've been seeing plenty of The Great Man, Jerome Herman Dean, in the public prints of late but here's something a little different. . . . a sort of Dizzy from a medical viewpoint. Did is shown as he appeared when "foggin' one through" and the diagram shows the muscle that takes the strain, the deltoid, as it is called in the medical profession. This is the part of the Dean anatomy that is causing such a ruckus at the moment. After being sold to the Cubs by Rickey and Co. for $185,000 and three players, Diz is now out of the game with the deltoid trouble mentioned.

JUNIOR LEAGUE WILL OPERATE WITH 3 TEAMS

Albert Grinrod of Picton Elected President of Loop

OPENS ON MAY 24

Home Umpires to be Used With Home Club Supplying Umpire-in-Chief

A new baseball league came into being at the Y.M.C.A. last evening when the Bay of Quinte Junior Baseball League, supplanting the old Hastings County Junior League was formed and embracing Belleville Kiwanis 1937, Junior O.B.A. semi-finalist, Napanee Juniors and Picton.

The election of officers for the new loop resulted as follows—

President—Albert Grinrod, Picton.
Vice-President—O. Ellis, Napanee.

Secretary-Treasurer—Jack McVeigh, Belleville.

The Belleville and Picton entries are sponsored by the Kiwanis Clubs of those respective communities, while the Napanee entry is to be subsidized by the Napanee Gibbards.

The matter of the League schedule was left in the hands of G. E. Gibbard, O.B.A. executive member, who was present, although the opening dates were announced with the Belleville Kiwanis Juniors visiting Picton Ontario Junior champions, prying off the season's list at Napanee on May 24th. The Belleville entry asked for all twilight games for home fixtures.

In the matter of umpires the conventional home and home system of umpiring was adopted, that the visiting club supplying the umpire-in-chief and the home club the base umpire. The league schedule will be released at a later date.

Schmeling Sure He Can Drop Louis In Bout on June 22

New York, May 10.—(AP)—There isn't a doubt in Max Schmeling's mind that he will be able to avat champion Joe Louis on the jaw with his right hand on the night of June 22, no matter how much the young negro has learned in the two years since Max last climbed into the ring.

"Yah, I know what some people think," said Max, when he arrived here from Germany yesterday. "They say Joe will be careful this time. That's nothing. I'll just be with his left and not let me hit him with a punch.

"That's foolish, I think. I hit him the other time when he tried to jab, and I knocked him out. No, no, he was not always hooking with his left when I hit him. Sometimes it was a jab, too."

But what, Max was asked, would happen if Louis should prove super-cautious and try to lay back and box? "Then he'd championship behind a long, darling left? Might not the experts awaited with devotee into something very boring?

"No, that will not happen, believe he," said the Schmeling. "I want to win the championship, so I will open him up. For 15 round he cannot keep away from me. He must fight some time, and when he does I will hit him with that. No inspected his right fist briefly.

Max had, going on 33, is a remarkable physical specimen. He looks better than he did when he fought Harry Thomas here the past winter.

Louis on the Move

Stevensville, Mich., May 10.—(AP)—This village, on the shore of Lake Michigan, has seen the last of Joe Louis, his most famous visitor, until after his battle with Max Schmeling in defence of the world heavyweight championship June 22. York June 22. Today was moving day for the negro champion.

In a white framed house, third from the last on the highway leading into the town, Louis packed his grip sacks to leave for Lafayette, Ind., and then the Catskill Mountains, to begin his six-week training siege for that encore with Max Schmeling.

Louis was happy over the opportunity to fight again.

Getting even with Schmeling is the Paramount thought in Louis' mind.

"Smellin'-is in for a good slammin' himself, if you are asking me," Louis said "hell meet a different Joe Louis when he turns around to face me this time I'm hitting harder I think I am punching faster, and I plan to beat him to the punch."

GLACE BAY CAGERS WIN

Glace Bay, N.S., May 10. — (CP)—Glace Bay crusaders overcame a last-period deficit that faced them at halftime and went on to defeat Hamilton Y.M.C.A. Sonnie Peck's 24-29 last night in the first game of the Canadian Intermediate Basketball finals.

Second and final game of the total-score series will be played here tonight.

SENSATION!

That's Bob Seeds, outfielder for Newark Bears in the International League. In the May 6 game against Buffalo he went to the plate six times and banged out four home runs and singles to bat in twelve counters! The very next day he strode to the plate against the same team and sent three more balls over the fence, knocking in five more runs.

Old Jupiter Pluvius failed to dampen the aspirations of the first intermediate baseball practice last evening at the Fair Grounds, although the infield was quite damp and was not shilled, the players merrily tossing the ball areflind to take the kinks out of their arms and limber up. Alex. Weir, who was engaged to coach the squad for the time being, and Sonny Green put a few to the fielders, who in turn gallowed around dragging flies in mid-season form. Only two hurlers put in an appearance last night, however, Keith "Lefty" Weeks elongated lefthander who is stepping up from the junior ranks, and Phil Lott. The intermediates work out again on Wednesday night while "Stub" Barrett's Juniors practice tonight.

Several business men of the old guard of baseball in Belleville rallied around the standard after wednesday last night's practice when 18 answered the baitial call and many are expected out on Wednesday night. Incidentally Lorne McDougall, who is also President of the Y. M. C. A. here was inducted to act as the club secretary-treasurer and we have of no better man locally to fill the position. The Belleville intermediates will have a full list of officers, a board of directors with Parks Commissioner Clarence Clapp as chairman, will look after the financial end of the club, that was entered in the Bay of Quinte last night. Burt Fanning will continue as manager, here ever.

One of the first suggestions of the new Bruce Trail Association is the introduction of a professional club in the limits at some future date. Under the new O.B.A. regulations amateur clubs may participate in ball games with any professional club, providing the income is played for a charitable purpose; thus Belleville can engage in a game versus the House of David or the Harlem Globe Trotters, if the game can be arranged. The Bay of Quinte League is also in such arrangements the fans would not only be afforded the efforts of the pros, but the local players would also benefit by participating against the better cast of players. The Bay of Quinte schedule was adopted last night, and we find the R.C.A.F. "Flyers" plying off the season's bill on May 24th versus the locals at the Fair Grounds in a morning fixture. Plans for a gala opening day are taken with, a band and all the colorful surroundings that are attached under way.

Hats off and archlds to Squadron Leader Tommy Lawrence of the R.C.A.F. "Flyers" and the Flyers' Sports Club did not feel inclined to sponsor baseball at this particular time, but have set to produce the game with interest and at the forefront for the coming season. Mr. Lawrence broke the sad news to the Bay of Quinte League officials last night and a gloom rattled over their features. . . . Then Tommy Lawrence, with a few concessions, agreed to enter a team if for which all of the remaining clubs are most grateful. Frankly we fear for the Bay of Quinte League will some day become one of the most important leagues in sport in the province and that day is Frankly we fear for the Bay of Quinte League will some day become one of the most important leagues in sport in the province and that day is not far distant. The loop is compact and is composed of good baseball centres—Picton, Napanee and Belleville with the R.C.A.F. making their debut this year. In years to come, however, we feel the league will be a powerful asset to baseball in the east.

This item comes from Kingston: "It has been announced that Bob Elliot will replace Joe Daly as coach of the Ponies but that does not mean the veteran pilot has dropped out and will not be around when season starts. Bob Elliott is actually the new boss but, like a retired warrior, Joe is on hand to help if needed. Joe retired on previous occasions but he always came back. This time he claims he has had enough ball, but there is a twinkle in his old eyes when he makes the statement which probably indicates he'll be fighting just as hard for the Ponies even if he is not the head boss now, and the club will get the benefit of his many years experience. The color that Daly instilled in the Ponies was appreciated by treasurers in rival parks who admit that Kingston is the best attraction in the circuit. Fans went to games to lesse Joe in a manager as much as to see the home team. Joe may be just a manager but he will not be forgotten for a long time."

Do you remember when Dez Moines twerelfth gave a beaming welcome to Bob Feller, young Cleveland Indian pitching sensation, as he return to receive his high school diploma one year ago today. . . . Dan Van Meter, farm boy who led Dizzy Dean's major league strikeout record of in 1936, dispelled rumors of no sling arm this year when he opened the season with a one-hit effort.

Hodge Podge—Gayle Talbot, sports writer deluxe, says Max Schmeling was looking better than ever when he stepped off the Bremen last week, despite his 32 years. Schmeling claims he just he'd lug the title back to Germany for keeps, if he won it.... What did Talbot expect, an answer to such a question?.... Maxie is to get 20 to 40 percent guaranteed the Champion and we understand the pre-sale of tickets is surprisingly good.... The Red Sox scalped the Indians yesterday, knocking 'em off their A.L. perch and into second place.... DiMaggio and Col. Rupert are reported "like dad" once again ....all is forgiven.....Latest report, Max Schmeling has developed a new punch, well Joe Louis appparently has something concealed in his glove that has few fights also; ask his opponents.

DANGER IN THE MIST

CHAPTER 16

Judy Finds the Revolver

Almost I turned back; but the thought of being a "freak softy" kept me going. Into the butler's pantry and on through the dining-room—across the hall to the library.

They were open hook-cases, and on some shelves I could run my hand along the back without removing any books. I worked fast—one shelf after another, but I found only a lot of dust.

I had reached the middle section and a queer sort of feeling came over me—"Ah—it's here! In a minute you are going to find revolver!" And, sure enough—there behind the stately row of "Standard's Lectures" was a small revolver. I took it out and softly replaced the books.

As I turned away, my flash-light swept for a moment across the window. There—peering in at me—was a face!

A hideous face—with bright eyes and bearded chin and lips drawn back showing the teeth!

How I ever got across that room to the hall! And there—at the foot of the stairs, something reached out and caught me by the arm.

I dropped my flash—I suppose I screamed—I have no recollection of what I did do—except that I held on to the revolver!

Then—the light in the hall flashed on and there—holding me tightly by the wrist was—Detective Parker

"Ah—beat me to it, didn't you?" he cried loudly "I was about to take advantage of the sheriff's hint. Say—hand that over. Don't you know enough to know there are finger-prints?" He whipped out his handkerchief, and folding it about the weapon, took it from me.

"What's all this? What big happened, now?" Miss Lydia appeared on the stairs and close behind her —Norma Caldwell.

The detective looked up. "Come down, Miss Lydia. Your maid has found the revolver which was used last night."

"Where did she find it?" cried Miss Lydia. "Judy—why were you rummaging it in the middle of the night, or—or—?"

"The sheriff asked me to look for it, Miss Lydia. He thought it might be behind the books in the library, and I didn't get a chance to look there today, - so I came down tonight—"

"Either of you even seen this before?" Parker held out the revolver on the white handkerchief.

Miss Lydia came down the stairs and peered curiously. She shook her head. "All these things look alike to me."

"How about you, Miss Caldwell? Ever see a gun like this any place about the house?"

She stayed half-way up the stairs. "No," but her voice was very faint.

"There was a revolver," said Miss Lydia. "Elliot brought one back when he was in Boston early in the summer. I think it ought to be over here in the house. Do you know where he kept it, Norma?"

"Yes—he kept it in the drawer in the little table beside his bed."

"Please look. It's there now—do I will look." Parker was bounding up the stairs, but Mrs. Caldwell got here and out to the banister.

"It isn't—I looked today, I thought—" her voice trailed off as she went back up the stairs.

"Where—did you know she—that?" Parker gave a decisive nod. "Now if you haven't destroyed all the finger-prints—" he glared at me.

I went out to the kitchen and on —up to my room. I certainly hated Judith Marsden at that moment. But if I hadn't found the revolver —Parker would, I sure hoped there wasn't one incriminating print left on the darn thing!

As I was opening my door a voice called—"That you, Judy? What's happened now?"

"Oh, Elsie—I found the revolver that was used to kill Barnes! And I just was coming back."

"Where did you find it?"

"Hidden behind some books on a shelf in the library. And it was a revolver kept in a table drawer in Mr. Caldwell's room. It makes the case thicker than ever for her."

"Humph—I'd be willing," but Elsie shuffled back into her room and closed the door without finishing the sentence.

I knew that I could never—never get to sleep—so use at all in going back to bed.

Of course Norma Caldwell wouldn't be sleeping, either. I had a sudden resolve. I would go to her —tell her every single thing I knew! And I'd tell her that—as far as her being guilty was concerned, the sheriff didn't believe it—nor Miss Lydia—nor anyone as all that counted.

I suppose I was sobbing under my breath, That face at the library window—and the detective's grabbing me—and that miserable old revolver!

I took up my flash-light again, and went through our hall, through the door and into the corridor of the main house. A faint light shone under Mrs. Caldwell's door, and I tapped softly on the panel.

After a moment she came to the door and called—"Who's there?" and then I whispered close to the crack—"Judy" she turned the key in the lock and let me in.

She had evidently been sitting by the window. Both of the beds were untouched, and I noticed that the drawer in the—little table beside Mr. A.—bed's was open.

She saw me glance. "Yes—wanted to make sure. It's not there."

"Oh, Mrs. Caldwell!" I cried. "I came to tell you that I'm sorry I found it, but I know you never used it."

She smiled. "Come over and sit down, Judy. I've wanted to talk with you ever since the sheriff took me of your loyalty, and also, since he told me who you really are."

My mouth fell open in amazement. "Told you—who I am?"

"Yes, Miss Judith Marsden. You see—none of us have any secrets from now on. But I called Judy for a very unusual maid, and—I do think you've a splendid sport and—just a darling!"

I nearly passed out with heppiness.

"Oh, Judy—I've wanted so to tell you—and I almost did that second day when I could trust a girl friend. Will you be mine?"

We sat down about the room and closed the windows, and then we took a long look across the bed and laid it on the floor by the door, then—reserving the key, and locked a bit of cotton in the hole.

"I guess you'll think I'm crazy, but there was something I wanted to say on about this house, and I've found it best to take precaution. Now, we'll talk as low as we can and trust to luck we won't be heard.

CHAPTER 17

Judy Makes a Discovery

"I am going to tell you everything, Judy, and perhaps you can help me. As it is, I'm all in a muddle and terribly frightened. I know Sheriff Williams believes me innocent of all that dreadful things, but it's almost as bad to be proven so, especially when I always can be in a position and know I can't tell him all I know." She drew a long sigh. "One can't blame Mr. Parker and the rest."

"He can't arrest you," I said, "not the sheriff won't."

"Sometimes, I wish they would do just that—for a little while. I'd tell you everything, and to make you understand I have to go back to the very first.

"My father died when I was sixteen, leaving only a small life insurance, went on through High School—specializing in book-keeping and typing—and right after graduation, I was fortunate in getting this position.

"We sat on fairly well for of course Mother could keep up the house and care for Ricky. I got a better position finally in the Caldwell-Merton Co. But that winter, Mother caught cold and it developed into pneumonia and she died in three days. About the last thing she said was to ask me to promise to always take care of Ricky and not let anything happen to him.

"Well, you can see how I was placed. It was just about impossible to leave Ricky alone all day in th apartment. He has been deaf since he was four years old. He adored Mother and would do anything for her. After she was buried—he seemed even, more clouded.

"I was at my wits' end. I got Mother's life insurance but when Ricky was awful, I was away, but I could not afford to pay her very much. Elliot Caldwell had been playing up to me ever since I went in the office, but — didn't like him and gave him no encouragement. I suspect that was but the thing that spurred him on. He became insistent and finally asked me to marry him. I held him off for weeks, but —Oh, I expect you despise me, Judy— but finally I did say yes—and so I scrambled, with the slip-shod plan that he was to marry Ricky, too.

"I think we might have been fairly happy if it hadn't been for Ricky. He's a boy all right—and the hated Ricky from the first. Perhaps he was jealous of a school pal outside Boston. I went to see him often, but he was dreadfully unhappy.

"I can't tell you how he hated Elliot from the very first. He loved the sea—the woods—everything! I did not have to worry about him at all. And he has been quite content to play at the school winters, with the prospect of coming down here in June.

TO BEGIN WORK FROM HARROLD TO MARMORA

Marmora—According to reliable reports the Dominion Construction Company received instructions from the Department of Highways in connection work on Highway No. 14 between Marmora and Harrold as soon as arrangements can be completed. Mr. Rostley, Mr. McGuinness, superintendent of construction work and Mr. Gibson, foreman, were in Marmora this week looking over the situation. Work from between Marmora and Stirling has been in very bad condition for some months and motorists will be glad to learn that work will soon be commenced. It is also important to learn that employment will be provided for a considerable number of men.

The open season for pickerel and bass fishing will start on May 14th. It will be legal to fish for perch or muskeda in Crowe Lake, Crowe River and Beaver Creek but any person fishing from a boat must have a fishing licence. It is illegal to use any artificial bait in the above waters. Trout fishing is closed in the Trent River system.

Mr. Ralph Campion of Peterborough spent Sunday with his parents Mr. and Mrs. Dan. Campion.

Mr. and Mrs. H. W. Hubbert and son Ralph and Mr. and Mrs. R. B. Campbell of Toronto spent the week end here.

Mrs. R. Chesterfield and son Harold of Belleville visited the former's mother, Mrs. S. Forestell over the week end.

Mr. Charles Brady who has been visiting his son Mr. and Mrs. James Brady, the past week has returned to Sudbury.

Mrs. J. McWilliams is spending a few days in Toronto this week.

Mr. Andrew N. Cavanagh of the Dominion Bank has been spending the week end at his home in Napanee.

Mrs. Gordon Burns of Peterborough spent Sunday at home here.

Miss Helen Rose of Peterborough spent the week end with relatives here.

When the guesses of the number of the congoleum rug to be given away at P. N. Marelli's store were examined on Saturday, the closing day of the contest, it was discovered that Mrs. Arthur Carman of Marmora Township and Mrs. Elizabeth Deacon of Marmora village had placed the same number on their coupons which chanced to be the closest number to the actual number. Therefore it was decided by these two ladies to decide the winners of the rug.

Mothers' Day services were conducted at St. Andrew's United and St. Paul's Anglican Churches on Sunday. At the latter service the choir led in the musical portion of the service morning and evening and rendered anthems. Rev. C. W. Hollingsworth delivered appropriate sermons. Flowers, the gift of Mr. S. Rowe adorned the pulpit and organ. At St. Paul's the morning service was attended by the Ladies' Guild. At the latter service the baby daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Hagerman of Toronto was baptized receiving the names of Margaret Elizabeth. At both services Rural Dean Fielding will start on May 14th. It will be legal to fish for perch or muskeda in Crowe Lake, Crowe River and Beaver Creek but any person fishing from a boat must have a fishing licence. It is illegal to use any artificial bait in the above waters. Trout fishing is closed in the Trent River system.

SCOTT'S SCRAP BOOK

By R. J. SCOTT

Little Benny's Note Book

In school today Miss Kitty told us about universal peace and how it is long an possible all the different countries had wars with each other, saying, When all the little children all over the world are taught that peace is noble and war is wicked, then and only then will universal peace be possible. You boys are the possible soldiers or the possible peace makers of the next generation, so you must understand that there is only one possible excuse to go to war. I wonder if anybody can tell me when that only possible excuse occurs, she said.

With Fuds Jenkins waved his hand, saying, When anybody says their country is better than and if it becomes your duty to protect your country and your home, and now we'll go on to arithmetic.

Wich we did feeling against it.

Jail Terms To Hit-Run Drivers Says P. M.

Toronto, May 9—(CP)—Declaring that he would impose prison sentences, and not fines, on hit and run drivers, Magistrate R. J. Browne in police court today sentenced John O'Rourke to 14 days in jail for failing to remain at the scene of an accident.

A car driven by Richard Harnden was struck on May 1 and the other car drove away. A bystander heard the crash and secured the licence number of the car that struck Harnden's automobile, as a result of which the accused was arrested near his home.

British Seamen Protest 'Deliberate' Air Attacks

London, May 9—(CP)—A protest against "deliberate" Insurgent air attacks on British ships in Spanish ports signed by the Captains of 12 British vessels, was received by the Foreign Office today.

The telegraphic message sent from the Spanish port of Valencia bore the signatures of the skippers of the freighters Stanhall, Greatwind, Starwood, Macgregor, Starcraft, Continental Coaster, Rajpal, Stangrove, Glenlyon, Stanleight, Corbie and Stanhope.

WALL STREET

New York May 10 (AP)—A morning rally quickly faded in today's stock market and early advances running to a point or more were reduced substantially or turned into losses near the final hour.

Opening prices were a shade higher, but the list soon gave ground before profit selling. A fast forward push was engineered subsequently and, for a brief period, the ticker tape was behind. There was little follow-through, however, and the lightening of commitments was resumed.

Transfers were about 1,100,000 shares.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, May 10 (CP)—Mining shares were feeling a lot better today and they posted gains of one or heavy suppliers. Noranda-Cockshutt and Hard Rock featured the golds and the gains in these details stood out in the action in their department. Noranda at 82½ was up 1½ to a new high for the year. Industrials and Western Oils were quieter but firm to strong in price. The turnover around 800,000 shares was the best of the month.

The close was a little under the day's high.

More than 40,000 shares of MacLeod-Cockshutt changed hands and the price touched $3.75 for a gain of about 20 cents and Hard Rock at $2.35 was up 9 cents. Other active traders at gains of 5 to 10 cents were O'Brien, McWatters, Kerr-Addison and Pershing.

Industrials tightened up moderately in the afternoon but action in the group continued slow. In the papers Abitibi Preferred was prominent with a rise of 1½ and small gains were boarded for Alsibli Common, Bathurst "A" and Consolidated Paper.

Livestock Quotations

Toronto, May 10—(CP)—Trading continued active on the cattle section of the Toronto livestock market today and prices were generally steady by early afternoon. Calves and sheep sold at previous levels and a few Ontario feed lot lambs brought steady prices. Indications were 10c hog quotes would settle steady. Cattle holdovers from Monday was 500 head.

Receipts reported by the Dominion Livestock Branch were: Cattle 1,400; calves 600; hogs 1,350; sheep and lambs 600.

Montreal, May 10—(CP)—Steady prices and light trading prevailed on all sections of Montreal Livestock markets during today's early dealings.

Receipts: cattle, 125; calves, 1,912; hogs 814; sheep and lambs 29.

Produce Prices On Montreal Market

Montreal, May 10 —There was a stronger undertone on local produce markets yesterday as trading started for another week. This slight easiness in cheese prices at the end of last week was overcome, the previous range being restored. The butter market was steady to higher. Egg prices were steady. The weekly egg review of the Federal Department of Agriculture said that not for years has there been so much activity and interest in exports overseas. Receipts were 4,000 cases, 23 boxes of butter.

There were no sales at the Canadian Commodity Exchange. Spot butter, Quebec fresh 92 score, was quoted 25c bid as the day's top. The open spot market for No. 1 was 27 1-4c. Small lots of the retail trade were quoted by jobbers at 28c for solids and 28 1-2c for prints.

The cheese market was 14 3-4c to 15c for No. 1 fresh western colored, the main line arriving.

The egg market graded shipments were selling on spot in used fire cases at 22 1-2c to 21c for A-large, 21-21 1-2c for A-medium, 20-21c for B and 19 to 1-2c to 20c for C.

ROMANTIC STORY OF EARLY BANKING RELATED TO CLUB

Ernest Whelpton Tells of Days of Gold-smiths

MODERN BANKING

Romantic history

"The history of banks and banking", was the most interesting and educational subject afforded the members of the local Y's Men's Club at their weekly meeting in the Y.M.C.A. last evening with Ernest Whelpton, well known employee of the local branch of the Bank of Montreal as the speaker of the evening.

Reviewing the institution of banking, Mr. Whelpton related in review—"The history of banking is traced from the days of the 'goldsmiths' in England in the early sixteenth century. The story is told of how valuables, in the form of gold, silver, etc., were stored with the 'goldsmiths' in receipt for which vouchers were given. The people of England found that these signed vouchers could be passed as exchange for indebtedness incurred by them. The essential necessity was to have the 'goldsmiths' retain the confidence of the people, however, as his ability to keep their valuable goods stored with him was of paramount importance. Experience taught the 'goldsmith' that the highest percentage that he would be called upon to pay out on his signed vouchers of his total holdings and he was quick to realize that this left him 75 to 80 per cent of his clients' valuables which he could in safety loan out. As in banking today, however, he had to be certain that his loans were of such a nature that he could readily turn them back into cash, however.

Foibles Take a Hand

"In the year 1694 we see politics showing its first part in the monetary matters of England, which ultimately saw the original fathers of the Bank of England rise, which subsequently became a clearing house for numerous commercial banks, which had sprung into existence. Having power to alter the discount rates the author reared or encourage borrowing on the part of the commercial banks proved to be the main function of the Bank of England to the ensuing decades. It is interesting to note that since 1881 there has not been a single Canadian bank closed its doors in insolvency. Previous to 1933 in the U.S.A. there were over 5000 banks finding themselves in the embarrassing position of being unable to meet their obligations at the expense of their depositors. In Canada we have ten chartered banks with some 2,970 branches throughout Canada.

Banks and Development

The small branch in the remote parts has the same security and banking facilities and general advance available as the largest main offices.

Of course these advantages have been paramount in opening up our great northern and western mining and lumbering business, so much so that the Canadian banking business of today," concluded Mr. Whelpton as he pointed out, the Bank of Montreal was the first institutied Canadian Bank.

Mr. Whelpton was introduced by Yaman Newton Thompson and after the conclusion of his most enlightening talk, was tendered the sincere thanks of the club by Y'man Homer Thomas. Mr. Whelpton's wide knowledge of banking and the most capable manner in which he have been privileged to hear in some time," assured President Lorne McDougall.

ALBERTA GRANTED LEAVE TO APPEAL

Judgments of Supreme Court Not Satisfactory to Province

London, May 10—(CP Cable)—The Judicial Committee of the Privy Council today granted the Attorney General of Alberta leave to appeal the judgments of the Supreme Court of Canada on the province's "social credit" legislation and newspaper bills.

These measures, sponsored by the Social Credit government and enacted by the Alberta Legislature, were found unconstitutional by the Supreme Court.

Leave to appeal to the Judicial Committee is a formality and their Lordships probably will hear the appeals at the Trinity sittings beginning at the end of the month.

Cyril Radcliffe, K.C., for the Attorney General of Alberta, said the petition raised matters considered of the utmost importance to Canada.

Principal respondent in the appeal is the Attorney General of Canada, who did not oppose the petition.

Lord Thankerton read the petition and said Their Lordships agreed most important issues were involved.

WATERMAN DIES

Frank D. Waterman, who made the fountain pen a necessity of modern life, died recently at his New York home. He was one of the old guard of "self-made" men, leaving school to become a jack-of-all-trades at $2.00 a week. His untiring inventor of the fountain pen, gave him his first opportunity with the business that later became a world-wide organization under his guidance.

90-YR. OLD MAN TELLS OF GOLD RUSH IN NEVADA

Heat So Great That Water Was Thrown Over Miners

LIFE OF A SAILOR

Stirring tales of th good old days of the Nevada Gold Rush and the California mines were recalled last week by George N. MacKenzie, Waupoos nonagenarian, who celebrated his 90th birthday on Friday last.

The aged gentleman recalled vividly the extreme conditions under which miners worked in the Nevada mines. "The heat was such that miners were forced to throw pails of water over each other at intervals in order to attain some degree of comfort" he said. Hardly any clothes were worn by these hardy mining pioneers while below the surface due to allow perspiration to escape.

Bullion Wagons

He recalled the many millionaire operators of those days as bullion wagons coming out of the mines each morning carrying fabulous loads of the shiny metal.

From mining, this fine old gentleman went to the perfect physical health, turned to the Great Lakes for his livelihood. He recalls the good old sailing days, when he served under the late Captain Neilson and also Capts. B. Bongard and the Goodwin brothers. Mr. MacKenzie also turned to the iron horses, working for some time on the line termed the "crookedest railroad in the world" that running from Virginia City to Reno.

Starts to Grow Beard

Leaving Nevada to find his fortune in the American goldfields, Mr. MacKenzie stated that he remained his Waupoos home to a family. Of peculiar construction, with the cellar door at ground level from the first floor reached by a stairway close by, Mr. MacKenzie returned they were housing cattle and pigs in the cellar below the house proper, because, they said, it was so handy.

The owner of a distinguished looking grey beard, the aged gentleman stated that he had not had to run out of razor blades and the beard naturally grew of its own accord."

GOVT HOUSE IN ALBERTA CLOSED

Lieutenant Governor, J. C. Bowen Takes up Residence in Hotel

Edmonton, May 10—(CP)—Lieutenant-Governor J. C. Bowen of Alberta last night established residence in an Edmonton hotel.

Vacating Government House after action by the Alberta Legislature in deciding no provision is necessary for the upkeep of the Lieutenant-Governor's residence, Mr. Bowen said he will make the hotel his temporary residence.

He has learned office space and secretarial assistance will be provided for him in the Legislature for his official duties, along with an allowance for contingent business in his office. Future use of government house has not yet been decided.

The action last Friday signed the order-in-council which authorized closing of Government House.

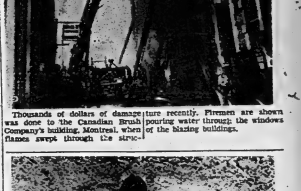
limate judgment of their peoples. They are far too appreciative of human passion and of the monsters in the public mind. On the surface this may seem reasonable. The masses of free people are often wrong, often swept off their feet by party cries, waves of emotion, appeals of demagogues, the film flam of the crafty. Sometimes it looks as if the intelligence of the mob is about that of a 13-year-old child. This is not so.

Reserve of Sanity

"In due time sanity returns. Judgment comes its way and God, to whom whose course of action is guided by the glamour of the moment is the victim of the next swift revulsion of feeling. The mercurial statesman finds faces in the crisis boldly, relying upon the right judgment of God and the people, will do more than win, he will serve his generation.

Politics

"Is other reason why democracies shrink from entrusting past authority is contained in that sinister word 'politics'. What a pity that a great world like this which in itself carries the significance of a noble science of a social order, should be dragged in the mud of opprobrium in which it lies today. What is the reason? Undoubtedly because behind that word is that still more sinister thing which we call political patronage.



"This is the very Frankenstein monster of North America, the evil root of ineptitude and incapacity of government."

Two of The Victims Were Burned to Death in Their Beds

DEFECTIVE CHIMNEY

Three Escape Inferno And Are Cared For by Neighbors

Montreal, May 11—(CP)— Three persons were burned to death early today in a fire at Montee St. Michel, north of Montreal. The victims were Mrs. Etienne Langlois, 36, and two of her daughters, Henriette, 20, and Etiennette, 13. A defective chimney was believed to have set their home afire.

The two girls were burned to death in bed. Their mother's body was found on the floor of her bedroom. Etienne Langlois, the father, was taken to hospital with severe leg and head injuries. Three other occupants of the stone and wood building escaped without injury, or by neighbors.

Fire Chief Bonneville of Montreal North, where Montee St. Michel is located, said Langlois was injured in an attempt to rescue his wife. He was forced to flee to safety as the flames licked the walls about him.

The bodies of the three victims were removed to the morgue for an inquest.

Interior of the two-storey building was gutted and the solid walls withstood the fire and remained standing.

Investigating of Plane Building Urged in British Commons

London, May 11 (AP)—Members of the House of Commons today asked the government for having to go to Canada and the United States to buy aircraft and called for an investigation of charges plane production had failed to keep pace with the rearmament program.

Viscountess Astor, Conservative, declared lack of coordination in the supply of airplanes was "a public scandal".

The issue became a lively one as the House, prepared for a full debate tomorrow on reasons for the lag in air rearmament.

The government was urged to turn to the mass production methods used by Viscount Nuffield in his big Morris automobile plants as a means of stimulating plane manufacture.

Wing-Commander J. A. C. Wright, Conservative, asked the government to approach Lord Nuffield with a view to considering the "potentialities of mass production plants" such as the Morris automobile factories for aircraft construction.

MAXIMUM SAVING BY COOPERATION SET AT 10 MILLION

Chief of C.N.R. Bureau of Economics Testifies Before Committee

'SANE, REASONABLE'

Estimates Take No Account of Public Interest

Ottawa, May 11—(CP)—An independent board to control cooperation between the Canadian National and Canadian Pacific Railways is favored by S. W. Fairweather, chief of the C.N.R. Economic Branch.

"If there is an over-riding interest that transcends the private rights of the C.P.R. and the ordinary business administration of the C.N.R.," he told the Senate Railway Committee yesterday, "there should be some body in a position to say to these railways: 'You are only concerned with lessening the transportation charges in such a way that the two railways are not harmed.'"

Maximum economies possible through cooperation between the Canadian National and Canadian Pacific Railways were placed at $10,000,000 a year today by S. W. Fairweather.

These were "sane and reasonable economies," he said, which might be effected without undue injury to the public or impairment of necessary services. The figure took no account of any compensation for labor displaced on industries which might be forced to migrate due to cooperation of roads.

He was questioned closely by the

AMOY BOMBED

H.M.S. Diana Stands by to Evacuate Britons if Necessary

Shanghai, May 11—(AP)— Chinese reported today 4,000 houses had been damaged and 200 civilians killed and wounded in an air attack on Suchow, base of the huge Chinese army defending the Lunghai railway.

More than 300 bombs were said to have been dropped on the city, leaving sections of it burning. Japanese large stores of military supplies had been ignited.

Warships, warplanes and planes also continued intensive bombardment of Amoy, capital of Fukien Province on the south China coast, where the British gunboat Diana stands by to evacuate Britons if necessary. Fires were reported spreading rapidly through Amoy while foreigners watched in comparative safety from Kulangsu Island nearby.

(Reports from Hong Kong said a Chinese air fleet of at least 50 planes had been transferred suddenly to Canton, south China metropolis, and had struck a Japanese destroyer and destroyed a gasoline depot in raids on Sanchu Island.

250 to Wear Party Shirts In Meeting Held at Kingston

Toronto, May 11—(CP)—Representatives of what he claimed to be a membership of 380,000 throughout the Dominion, 250 uniformed officers of the Canadian Nationalist (Fascist) Party will assemble at Kingston June 26 for a convention, R. Parr, Toronto Fascist leader, announces.

Parr said the purpose of the convention would be to elect a national leader and a national council. The program of the Party has been written, he said, but the convention, he said, preparations for a Federal campaign would be undertaken.

Delegates to the Kingston convention, he said, would be "high ranking officers, both men and women; Provincial leaders, Secretaries-General and Provincial cabinet officers". Expected to attend is the head of the English Fascist Party, R. H. Beamish, and representatives of the American National Conservation, which Parr said had a membership of 3,000,000 throughout the United States.

"We'll be wearing our Party shirts at the Convention," Parr said. "We will be in Tuxedos or white spats, and we will be out for business. When the convention concludes we will come home to Toronto and hold a mass meeting."

BROTHERS BURNED WHEN DRENCHED WITH DISTILLATE

Were Burning Brush When Can of Alcohol Explodes —Slight Hope Held

DROVE TO DOCTOR

Winnipeg, May 11—(CP)—An 83-year-old man is dead and five youths are in hospital with smallchance of recovery after fire razed a residence in Manitoba yesterday. William Schwark was burned fatally in his small cabin at Whitemouth-90 miles northeast of Winnipeg.

The Ochenchuk brothers, Archie, 20, and Walter, 18, struggled to preserve their lives after a can of distillate exploded while they were burning brush on their father's farm near Dominion City, drenching them with blazing liquid.

They tore off flaming clothing but not before their bodies were covered with burns. They staggered to their nearby home and Archie and Walter, a few smouldering rags still clinging to his blistered body, drove three miles to the home of Dr. C. W. McLellan. Archie in the seat beside him, nude except for a pair of rubber boots.

At the doctor's home they were wrapped in sheets and rushed by automobile 65 miles south to hospital at Winnipeg. Archie was most seriously burned but doctors held slight hope for either.

JAPAN'S DOWNFALL AS WORLD POWER MEMBER PREDICTS

A. W. Neill, M.P., Also Predicts Emergence of China as Real Power

DISCUSS BROADCASTING

Ottawa, May 11—(CP)—Downfall of Japan as a world power and the emergence of China as "a strong, virile and united nation" with 400,000,000 potential customers for Canada's products was predicted in the House of Commons last night by A. W. Neill (Ind. Comox-Alberni).

Thwarted by a drafting technicality in presenting a bill that would exclude some 74 per cent of aliens, including the Japanese, Mr. Neill launched a bitter denunciation of the government, charging it was afraid to place the Dominion and Japan as exists against Chinese immigration.

The Neill measure would exclude those over 21 years of age unable to read and write but not familiar with the English language or language of the British relationship.

When Prime Minister Mackenzie King declined to discuss the fact the proper explanation of the bill was not printed on the second page Mr. Speaker Casgrain ruled it out of order.

BRITAIN PROTESTS AIR BOMBING OF BRITISH SHIPS

Claim Made Attacks Unwarranted by Preceding And Should be Probed

QUESTIONS ASKED

By GEORGE HAMBLETON

Canadian Press Staff Writer

London, May 11—(CP Cable)—Great Britain has protested to General Franco over the alleged deliberate air bombing of British ships in Valencia harbor.

Instructions have been sent Sir Robert Hodgson, British agent at Burgos, Richard Butler, Undersecretary for Foreign Affairs, told the House of Commons, to address a strong protest to the Burgos authorities against what appears to the British government to be an entirely unwarrantable procedure and to request an investigation of the incident.

George Strauss, Labor, asked whether, in the face of the fact that captains of British ships allege the bombing was deliberate, the government would inform Premier Mussolini there would be no refitting facilities at the Italian-held unless he gives an undertaking not to attack ships on British ships.

Questions Asked

Mr. Butler said the ethe Hodgson protest has been made to Burgos and an inquiry demanded."

Geoffrey Mander, Liberal, also had questions about Spain. Had the British ambassador, Viscount Mander asked, that Germans were controlling the Fyrenean frontier and other Germans were going by air to Spain.

DRIVER KILLED PASSENGER HURT AS TIRE BURSTS

T. E. Haight of Mount Clare, N. J., Loses Life at Arden

ONE IN HOSPITAL

Captain T. E. Haight, 56, of Mount Clare, New Jersey, was instantly killed when the automobile he was driving turned completely over along Highway No. 2, five miles east of Kinkora at noon today, while Frank Austin, 56, 307 Pulham Ave., Toronto, sustained superficial injuries. The accident was caused by the blowing out of a rear tire on Mr. Haight's car forcing the vehicle into the ditch.

Austin was taken to the Belleville General Hospital where he was admitted shortly after 2.00 p.m. today. Following examinations by Dr. D. S. Hogle, the hospital officials announced Austin had sustained superficial head injuries and minor abrasions, but he was not considered to be in a serious condition.

According to late information reports received from Arden, the Ontario Intelligence Branch officials and two men were proceeding westerly in Mr. Haight's automobile, when without notice a rear tire of the vehicle blew out forcing the car to swerve into the ditch, where it turned completely over, pinning Haight beneath the driving wheel and resulting in his instant death. Austin managed to extricate himself and was rushed to the Belleville hospital by a passing motorist.

Provincial Constable Patterson of Stanbor Lake and Chief C. J. Hayes of Tweed investigated the accident. An inquest is expected to be held.

FASCIST REVOLT QUICKLY CRUSHED BY BRAZIL GOV'T

Unsuccessful Attempt Made to Seize Government Buildings

TRAFFIC PARALYZED

Thirty of Rebels Arrested in The Palace Gardens

Rio De Janeiro, Brazil, May 11 (AP)—President Getulio Vargas, pistol in hand, personally led defenders of Guanabara, presidential palace today as government forces smothered a Fascist revolt against his authoritarian regime.

An undetermined number of rebels were killed or wounded and hundreds were arrested.

The short-lived uprising, inspired by the outlawed Integralist (green-shirt) faction, flared and died in the heart of the capital, where fierce street disorders and futile assaults by public-building marked the ineffective course. Martial law was decreed.

Admiral Arrested

Authorities said Admiral Eduardo Tavares had been arrested as a participant in the revolt.

Police said they had advance knowledge of the Fascist rebellion and said they had even slipped agents into the ranks of the Integralists to follow more closely progress of the scheme to overthrow Vargas and the ruler of Brazil since his seizure of power in his coup of Nov. 10, 1937.

Gun Fight Staged

A gun fight at the presidential palace between besieging Fascists and Vargas' household staff was reported during the height of the abortive rebellion.

The rebels also made an attack on the Pan-American Airways airport near the center of Rio De Janeiro but were beaten off.

RADIOTELEGRAPH ACT AMENDED

Jail Term Planned For Those Not Having Radio Licence

Ottawa, May 11—(CP)— Three new principles are embodied and contained in the Radiotelegraph Act Amendment Bill introduced today by Transport Minister Howe amending the Act. Hon. J. Earl Lawson (Cra. Crest, South) declared in the House of Commons last night.

He said they referred to functions of a radio inspector, possession of a radio and proof of incompetency.

"The radio inspector could enter and search a man's house on the mere information before a magistrate that the man possessed a radio receiving set," Mr. Lawson said. "Under the old Act only a duly sworn police officer or officer of the crown could make the search.

Secondly, the mere possession of an unlicensed radio set, even if it was not in operation, was made an indictable offence.

The trial judge had no alternative but to levy a fine and impose a jail sentence.

Onus of Proof on Accused

Thirdly, if a person were charged with an offence under the act, even if it was an indictable offence, the onus of proving his innocence rested on the accused.

Mr. Lawson described as "deceit-

London Girls Seek Information About Youth Wanting a Bride

Windsor, Ont., May 11—(CP)— One Windsor and two London girls have written police here concerning a London youth who recently asked

Mayor E. S. Wigle of Windsor to assist him in finding a bride. The bride seeker had been left $13,000 by his father, he said, and he was in search of a Protestant stenographer from 19 to 21 years of age as his bride.

Two letters arrived from London girls expressing desire to get in touch with the youth who said he had found difficulty in becoming acquainted with London girls. Yesterday, the mother of a Windsor girl interested received the address of the London-to-be from police authorities.

"I shall be glad to help him find happiness," said one letter in part. "I realize it must be very lonely for a strange city and his being an orphan makes it all the more so."

("The young man had moved to London from Kitchener.)

"Please do not overlook this letter as I am certain I can give the best of references concerning my reputation," said the other London epistle. The writer noted, however, that she was 24 years old,

POSSESSION OF STILL CHARGED BY POLICE

Charged with being found in the possession of a still capable of the manufacture of illicit liquor, Charles Genereaux, Elmvir Township, appeared before C. H. Kerr, Justice of the Peace, at Tweed yesterday and was remanded for one week. Genereaux was arrested by the R.C.M.P. following the discovery of an illicit still on his property yesterday. A boiler, worm, coolers and different pieces of metal were confiscated by the "Mounties", the mash being destroyed. Genereaux was admitted to bail, set at $300, trial being adjourned.

ABUNDANCE OF HAY STILL IN DISTRICT

Current report of the Ontario Department of Agriculture notes that "there is still an abundance of Hay, Timothy and grass hay in Central and Eastern Ontario, but all classes of hay are more or less short in supply in Northern Ontario."

Prices for baled hay loaded on cars are quoted for Timothy at Chesapeake points, $8.50 to $9 per ton; No. 2, $4.50; No. 3 Timothy in the Brockville and Kingston districts, $7 to $9 per ton. Alfalfa in the Kingston area is now selling at $8.50 per ton.

Red-Cross Society Drive Successful

Splendid success is crowning the efforts of the local Red Cross Society in their annual spring campaign for funds, with two hundred dollars of the $1,000 objective having been reached already with some returns to be made.

Mr. I. G. Hefley, president of the Belleville society, announced that the campaign compares most favorably with that of last year, indications are that the results will be even better.

The response of the citizens has been keenly appreciated by the society whose workers found ready access for the most part greatly in sympathy with the work and anxious to assist in its endeavours.

Those who have not made their contribution have not been reached by the canvassers will assist in the Red Cross progress by sending donations direct to the campaign treasurer, Mr. W. Inglis, 37 Campbell street.

Police Blotter

Local authorities investigated the theft of two pair of rubbers and a pair of rain shoes from the home of Mr. H. Dampbire, 136 East Dundas street early last morning. Mr. Dampbire informed the police he had placed the rubbers and shoes on the verandah the night previous, and discovered the articles missing when he returned for them later.

A lady motorist was apprehended by Traffic Officer Doug Ellis recording the speed limit yesterday. Ellis reported the female driver was "clocked" at 39 miles per hour over city streets. Charges will be preferred by City and provincial traffic police are rigidly enforcing the various motor vehicle laws especially pertaining to defective brakes, headlamps and speeding, it was further announced today.

The rear entrance door leading into the local A. and P. store was forced open by local police patrolling their beats last night. Entrance was gained, but the safe had inadvertently left unlocked and no entrance had been effected.

Eleven transients were afforded warm sleeping quarters at the police station last night.

PATENTS SECURED TO TRAP DRIVERS WHO HIT AND RUN
Alderman B. F. Jennings Granted Canadian And U.S. Patents
BY CUTTING IGNITION
Inventor Claims Device Will Prevent Fire In Car, Plans Crashes
Designed to trap hit-and-run drivers and so lead to the reduction of hit-and-run driving, to prevent the outbreak of fires when an automobile is wrecked or is in a collision, to prevent fire breaking out in an airplane, in a crash and to several uses in many mechanical and electrical devices, a mechanism known as an "impact ignition-breaker" has been patented by Alderman Burton F. Jennings of this city.
The "impact ignition-breaker" is attached to the ignition by coil which are attached to an auxiliary bumper or other places in the car likely to be struck. On the impact of an accident, the plunger in the circuit is released against the circuit, thereby breaking it.
The American patent No 2105286 was dated January 11th, 1938; it had been entered February 21st, 1936. The Canadian patent No. 372606 was granted May 3rd., 1938.
"It was during the month containing some years ago, I first thought of some device which would stop hitand-run driving. I found that the ignition was one of the points to attack and I developed ignition as well in my mind," Consulting an experienced mechanic, the motor car business in Rochester, a relative, he went on with his idea. He took out the first patent with Attorney R. A. Cameron of the firm of Cameron, Cameron & Belleau, and then he took the necessary steps through Mr. Harold C. Sligo, Patent Office Agent, of Toronto, solicitor, who entered the patent at Washington and Ottawa.

The Plan

The plan is "to provide a circuit breaker which will be found effective for use in connection with the vehicles when a plurality of the same ("members") are placed in predetermined positions such as two adjacent the front and two adjacent the rear of the automobile and which would, under ordinary circumstances have one or more members struck during the act of plunger or struck during an impact upon the automobile accidentally or otherwise striking a person or object, and which would automatically signal a hit-and-run accident," so read the Canadian patent.
The device would enable the inventor found what he claims will stop a very serious fire starting in airplanes to prevent their taking fire. In all there are, he claims, four important features today, about thirty uses to which this device can be put, but the most equally important except as for saving of life, which is the chief one.

Object of Device

In a few words the device is that which will cut the ignition of one which can readily be installed. The device would be used on cars on the highways it would be necessary that the use become obligatory, as slipped into the already held conversation with Mr. J. F. Pirie, Chief Inspector of the Motor Vehicles Branch of the Highways Department of Ontario and will in a day or two go over the possibilities of the principle in use on airplanes with the R.C.A.F. Force authorities, he stated today.

Object of Device

The Canadian patent states that the object is "to provide a circuit breaker which will break the ignition circuit of an automobile and thus render the possibilities of fire hazard upon the automobile being in an accident or collision in which the impact causes the plunger of one or other of the circuit breakers to be actuated to open the breaking position without breaking of seals.

"The circuit breaker is disclosed in the application may be used to eliminate fire hazards upon an airplane crashing, or the circuit breaker may be used in many different ways and for several different mechanical or electrical equipments. It is possible to provide a circuit breaker which normally in operative position but which may be temporarily moved to inoperative position upon actuation of the plunger automatically or manually or automatically on account of excessive power."

The device circuit-breaker can be, Mr. Jennings claims, made of any size to suit the needs for various cars and for use in other applications. In its application he has full coverage on the circuit breaker. The United States patent is allowed for the principle that the circuit breaker is destructible. The principle includes the use of seals on bolts so that there can be no interreference without being shown.

The principle as applied to the automobile would be by the use of the installation in the channels, leading to the plunger to cut the circuit, or as Mr. Jennings explains it by use of a supplementary bumper, the points or "members" being set at the ends. The breaker could be arranged also on the running board or at the rear to act in the protection of cars from sideswipes or cars bumping into another. Mr. Jennings claims that the points could be so adjusted as to cut off the ignition by the slightest impact.

Improvements on "Breakers"
According to the words of the Canadian patent, "the invention relates to improvements in an electric circuit breaker and the principal object is to provide a construction of simple form, which can easily be made at a reasonable cost and which can be installed in a circuit at present in use or in a carburetor with new circuits as being built."

Growth of Canada

Any newspaper editor or publisher studying the wealth of statistics contained in the latest Intelligence Canadian Publications, published annually by A. McKim Limited, Advertising Agency, is bound to experience a feeling of pride as he realizes how swiftly the Dominion has kept pace with the growth of the country.

Just issued, the 1938 edition of this handbook—the 31st of the series—presents in concise form the most up-to-date data on every periodical published in Canada. Because of its contents, newspaper advertisers will find McKim's Directory an invaluable aid to the factual study of media. In addition to essential information about publications, it contains valuable market data about the particular cities and towns where publications are located.

Beneath all this statistical surface, there exists a living, growing substratum, that will prove beneficial to the advertiser. The character of each publication; its purposes and policies; the nature and degree of its reader interest; the subtle differences, intangible but real, which in the individual we call "personality"—these are but a few of the essential details of circulation, age, deadline and typography. The men behind the publications, their individuality and ideals, their stature and substance, are also part of the picture. All these things lie below the visible skin of a publication. They are the heart, lungs, life blood of a periodical, and they determine its precise suitability for the task it must perform for an advertiser.

Enquiries concerning the directory should be addressed to any of the six McKim Advertising Agency offices, at Montreal, Toronto, Winnipeg, Vancouver, Halifax and London (England).

Struggle of Church and State In Germany Vividly Described

Mrs. John I. Davidson of Toronto Delivers Address

OFFICERS ELECTED

Mrs. John J. Davidson of Toronto, one of Canada's foremost speakers on current events, addressed the Women's Canadian Club at their annual meeting evening when she discussed, brilliantly, the struggle of the Church and State in Germany.

The business of the annual meeting was completed before the address of the evening. Mrs. C. E. Argue, first vice-president, was in the chair and read a letter from Mrs. G. G. Wright, the president, covering to the members and officers her appreciation of their help, loyalty and co-operation which had made the year so successful.

Mrs. H. O. Trudale read the minutes of the last annual meeting and also the financial statement, which showed a favourable balance. One hundred and twenty members were registered last year.

In her report of the activities of the Club last year, Mrs. Trudale gave an interesting resume of the various meetings. There were ten lectures last season delivered by Thomas Watkins, John I. Davidson, Edward Shackleton, Miss Cornelia Von Gunna, Mrs. Madge Macbeth, Harold Rose, Miss Ethel Kirk Grayson, Dr. Campbell and W. B. Officers and meetings of the executive were held during the year.

The report of the nominating committee was given by Mrs. Geo. H. Norman, the retiring being the same as last year:

President—Mrs. G. G. Wright.
First Vice-President—Mrs. C. E. Argue.
Second Vice-President—Mrs. E. A. Geen.
Secretary—Mrs. H. O. Trudale.
Assistant Secretary—Mrs. A. R. Cameron.
Treasurer—Mrs. A. E. MacColl.
Entertainment Committee—Mrs. J. Bateman, Mrs. F. M. McKeown, Mrs. W. H. Pinkie.
Executive Committee—Mrs. J. W. Elmer, Mrs. Ross Gibson, Mrs. P. Wills, Mrs. O. A. Marshall, Mrs. E. M. Marshall, Mrs. W. H. Hall, Mrs. W. N. Ponton, Miss Anna Hurley, Mrs. E. N. Baker, Mrs. F. D. Anderson, Mrs. George H. Norman, Mrs. A. Kerr, Mrs. R. L. Brown, Miss Catherine Ford, Mrs. O. S. Cronk, Mrs. H. O. Trudale.

Thanks of Club Extended
Mrs. J. W. Elmer moved that the sincere appreciation of the club for the services of the officers and executive who had worked so arduously during the year, to the press for notices of the meetings and to the Boards of Christ Church, St. Thomas, Bridge Street and St. Andrew's Churches for the courtesy shown the club during the past year.

The secretary read a communication announcing a Conference arranged by the Association of Canadian Clubs, which will be held in Montreal on June 2nd and 3rd. One delegate and as many members as possible are invited to attend, and following the "conference sessions will enjoy a trip to Quebec City, where they will be entertained at breakfast and luncheon. Mrs. G. G. Wright was appointed delegate, with power to choose an alternate if she is unable to attend.

Mrs. Davidson, whose visit to the club last fall is remembered with keen appreciation by the members, delivered another striking address on a topic of current interest, "The Struggle of the Church and State in Germany." History has shown that at times the two institutions, we call the Church and the State, have been in bitter strife. At times the Church has exerted greater power and usurped it; at other times the State has overstepped the limit of its sphere and violated its rights. The issue is a struggle between the spirit and the body. In Germany Martin Niemoeller became the focus of the State struggle, shedding light on its every imaginable angle.

Nazis Described Precursors
Mrs. Davidson described the precursors of the Nazis in the persecute of Aztlan in Germany. These included those who had the conviction that other religions are very fine, and Christianity is in no way unique, which robbed it of its power and drive; people vaguely worshipping two slogans, science and progress; the school of people worshipping humanity, indefinitely, and worshipping one particular brand of humanity, the outcome of which was the nonsensical of nationalism.

The war nationalized God as well as the State, and in the aftermath of the war we turn to Germany's attitude. Nationalism gives birth to humility, or uncertainty that they are right. Hitler felt that right it was necessary to implant the idea that Germany was a virile young hopeful group have unique qualities because of the peculiar situation. They were unified by a leader, and by the whipped into a frenzy of anger against all who were not Nazis. Hitler reached pinnacle of the state, his law was everybody's law.

God Is Supreme
Speaking of the Christianity's principles, that God is supreme, that the individual personality is of infinite value, that God should be recognized the kingdom within and the kingdom without, the State however required utter loyalty and obedience. "Many Christians were convinced of the rights of the Nazi State, but were unwilling to compromise their conscience to be right beside it," it said.

The state steadily encroached on the domain of the church, and only a small group headed by Martin Niemoeller dared to withstand. Niemoeller was put in confinement his answer was "Here stand I". The story of his imprisonment, his acquittal, his re-arrest and finally his exile to a concentration camp, his continued confinement.

Not only Germany but other nations were mentioned by the way in which they are going. Is the Christian era coming to a close? Was it every individual and community doing what is right? Christian personality which is the basis of the Christian ideal?

FLAKES OF SNOW ACCOMPANY COLD

Chill Winds Blow Out of West Over The District

Cold winds from the west which resulted in a chilly drop in temperatures in this district during the past two days combined also to create a lot of the season snow flurry Belleville in the northwestern section shortly before eleven o'clock this morning. The flakes, however, melted as rapidly as they drifted down.

As yet market gardeners report no loss or damage to tender outside growing products of the district, though some worry has been caused by the prevalence of near freezing temperatures. "We are on the watch and pray for rain," predicted ground-frosts expected, and are taking what precautions we can." It was stated at the home of T. W. Hamford, one of the heavier growers.

Commencement Exercises At Tweed High School

Tweed—The annual High School Commencement Exercises were held on Friday, May 6th, at the High School. In the absence of Mr. W. E. Tummon, chairman of the Board, Dr. J. A. Thompson, 1931 chairman, had charge of the programme which was given in one of the classrooms.

The exercises were featured this year by an address by Mr. P. C. MacLaurin, M. A., Principal of Belleville Collegiate Institute. A splendid address was given by David Price, one of the Senior boys on "Butterflies." The collection of which is his favorite hobby. He detailed the various methods of catching, killing and mounting butterflies, moths and other insects. In the course of his talk he showed not only specimens commonly found in Canada and United States, but others which he obtained from England, South America, Sierra Leone and other countries.

An interesting drill was given by the following Junior girls: Mary Kleinsteuber, Helen Orr, Lois Wilkinson, Phyllis Dyer, Dorothy McConnachie, Donna Scott, Pauline Kelly and Doreen Pobert.

Those taking part in the Country Dance were: Jean Lamberton, Marion Tummon, Elaine Beatty, Gladys McGuire, Anna Kleinsteuber, Marjorie Tummon, Ann Thompson, Ruth Cordy, Marion Varty and Marie Causey.

The physical culture class gave a splendid exhibition of pyramid building. Those who took part were: Anna Kleinsteuber, Ann Thompson, Ruth Nicholson, Marion Tummon, Marjorie Tummon, Ruth Cordy, Marjorie Jeffrey, Marion Varty and Wilma Meraw.

The presentation was greatly enjoyed. The girls who took part were in Dutch costumes and included Helena Elliott, Mary Kleinsteuber, Ruby Jones, Lucille Lee, Vera Gunning, Margaret Elliott, June Whalen and Georgina Schwager.

Miss Ana Thompson, president of the Students' Council, read an interesting account of the early history of Tweed. This was followed by a short history of Tweed High School, by James Gaboury. Ruth Nicholson read several humorous poems composed by the students. Thos. Moffat, Jr., read the Spoon Review. Anna Kleinsteuber concluded "The Sidelines" with a number of jokes.

The following medals and prizes were presented:

Upper School Medal — Hilda Meraw, presented by S. R. Curry.

Senior Middle School Medal — Delma Pipe, presented by Dr. J. A. Thompson.

Junior Middle School Medal — Anna Kleinsteuber, presented by James Ryan.

First Second Form Scholarship — Mae Gaffney, presented by T. N. Beatty.

Second Second Form Scholarship — Gladys McGuire, presented by W. H. Sayers.

Staff Prizes in Upper School Subjects—English, Nora Rashotte; History, Alice Nicholson; Mathematics, Helen Casaley; Biology, Lillian Wood; Latin, Delma Pipe; French, Cecilia Doran; presented by Miss M. Grindell, B.A.

Graduation Diplomas presented by Inspector A. W. McGuire, B.A.—Helen Casaley, Albert Thompson, Enid Connor, Cecilia Doran, James Lajoie, Stanley Laffman, Angelique Meraw, Hilda Meraw, Gertrude Moffat, Alice Nicholson, Edith Thompson. In presenting the diplomas Mr. McGuire said that the boy, and girls should be congratulated on their success, but that the teachers should not be forgotten, as it is their faithful and efficient work that makes possible the success of the boys and girls, and their work is sincerely appreciated by the parents.

The chairman drew attention to the fact that all the medals and prizes were won by the girls. Boys were represented only in those field day competitions which were closed to the girls.

The following Field Day Championship prizes were presented:

Senior Girls — Ana Thompson, presented by Mrs. W. S. Tummon.

Intermediate Girls — Marion Tummon, presented by Miss M. M. Hammett, B. A.

Junior Girls — Wilma Meraw, presented by T. J. Calnan.

Senior Boys — Ronald Sayers, presented by T. N. Beatty.

Intermediate Boys—Gerald Laffman, presented by Reeve W. H. Sayers.

Junior Boys — Gerald Bailey, presented by S. H. Connor.

Graduation High School Champion Crests for Girls' Softball were presented by Miss K. Jordan, B. Sc., Ana Thompson, captain; Peg Rashotte, Marzare; Laffman, Marjorie Tummon, Marion Tummon, Isobel Sills, Grace Stewart, Grace Grills, Monica Hitsman, Connie Morrison, Audrey Scott, Anna Kleinsteuber.

During the programme the Hyp School quartette, composed of Barbara Hyndman, Ruth Foster, Enid Connor and Marion Tummon, sang "That Old Refrain." Miss Lois Richardson played the accompaniments.

In his very able address on the theme, "My Real Principal Mac-Laurin paid tribute to parents and teachers who helped to build the road along which all must travel. Memory goes back to some road in one's early days which has made a great impression upon life, the details of which remain vivid. The word "road" is a very old one. The old Roman roads were built for permanency; many of them are in use today. The Roman engineers were good road-builders.

In the building of "My Road," there are three sets of engineers. The mother is the first, and she cares for the infant in his tender years. She is the best of engineers who sets the boy's or girl's feet on the road to an honorable and successful career preparing him for the next stage.

The teacher as the next engineer now takes charge of the boy or girl. Oftentimes very little credit is given to this second line of engineers engaged in building that road in the elementary school, the secondary school and later schools or colleges.

The third engineer is oneself. The stage is now reached where each one must plan and build his own road, with care for a good foundation, surface and straight course. He must develop himself as others travel along the same road for a time. The most important thing in building a road is that one will put happiness into the lives of others as well as himself. To achieve genuine success on this road, one's acts must be characterized by persistence and determination. One must select the ways in which one will be happy and will do his best in.

Shannonville

Shannonville — The Rev. W. H. Craig delivered an inspiring address in the Anglican Church on Sunday night when a very large congregation was in attendance. During the service special hymns were sung and a reading given by Miss Ina Liddle. The following is a short summary of the address given by Rev. Craig.

In his opening remarks the Rev. Craig declared that often we allowed the interest of trade to become more important than that of the home we are selling out to the lowest bidder which he added, never should be done. The discipline of the home is more important than the discipline of the Government and is essential to good government. The sanctity of the home is more important than all the questions which centre around racial integrity. If homes were Christian many of these problems would not arise.

The devotion of the home is a finer thing than philanthropy is as much as personality is finer than institutionalism. If homes were Christian there would be no use for the institutions that had spread over the country for our wayward brothers and sisters. The interests of the Christian home are higher than the interests of the school although in a measure they are identical and should exist in perfect sympathy and be controlled by the ideals of God. The revival of the home is more important than the revival of the church; the home is older in God's plan. The first thing a child should learn is submission; the secret of true self-control is lodged in the thoughts of being controlled. Religion puts the home on a basis of sincerity and earnestness. "No child has a fair chance who is not taught something of the truth which is beyond the rules of life." Many people believe that if they leave their children enough money to be independent that will be the best thing they can do which may be the worst added Mr. Craig sometimes earthly possessions become a curse. "Has anyone ever known Christianity to be a curse or a hindrance?"

"It is sometimes said that business is business and there is no room for sentiment in it, be that as it may," added Mr. Craig, "there is no doubt whatever that the man who is straightforward and honest in all his dealings and whose word can be depended upon is the man who exercises a great influence upon others". In closing, the Rev. Craig declared, "it does require a man and all of a man to be a Christian".

Harry Greatrix

The community was deeply shocked to hear of the sudden death of Mr. Harry Greatrix, aged 68, which occurred very suddenly in the Belleville General Hospital on Friday afternoon.

Mr. Greatrix was a popular resident, always willing to share that which he had with his less fortunate brother, and his ever-present smile made him many friends who cannot aptly express their sympathy to the grief-stricken family.

Fraternally Mr. Greatrix was a member of the Shannonville Orange Lodge and had always played a prominent part in the activities of the Lodge. Mr. Greatrix was a member of the Front Road United Church and was a regular attender at church services.

The funeral service, which was held at his home on Monday afternoon, was conducted by the Rev. W. T. Keough and the Rev. R. E. Newman of Holloway Street Church, Belleville. The Shannonville Orange Lodge took part in the service and formed a guard of honor for their departed Brother, and also acted as flower-bearers. The members of the Lodge marched past the casket of their departed Brother at his home to have a last glimpse of one that they had known so well. At the graveside the Rev. Douglas Cook, Tweed, read the Scripture while the members of the lodge formed in a circle around the grave of the deceased. The master of the lodge, Bruce Sherman, and the chaplain of the lodge, the Rev. A. E. Pepper, took part in the service.

Left to mourn his loss are his wife, the former Miss Myrtle Fuller three daughters, Ruth, Edith, and Mildred, two boys, Kenneth, and George, and his father, Mr. George Greatrix. His mother predeceased him several years ago.

Pall-bearers were brother Orangemen and were: Everett Sprattan, Sam Geddes, Fred Melburn, Fred Mitchell, Corey Mitchell, Claude Clarke.

A large number attended the miscellaneous shower held in the Melrose Town Hall on Monday night in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Seeley (nee Mary MacMunn, of Mountain Grove). During the evening dancing was enjoyed for which music was furnished by Edwin MacMunn on his violin, and Norman Spencer and Blake Cook on their Hawaiian guitars. At the midnight hour a presentation address was read by Miss Janet Grant to which appropriate replies were given by Mr. and Mrs. Seeley. Following the address a delicious lunch was served, after which dancing was again enjoyed. The address was as follows:

Shannonville, Ont.,
May 9, 1938

Dear Lawrence and Mary:

In honor of your recent marriage your friends are here tonight to wish you "Bon Voyage" on your journey through life together. We hope it will be a long journey, one filled with many happy hours to make up for the inevitable worries and troubles which come in any person's life.

To you, Mary, we offer our most hearty welcome as a newcomer into our community. We hope you will like the vicinity in which you are starting your married life.

Lawrence, we congratulate you on taking this step in your life and trust that your life here will be all the more enriched by the presence of your wife.

You have cast your lots together
We kneel down through life
And rough or smooth
May be the pathway
Of dear husband and loving wife.

Never meet your dear companion
With a frown upon your face
Should your work
Have cares and worries
Keep them in their proper place.

Now tonight we come together
For a social time together
Just to wish you joy and comfort,
Happy times your whole life through.

May these little gifts
We bring you
Prove of future use to you
And remind you of the neighbors
Gathered here to meet with you.

Signed on behalf of your friends
Harold Fox
Ray Cook
Bert Rose.

Among those that attended the funeral of Mr. Harry Greatrix from distant points were; Mr. and Mrs. Leslie Stevens, Mr. William Wilson and Mr. Ross Fuller, of Oshawa, and Colonel and Mrs. H. W. Powell, of Burwash.

WAKE UP YOUR LIVER BILE—

And You'll Jump Out of Bed in the Morning Ready to Go

The flow should pour out two pounds of liquid bile into your digestive tract daily. If this bile is not flowing freely, your food doesn't digest. It just decays in the bowels. Gas blows up your stomach. You get constipation. Harmful poisons go to your head. You feel sour, sunk and like the world looks punk.

To get these bile movements doesn't take as much as to get the bowels moved. Merely get on the liver as well. It takes those good, old Carter's Little Liver Pills to get these two pounds of bile flowing freely into the bowels. Then you know it. Gentle, but gentle; they make the bile flow freely. They do the work of calomel but have no calomel or mercury in them. Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills by name. Refuse substitutes. Only 25c at all druggists.

THE DUKE OF DEVONSHIRE

Canadians mourn the death of the Duke of Devonshire, who two decades ago was Governor-General of the Dominion of Canada. During his tenure of office he paid among his many visits to various parts of Canada a visit to Belleville, where he was entertained when the city gave itself over to the celebration of the occasion.

One of the great landowners of England and a man active in public life, the Duke was representative of the spirit of Britain. He had served in the British Commons for years before becoming the ninth Duke, and had served in many capacities in the service of his country. He knew Canada in the pressing time of the war years and of the years immediately following.

Canada has been fortunate in the representatives of the King who have been viceroys and among the great names which will be forever remembered in Canadian history will be that of the Duke of Devonshire. In Britain he will also be remembered as an outstanding member of the Cabinet and the holder of many posts in his long and useful life.

CHINA'S LONG LIFE

The vaunted longest-lived dynasty, that of Japan, has not through history counted for as great a measure of importance to the world as the story which China can tell. When Japan was unknown to the world at large before the time of Christ, China was one of the greatest empires with a greater record of service for the people, ever than the Roman Empire at its greatest extent, according to some historians. China with its vast numbers of people set in a land suitable to the growth of population, had unlimited power and was the dominant empire in Asia and it is stated that she even surpassed Rome at her mightiest, in extent of possessions, which were made thoroughly Chinese, whereas Rome never was able quite to Romanize the world she took. Ancient Rome was too busy with her soldiery and her wealth, two of the greatest factors for destruction of any power or nation. China did not lay stress on wealth and militarism, and two thousand years ago was advanced in her legislation for the people, not largely for the rich as was the case in Rome, according to H. G. Wells. China too created a vast native literature which has come down to this day, she left philosophers and religious leaders whose influence is mighty even yet. Historians agree that ancient Rome was reddish in her destruction of Carthage and it is urged even today that Rome erred greatly in destroying a naval power like that of Carthage, which might have been an ally in fending off the northern Franks who gave old Rome her death blow in the Mediterranean. China has none of these blunders to account for.

The rise of the strength of the Chinese in their resistance to Japan recalls a statement of a historian that China has always conquered and swallowed her conquerors. News from the East shows the militarized western world and the militarized nation of great possibilities in manpower resisting and beating back for a time at least the highly efficient military machine of the Japanese.

THE ESSENCE OF GOODNESS

A viewpoint which is very prevalent among intellectuals that there can be goodness without God, was condemned by the Rev. Dr. Harry Emerson Fosdick in Riverside Church, New York, on Sunday, as "thin and superficial." He declared that this attitude rested on a thin idea of what goodness is. "If by goodness we mean minor moralities, that we should not cheat at cards, rob our neighbors' hen-roosts or be tankind to our friends, we do not consciously need God to achieve that," he said, because such moral details do not touch the garment's hem of the good life.

But he adds, "show us a man in his trouble for example; show us how he handles that! Not embittered by it not growing cynical because of it, not even becoming stoical under it, but rising above it and making all things work together for good —there is the severest profoundest test of a good life. If you can imagine that kind of life lived with no deep-seated faith as to the kind of universe this is with, with meaning at the heart of it and a power not ourselves that makes for righteousness behind it, your imagination passes mine."
